BOARD OF TRADE

At the meeting of the Board of Trade last Friday night the following officers were elected for the coming year. President, J. A. Sydenstricker vice-president, S. B. Wallace, treasurer, A. S. Overholt, Directors, Z. S. Smith, Ira D. Brill, Dr. M. S. Wilson and Calvin W. Price.

The nominating committee for the ensuing year is composed of F. M Sydnor, W. A. Bratton, S. N. Hench, O. H. Kee and J. W. Milligan.

On Monday night the Board of Directors held their meeting and elected Geo. W. Sharp to succeed himself as Secretary, and the President appointed the following committees:

Membership—M. C. Kincaid, Paul Overholt, Harry Byers and C. K. Livesay.

Municipal—F. M. Sydnor, S. N. Hench, J. W. Milligan, R. C. May.

Publicity—S. H. Sharp, O. H. Kee C. C. Clendennen, G D. McNeill.

Business Development—W. A. Bratton, Dr. Solter, Hubert Echols, G. W. Sharp.

Good Roads—P. T. Ward J. L. Baxter, Dr. N. R. Price, C. P. Brown

Insurance—W. J. Yeager, E. H. Wade, A. P. Edgar, J. E. Buckley.

Agriculture—F. R. Hill, Z. S. Smith, B. B. Williams, E. M. Richardson.

Regular meetings of the Board of Directors will be held on Tuesday night before the first Friday night of each month. The later is the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade.

The Board of Trade is still functioning. The object is to make Marlinton a better town in which to live and raise a family, and incidentally make it bigger as well. Every man owes it to the community that supports him to speak a good word for it at least. If you can't boost, move out.

An effort will be made to get at least five hundred members for the coming year. The annual dues are but $1.00 If you believe in Marlinton, show it a dollar's worth.

IN MEMORY

Calvin Thomas Price, born at Marlinton, October 22, 1911, went to God December 18, 1919.

Across the river, not a sparkling stream,
Not sunshine bright or safe as infant dream;
But cold and dark, tumultuous and dread,
Across that river, he, whom we call dead!

Yet, is it so? When Jesus took our boy,
And bore him hence away to scenes of joy,
Methinks He bore him high above the tide,
Clasped close to Him, the little boy that died.

Father William B. Blake has turned the West Virginia News over to his sons, William B. Jr., and Captain Ed Blake, and is going to take a year's vacation. This paper expects the old veteran on the upper waters of the Greenbrier to wet a line with us the coming fishing season. He has left so much undone along this line in his busy life that we fear it will take him more than a year to catch up. For fifty-one years Mr. Blake has edited papers, made a living and raised a family out of a printing office. Thirty-two years of this time he has been in Ronceverte. Duing it all he has maintained his christiad integrity. How could he, how could he do it.

Outlaws put a bomb in front of Constable Stalnaker's residence in the city of Elkins, and blew off the front of that house and also greatly damaged the house on the opposite side of the street and shook up the town generally. There was no one hurt. Bootleggers are suspected as Mr. Stalnaker has been very active in enforcing the prohibition laws.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Howard, at Buckeye, January 7, 1920 a son.

THE CENSUS

The Fourteenth Decennial Census of the United States is on!

Under the immediate direction of VERNON C. CHAMPE, Supervisor of the 6th census district of West Virginia, census enumerators will call at every dwelling house in this cammunity to secure the information necessary to fill out the questions contained on the printed census schedules.

Questions covering the following points will be asked of every person in the United States:

Sex;

Color or race;

Age at last birthday;

Whether single, married, widowed or divorced;

Birthplace of person enumerated and birthplaces of father and mother, giving names of both country and province if foreign born;

Occupation, specifying trade or profession, also industry in which employed;

Whether attending school;

Whether able to read,

Whether able to write;

Whether able to speak English;

Whether home is owned or rented, and if owned whether home is free of encumbrance or is mortgaged;

Persons of foreign birth will be asked questions concerning these additional points:

Year of immigration to the United States;

Whether naturalized, and if so the year of naturalization;

Mother tongue or native language.

Every farm Visited

Census enumerators also will call at every farm in this community to secure the information necessary to fill out the questions contained on the agriculture schedule.

Each farmer will be asked questions concerning the acreage and value of his farm; whether he owns, rents or partly owns and partly rents the land he farms; the value of the buildings, machinery and implements belonging to his farm; the quantity of all crops raised on his farm during the year 1919; and many other questions which will cover all possible farm operations.

An absolutely accurate and complete census vitally concerns the welfare of this community and of every person living in it. The official population for the next ten years will be determined by the census of 1920.

Be ready with your answers when the census man calls at your house.

HUNTERSVILLE CIRCUIT

M. E. Church, South
Rev. Elmer C. Sloane, Pastor.

The meeting closed at the Springs Sunday night. There was good attendance every night, and we feel that much good was accomplished. The immediate results was seven professions of faith in the saving power of our Lord and Master.

The pastor will preach Sunday January 11, at Mt. Vernon, (Frost) 10:30 a. m., Mt. Carmel (Sunset) 2:45 p. m., Minnehaha Springs 7:15 p. m. The public is cordially invited to these services.

A Mrs. Whitmire fell on the ice at the railroad station while getting on the train Friday afternoon, and suffered a badly broken wrist.

EDUCATIONAL JOTTINGS

BY COUNTY SUPT. G. D. MCNEILL

The school-law enacted by the last legislature changed the method of of laying levies. This made it necessary that the County Financial Secretary install a new system of accounting. The Department of Schools was not able to furnish the necessary blank books until November 15th, so that instead of visiting schools, the editor has employed himself at bookkeeping for the past six weeks.

Approximately $125 000 will be spent on the schools this year. Of this amount about $30,000 will be put into new buildings. A like amount will go to the improvement and maintenance of the three high schools.

Ten graded schools of two or more rooms are maintained at an average cost of about $1000 each. Approximately $60,000 will be required to maintain the one room rural school, of which we have about one hundred and twenty in the County.

Where schools are in session the attendance has been excellent. Not withstanding the increase in teachers' salaries, and the increased cost of fuel, etc, the 'per capita' cost has not increased, the increased attendance having neutralized the cost of maintenance—the cost of maintaining a ten-pupil school is just as great as the cost of maintaining a twenty-pupil school.

Some teachers whose schools close early wish to teach a second term. Some twelve or fifteen schools have not secured teachers. If the trustees of those schools will advise the County Superintendent as to the length of term wanted, the probable cost of board, etc he will be able to arrange for a teacher within the next few weeks. If any particular neighborhood desires a term less than six-months, this should be arranged with the teacher and specified in the contract. Conditions differ in the various neighborhoods. Some schools where most of the pupils are small might be continued until June, but in other schools where the pupils are large enough to be of material assistance in farming, schools should close by May 1st. In case there is a sufficient number of small children to maintain a good school arrangements may be made after April 15th to excuse the large pupils when they are actually engaged at home in farm work.

The first teacher's Uniform Examination will be held April 1-2. Applications for renewal may be made at that examination. First-grade certificates require examination on reading-circle books for second renewal. First and third renewals require no examination.

Some teachers fail to sign the Monthly Report Cards sent to County Supt. The information given on one of these cards is of little value, unless it is known whence the card came.

It is noted with satisfaction that many schools are holding "Community Meetings." Almost without exception, these schools show a good attendance report. The schools reporting no meetings, no visits by teacher to patrons and no visits by patrons to school, usually show poor attendance. Generally, when such a school is visited, it is found to be about fifty per cent effective and rapidly "going to seed"

It is probable that the Teachers' Examination April 1-2 will be held at Cass.

Town Council was in session on Monday night. Accounts audited and allowed, and returns of the municipal electron canvassed. E. H. Wade and S. L. Hogsett appointed committee to make settlement with sergeant, Dr. J. M. Yeager paid $25 salary a s health officer, and D. W. Williams $25.00 as fire chief.

The following officers were installed by Marlinton Lodge A. F. and A. M. on Tuesday night for the ensuing year: Worshipful Master, W. H. Evans; Senior Warden, O. H. Kee; Junior Warden, Dr. C. S. Kramer; Secretary, J. E. Buckley, Treasurer, H. L. Byers, Senior Deacon, James Biggs; Junior Deacon. Paul Overholt, Stewards, C. C. Waugh and J. M. Bear; Tyler, C. E. Denison.

At the town election last Thursday the following officers were elected: Mayor, F. R. Hill; recorder, S. J. Rexrode; Councilmen, Dr. N. R. Price; Dr. M. S. Wilson, O. H. Kee, F. W. Simmons, D. W. Williams.

Edgar Bryan Pownall, of Romney, was stabbed and killed in Cumberland last week by Mrs. Mervin Uhl, following Pownall's refusal of the woman's request to tell her husband that it was not her fault that he had been paying her attention. Pownall was the son of Thomas J. Pownall, and was about 23 years of age. His father was at one time in the employ of the Union Tanning Company and paid frequent visits to Marlinton.

Dr. Mary R. Fleming landed in New York last week, after four years or more in Persia as a missionary. She is now in Highland county. The day before she landed in New York she received the news by wireless of her father's death, which occurred three months before.

MARLINTON MILLING CO.

GOOD ROADS ORGANIZATION

On Tuesday a meeting of citizesn of Pocahontas County was held at the court house for the purpose of organizing the Pocahontas County Goood Roads Federation. The meeting was presided over by Dr. U. H. Hannah, and G W. Sharp was secretary.

A permanent organization was effected with the following officers:

President County Federation:—Dr. H. C. Solter.

Vice President: G. W. Sharp.

Secretary and Treasurer: C. W. Price.

Greenbank District

District Chairman: J. W. Goodsell

District Committeemen: R. S. Hickman, and Uriah Hevener.

Huntersville District

District Chairman: H. M. Lockridge

District Committeemen; W. H. Barlow, and G. M. Sharp.

Edray District

District Chairman: G. D. McNeil,

District Committeemen: I. B. Bumgardner and A. C. Barlow.

Little Levels District

District Chairman: Dr. H. W. McNeel.

District Committeemen: C. W. Kinnison, and T. A. Bruffey.

The object of the Federation is to promote the good roads cause in general but particularly at this time to bring to the attention of the voters of Pocahontas County the importance of supporting and voting for the State bond issue of fifty million dollars for the purpose of building a system of modern highways connecting the various county seats of the State. This money will not be expended according to wealth or publication of a county, but will be apportioned by the number of miles of road to be built. This is where Pocahontas County will come into her own for once. But one County in the State has a greater mileage of Class A road and that is Kanawha, and it has but 128 miles to our 127 miles. If this bond issue carries, for every dollar Pocahontas pays toward redeeming the bonds, the county will probably receive four or five dollars on her roads.

We believe that if this matter is properly and persistently presented to the voters of Pocahontas County that there will be few who will refuse to vote for the State road bonds.

GREENBANK

Mr. Robert N. Gum died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Annie Oliver at Greenbank, December 29, 1919. Services were conducted by Rev. Monroe, assisted by Rev. Rosenberger. His body was buried at the Arbovale cemetery by the side of his son, Will Gum Tuesday afternoon December 30th. Mr. Gum was 81 years of age. He is survived by five children, Mrs. Annie Oliver of Greenbank, Mrs. Brown Beard of Bartow, Mrs. Tate Hiner of Marlinton, Mr. John Gum of Greenbank and Mr. Joe Gum. Mr. Gum fought in the Civil War, being then 23 years of age when the war broke out. With the death of Mr. Gum the community loses one of its best citizens.

Miss Vesta Sharp is able to be at school again after a severe attack of mumps.

Married at the Methodist Parsonage, Thursday afternoon, January 1st Miss May Sheets and Mr. Forrest Grogg. We extend congratulations to this young couple.

Dewey Beard returned to Elkins, Monday, January 5th after spending two weeks at home.

W. W. Arbogast has bought the Reed property in town.

Mr. Carter Bishop returned from his home at Morgantown, where he spent his Christmas vacation.

Miss Anna Conrad spent her Christmas at home.

Miss Flora Gillispie spent a few days at her home last week.

F. Hamed, of Ohio, is visiting his brother, at Arbovale.

Mrs. Edith Judy is at home from S. C. I.

Lyle McLaughlin who has been ill is able to be back at school.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Bank of Marlinton was held on Monday. The year just passed proved one of the best the institution ever had in spite of the unsettled conditions of the country. A dividend of eight percent was declared, and a substantial balance placed to the surplus and undivided profit funds. The following were named on the Board of Directors for the next year: M. J. McNeel, Andrew Price, T. S. McNeel, C. J. Richardson, J. S. Mateews, Samuel Seeets, M. L. Beard, J. W. Price, F. R. Hunter, J. H. Buzzard, R. S. Hickman, A. N. Barlow, U. H. Hannah, H. M. Moore, J. WEATHER REPORT

Local Weather Observer S. L. Brown makes the following report for the month of December: Total rain fall 5. 21 inches, greatest in 24 hours 3.36 on the 6th and 7th; 6.5 inches of snow. It rained on 9 days. There were 7 clear, 14 partly cloudy, and 10 cloudy days. The coldest was 8 below on the 20th, and the warmest 58 above on the 9th; the greatest daily range in temperature was 38 degrees on the 20th. The average temperature for the month was 26.9 degrees.

Mr. Brown informs us that there will be five Sundays in the month of February this year. He looked over his accumulation of calendars and finds that this occurred the last time just forty years ago, in the year 1880.

Parkersburg, June 8.—Nonintoxicating cider and fruit juices may be manufactured by any person without the necessity of obtaining permit or giving bond, provided they are used exclusively in the home. When so used, the phrase "nonintoxicating" is held to mean nonintoxicating in fact and not necessarily less than one-half of one percent of alcohol. This is the substance of a ruling of the Federal Prohibition Commissioner made public here today by Federal Prohibition Director Charles Lively. Cider and other fruit juices may be sold so long as they contain less than one half of one percent of alcohol, but the purchasers cannot use or possess the same after they contain more than one-half of one percent of alcohol. Cider may be allowed to turn to vinegar, which may be used by the owner in his own home or sold to any person who may desire to purchase it. However, the owner must not under any circumstances add sugar or other fermentable substances for the purpose of increasing the alcoholic content, as this practice is held to constitute the production of a mash fit for distillation.

H. F. Arbogast, of Marvin Chapel, reports dogs killing sheep in his neighborhood, W. W. Ryder having had seven or eight sheep killed or torn.

Sunday June 20: Preaching at Droop and Seebert at 11 a m and 8 p m. Our fourth quarterly conference will meet at Clawson Church on Saturday at 2:30 p m the 3rd of July. A delegate must be elected at this time. Remember also the pastor's salary is to be laid for the ensuing year. Dr. J. A. Selby, of Parkersburg, president of the conference, will pay his annual visit to this charge July 3 and 5, and will preach at Clawson at 4:30 p m. Saturday; Fairview Saturday evening at 8 o'clock; Buckeye at 3 p. m. Sunday, and at Seebert Monday morning at 11 o'clock Give us your presence, please, and hear a good sermon. Let the classes also attend this important conference of the year.

MISS MARY FREEMAN WEDS DR. E. W. PRICE

Miss Mary Tutt Freeman and Dr. Emmett William Price were quietly married in the study of the officiating minister, Dr. Claude E. Hill, pastor of the First Christian Church, Thursday afternoon, June 3rd at 3:00 o'clock. The only attendants were Miss Rachel McAllister and Mr. Hugh Milton of College Station, Texas. Dr. Hill used the full ring ceremony.

The study at the church had been adorned with flowers for the occasion. The bride wore a blue embroidered tricotine coat suit, with hat, shoes, and gloves of dark brown. Her corsage bouquet was of pink roses and sweetpeas. The wedding had been kept quiet until this time because it was moved up two days earlier than planned on account of the going away of Dr. Hill from the city.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Flora Freeman, of 302 West Fifth Street, and received her education in the local schools.

Dr. Price is an instructor in the A and M College at College Station Texas. The romance dates back, to the time when he was in camp at Fort Ogelthorpe.

Dr. and Mrs. Price left for Marlinton, W. Va., where they will visit the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Mary Price for two weeks, and will then go to Washington, Philadelphia and Atlantic City, and return by way of Chattanooga enroute to Texas.

The bride has been honored with quite a number of social events and many handsome presents.—Chattanooga Times.

HOME NURSING CLASSES

Much interest is being shown in the classes in home nursing, which are to be given under the auspices of the Pocahontas County Chapter.

To further universal health, education and protection, the Red Cross is urging the extension of its course of Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick, and believes that this instruction should be made available to every woman and girl in the country, that it may fit them to care for minor illnesses and emergencies occuring in every household.

This is the Nation's effort (through the Red Cross) to make of its people healthier and stronger citizens.

Once people had large families. Now with few exceptions, they have very small ones, therefore it is necessary to conserve the small number.

During the draft fully one-third of the men were rejected on account of physical defects, a large proportion of which might have been remedied had their mothers been equipped years ago with the knowledge that this course gives.

Opportunity does not always knock at one's door, therefore, embrace it when it does.

Every woman and girl should take advantage of these classes, and learn the latest and best means of preventing disease, and caring for the sick. There is no woman in our community who could not learn many valuable things no matter what her age or experience.

Don't forget: enroll now in order that the committee from the chapter may plan for the best results.

Information regarding date of opening of classes may be obtained from,

MARKETING 1920 WOOL CLIP OF W. VA.

Through the activities of the recently organized Sheep and Wool Growers Association of West Virginia, contract and satisfactory arrangement for handling West Virginia wool clip of 1920 has been made with Horkheimer Brothers of Wheeling, West Virginia. This Company will handle all wool assembled in large lots in communities on a five percent basis. This charge covers storage at the warehouse for six months, grading, packing and marketing. In other words this Company charges five percent commission for handling and selling all wool received by them and will market the wool at the proper time to net the grower the best price. This is the same contract under which Horkheimer Brothers handles the Ohio wool and is a very liberal contract. This Company furnishes new bags for each community at the rate of one dollar per bag and credit is given for each bag returned. Warehouse receipts are given and cash advances made on wool before it is put on the market. All wool should be assembled by co-operative plan in each community. Some one should take charge of the combined lots of wool and give a receipt to the grower for the number of pounds of wool delivered to him. Each fleece should be tied separately with paper or cotton twine. It is preferred to use paper twine. The proper kind of paper twine may be bought from the Cincinnati Paper and Cartage Company of Cincinnati, Ohio. Each bag must have the name and address of the owner of the wool. All inquiries concerning the marketing of wool should be addressed to W. H. Somers, Chief Bureau of Markets, Berkeley Springs, West Virginia.

We understrnd that the Marlinton Electric Company will take over the business of the Delco-Lights Products in Marlinton, L. G. McClure, the Delco-Light man, to be associated with the Company. This will take care of the rapidly growing business Mr. McClure has built up, as the Company is prepared to handle the installation problem, and thus give Mr. McClure an opportunity to devote his time to the selling end.

Dr. Charles B. Marshall graduated eighth in a class of ninety-five at the University of Maryland and College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore. Many friends in Marlinton will remember Dr. Marshall as he attended high school here for two years.

Rev. M. H. Ramsey will start a series of meetings at Mary's Chapel on Elk Sunday night. His has secured the services of Rev. G. D. Sampson, who held such a successful meeting at Edray last fall. Mr. Sampson will preach at Edray on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock.

The Modern Woodmen recently paid $3000 insurance on the life of the late Uriah Hevener. During the month of May this fraternity settled 858 death claims, the total amounting to $1,453,413.

The annual memorial service of the Moose Lodge will be held in the Methodist Church next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The sermon will be preached by Dr. J. H. Light.

Cards have been received announcing the marriage of Miss Mary Goodloe to Page D. Nelson at Williamson, W. Va, June 9, 1920. The bride will be remembered in Marlinton, having visited her cousin, Mrs. A. C. Echard.

P. L. CLARK, DEAD

Preston L. Clark, one of the prominent citizens of Pocahontas County, died very suddenly and unexpectecly at his home near Hillsboro, Saturday June 12, 1920. He had been busy about his premises, and fell dead in his yard. He was paralyzed. For years he had been in failing health. His age was 76 years. He was the last member of the family of the late Sheldon Clark, who came to Pocahontas from Connecticut about one hundred years ago. His mother's maiden name was Lightner. Burial at the family grave yard on Tuesday afternoon, the services being conducted by Rev. J. C. Johnson, of the Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Clark had been a life long member. Thus we note the passing of a truly upright, honest man.

Mr. Clark is survived by his wife, who was a Miss Livesay, of Greenbrier County, and their children, Mrs. Rachel Beard, of Marlinton, Mrs. Kelley, of Richmond, Mrs. Lou McNulty, of Hillsboro, Lee Clark, of Florida, Miss Myrtle and Norval, at home.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Memorial Service for the Modern Woodman and Royal Neighbor Lodge was held at the Swago Church, Buckeye, June 6th. Rev. K. D. Swecker had charge of the service. First on programme, Hymn, "Come Thou Almighty King."

Neighbor Swecker did not take any text in particular, but after reading a part of the 10th Chapter of Luke, made a most excellent talk on, "Man's value to his fellowman." In this interesting lesson brought to us as a body of United Neighbors, Mr. Swecker pointed out for an example, how we as christians could keep this from being such a cold world. We often hear the expression, "This is a cold old world," and do we do anything to alleviate or brighten the way. Could we not give them a kind word; or may be a smile? Let us as a Society emulate the example of the Christ like Spirit, that neighbor Swecker brought to us in words so plain on our annual Memorial day, of June 6, 1920.

After second hymn, "Help Somebody today." Mr. Ira Brill was called upon to tell the people just why we meet on these occasions. Mr. Brill responded with a very brief talk, yet very interesting to explain the solemnity of the occasion. After third hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds," we received the benediction and went to our many homes glad that we were privileged to meet with the good people of the Swago community.

M.

Alliance, Ohio, June 13.—Miss Ethel Loury, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Loury, became the bride of William Kelley. The wedding took place at the Methodisl parsonage in Canton. The ring ceremony was used. The groom is a prosperous young man, employed at Transive & Williams shop. The bride is a very fine young lady, loved by all who know her. All their friends wish them a long and happy life. P.

THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1920

Raleigh County did Pocahontas an honor when it entrusted the trial of one of its citizens to the courts of this county, but while we thank our sister county for the compliment we beg that she will not do such a thing again. It can be said that this county took up the burden and thoroughly tried out a difficult situation, involving as it did the feeling between the union miners and the employees who refused to strike. It appeared on the side that the grievance that caused all this trouble was a demand made by a local union at Glen White of the mine owners for a place to meet. The owners of the mine did not care for the establishment of a union at that place and refused to rent or provide a house for the purpose and the union went out of town about a quarter of a mile and met at a store houne on a hill.

The impression that we got was that the labor did not lay down their tools in anything like the unamimity that the local union was thinking they ought to and about all the men that could be accommodated were at work in the mine and the coal was being produced in usual quantity.

The local union had not been in existence but for a short time, and there is every evidence that it was not a body of men who had the poise and experience necessary for community affairs. It is clear that they argued from the false premise that men could be ruled and influenced by fear, and they reasoned that if some shots were fired from an ambush that the "scabs" as some called them would submit.

It sometimes appears that men, especially, young men think that this race of people can be ruled by fear. We think that men can be influenced to the extent of being cautious by fear or the presence of danger, but we do not believe that a whole community can be ruled by fear except for a very small part of a day. For the men that wanted to work would continue to work by hook or by crook, and would be saddened into a stubborn determination by a show of force.

The way the shooting was staged was as clear a case of bushwhacking as could be imagined. A steep hill overlooked the mouth of the mine. It was a shaft mine 320 feet under ground. The elevators brought the men to the surface ten at a time. The bushwhackers armed with rifles were on the hill nine hundred feet away. As soon as the men came out on the surface of the earth, bullets began to drop around them like rain drops and the noise of the volleys had a most terrifying sound.

An expert rifle man happened to be in a building near the mouth of the mine, and by chance a 30-30 rifle was on the wall at his hand. He fired three shots, but only fired when he saw a man to fire at, and he put the whole ten bushwhackers to flight. They were mostly boys and very new and inexperienced in the art of murder.

It was to wonder, to listen to those boys tell about planning that attack and carrying it out. They were most tremendously regretful for obeying that impulse. It seemed that they figured out that it was the best thing for them to do, to go out to the blind at three in the morning and wait all day and until four o'clock on a November day when it is nearly dark. They took some grub along but like a parcel of boys, did not figure on the cold and uncomfortable position, and so when it got chilly after they had taken the stand, they decided to go home and go to bed for the rest of the night and to assemble at three in the afternoon. It seems they had not figured on the tedium of waiting. That was like a bunch of boys too. They came back. No absentees of the band that agreed to go bushwhacking. They found their guns and their ammunition under the logs in the brush and took up a line of fire after throwing out a couple of sentries.

Then they proceeded to rain the bullets down on a town with lots of people walking about and in sight. It is a good thing that the man Phipps had the presence of mind to return the fire so promptly for it must have soon happened that the fall of hundreds of bullets on that town would have found a mark and a murder been accomplished.

It was soon dark, and the bushwhackers got away and were safe from every one except themselves.

We lay it down as apparent that no ten young men, inexperienced in crime, can join in the commission of an offense, and keep it a secret for any considerable length of time. Sooner or later, someone of them will split off and divulge the details. That one will give the names and the circumstances. The other young men when picked up one by one, will be related the details showing that their guilty secret is known to the law. Then seeking immunity they in turn will break down and confess.

That is what happened in the Raleigh case. And convictions have been easy in the cases of those who were actually present and firing.

In the case of Ed Snyder, the effort of the State was to connect him with the offense as a moving spirit who had aided, counselled, abetted, and assisted, but who was not actually present. It was that feature of the case which made it take so long. every little fact and circumstance bearing on the famous battle that implicated him that came to light, was given in evidence, to corroborate the direct testimony of those who actually did the shooting. Five veteran lawyers sat with him at the trial table, and if there ever was a well tried man it is that same Ed Snyder, The man was confronted with witness after witness until the weight became so great that for one man to deny it all, was a superhuman task, and the jury took the view that he was guilty beyond all reasonable doubt and he was convicted. Without expressing any opinion of his guilt, it may be well said, that the maximum sentence that he received of five years imprisonment is consistent with the upholding of the verdict for if guilty, he was not entitled to the consideration of those who went to the place with guns, and faced the danger whatever there was of it.

To our mind, the saddest part of the whole case was the statement of the defendant that he was thirty-two years old and had a wife and seven children dependent upon him for support.

We will all be glad to see our Raleigh friends again in a social way, but the wearing of pistols has gone out of vogue in this county and the best families do not adorn their persons with hardward. So it will be agreeable if they leave their guns at home.

We have been working lately digging up what we could find about the activities of the people of what is now Pocahontas County, during the period covered by the Revolutionary War, particularly in regard to the trouble with the Iroquois Indians. There had been a settlement of white people in this trough of the Alleghanies for some twenty-seven years. Down in the big savannah in the Lewisburg vicinity a settlement had been established but all of the whites had been driven out by the Shawnees, and it was abandoned for some years. The ten years before the year of the declaration of independence, the valley acquired a number of residents. There were at least enough people in 1774, to spare 72 able men to join the army that marched to Point Pleasant from Lewisburg.

In the exposed position on the frontier and in the country traversed by the Warrior's Road, the policy of the British to attack the Americans from the rear by enlisting their Indian allies, must have been seriously considered by our ancestors, and there must have been a mature decision to stand their ground and risk the danger.

Prior to the breaking out the war, all Indians who came in from the south were enemies and all who came from the north were friends. If a war party came up the river it was time to get into the stockade, and if they came from the north, it was a party that helped to protect the whites from the Shawnee raids.

Now all was changed. There was a price set upon the head of every settler in this valley, by reason of the money that was paid for every scalp brought in by the savages, and before the war was over, a good many scalps had been ripped from the heads of persons of this neighborhood were proved at Detroit, and filed as vouchers.

We were considered to be in Augusta county though that county had been cut in two to make Botetourt County. The line ran east and west and crossed Greenbrier river near or at the Duncan rocks three miles below Marlinton, but it is evident that the dividing line was either not known or not regarded in the emergency of war.

Augusta men joined the continental army and saw service under Washington in all parts of the field of war, and the work of defense from the Indians fell upon the militia. The commander of the Augusta county militia which made such a glorious record during that war, was Colonel Sampson Mathews. His direct descendants live in this county now. Captain Pogue, of the Twentieth Battalion Augusta Militia, was assigned the duty of "spying," in the Greenbrier Valley. The word spying seems to have had a somewhat peculiar meaning during the revolutionary war, and was simply the out-post duty performed by a regular company of soldiers. This Captain Pogue was the Senior William Pogue, was a great-great-grandfather of the writer and the ancestor of some hundreds of other citizens of this county.

He spied out this land of Canaan and brought his family here and settled at Hillsboro in 1782, where the late Chas. Beard lived.

Just as the Seneca department of the Iroquois Nation, that is the war department of tha Indian empire, had maintained a line of forts and towns tne whole length of the Alleghany Mountains near the height of land, so the Virginia settlers opposed that warrior's line with another line a little to the east, and for years this out post duty was kept up to prevent the Indians from killing all the whites in the valleys of the mountains. The plan was to garrison the forts at from thirty to sixty miles a part and the scouts would go out two by two, and travel through the woods looking for Indian sign until they met the scouts from the adjoining fort and then they would go in. The usual tour was weekly and four days out and three days in the fort was the average time put in by a team of scouts. But always there were scouts out and reading the woods until the middle of winter let them go in to the settlements in the Valley of Virginia, for as much as two months in the dead of winter, perhaps.

John Bradshaw who served year after year says that the scouts had to carry their provisions with them, it being against the nature of their oath and instructions, and also jeopardizing their own safety to make a fire at night, no matter how inclement the weather might be. It may be hard to understand the fortitude that our ancestors showed in the warfare with the Indians, but the result of capture by the Indians exceeded in horror any thing in history, and it was ingrained into the nature of a pioneer to protect himself and his helpless family from the fiends ncarnate.

John Bradshaw's beat was thirty miles out from Cook's Fort, Monroe county, where he met the spies from Burnside Fort, and returned. Burnside Fort we take it, was on the waters, of Roanoke River. It seems that when a scout became familiar with a portion of country that he was kept on that particular tour year after year.

Jacob Kinnison attached to the fort at Mill Point, Fort Buckley, has stated under his own signature that his beat was as follows: From the Little Levels to a place called Fork Lick on Elk River (Webster Springs) and from thence to the waters of Stony Creek, a branch of the Greenbrier River bounded by the trace (trail) leading to Tygarts Valley, including Valley Mountain, thence to a place called Clover Lick on Greenbrier River, thence to the Drennen Fort (Marlinton), thence to the Little Levels of Greenbrier River.

This Jacob Kennison was a brother of Chas. Kennison, who is the ancestor of the Kennison family in this county. Jacob Kennison has no direct descendants. Jacob and Charles Kennison were settlers in the Little Levels at the time of the Revolution.

Jacob Kennison says that in 1779, that his companion on the scout was John Bridger, who was killed by the Indians the following spring. This conclusively confirms the date of the last great raid at the year that we stated some years ago—that the last raid by the Indians was in 1780 into this valley.

Jacob Kennison scouted through a most beautiful country, which we know mighty well as a paradise for deer and trout. The trace has broadened out into a turnpike road but it is pretty much along the same lines that Kennison traveled. Bishop Asbury in 1784, speaks of this same trace and how slow the traveling was on it.

At another time we want to set down more of the details of the Revolutionary war in Pocahontas County, but we have taken up so much space in the preamble, that we can give a very short summary here.

The fort at Mill Point was garrisoned. Captain Pogue was in command and there was a Lieut. Kennison. This we take to be Charles Kennison, for the reason that Jacob Kennison was not a pensioner of the war in 1832, as he would have been if he had held a commission. The territory covered by the soldiers whose duty was spying throughout the wilderness was to cover the headwaters of Jackson River, Back creek, Greenbrier River, New River, Gauley, Kanawha, and Elk Rivers; Stony Creek, Locust Creek, Mill Creek and other contiguous streams.

1776, the force spent the summer and fall on duty and went to a fort at Warm Springs for the winter. The only brush with the Indians this year was when they came into the county and stole a few horses, and were pursued and overtaken on Ten Mile Creek. A few shots were exchanged. No lives lost. Indians fled leaving the horses which were restored to their owners.

In 1777, the most notable happening was the appearance of a large body of Indians supposed to number at least a hundred at Locust Creek, "near the lower end of Droup." Pogue and his men joined with Captain Chance, perhaps from Fort Donnelly, and attacked the Indians who were concealed in place where there were large rocks and and fallen timber. Eleven Indians killed. Indians retreated into the Gauley country. Five whites wounded. None killed.

In 1778, the only Indians that appeared was a straggling party who killed a family on the headwaters of Tygarts River. Captain Pogue and his "Rangers," hastened to the scene to find that men had preceded him from Fort Warwick, and had buried the dead, and gone on in pursuit of the Indians.

In 1779, two families were attacked by Indians on Anthonys Creek, a number of them killed and their buildings burned, and their cattle destroyed. Eight men under Lieut. Kennison overtook then at Peters Creek in Nicholas county. A volley from the scouts brought down three Indians, and the rest some twelve or fifteen in number fled, leaving three captive children and some stolen horses. The children were returned to their homes and the horses restored to their owners.

The same year a party under Lieut. Kennison at Fork Lick were about to camp for the night when they were fired upon by some Indians. One man was slightly wounded in the shoulder. They fled through the night and reached the fort in safety.

In 1780, the Iroquois appeared at Marlinton and on that raid thirteen persons were killed in this part of the county, that being the raid in which the Bridger boys, Henry Baker and others were slain.

Perfection's Price In Tire Building

A tire-maker's first problem is to decide how much he can give for the money. This, and every other question in tire building, depends upon policies.

A super-tire, such as The Brunswick, can be made only by a concern which knows well and appreciates that there is nothing exclusive in the tire industry except high standards.

Since 1845 the House of Brunswick has held first place in every line it entered. Brunswick Tires, as more and more motorists come to know them, will certainly be awarded that coveted place held only by the superfine.

Motorists who buy one Brunswick usually adopt it for complete equipment. Yet this is not strange, since the first one so completely proves its superiority.

If the name of Brunswick certifies to you, as to most men, an extraordinary tire, at no higher price, would it not be good business to test one or two Brunswick Tires?

VOL. XXXVIII NO 36 | MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, JUNE 24, 1920 | $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

THE COUNTY FAIR

At the meeting of the directors of the Marlinton Board of Trade on last Friday night it was decided to hold the Pocahontas County Fair at Marlinton sometime between the twentieth of September and the first week of October.

The management of the Fair was put in the hands of Z. S. Smith as manager. Mr. Smith proved his ability by his successful management of the Fair last season. He will devote the greater part of his time to it for the next three months.

The exhibits will be divided into eight departments—horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry, farm products, boys' and girls' clubs and household exhibits. In addition the colored citizens will have exhibits.

Mr. Smith will appoint a county manager for each of these departments, and they in turn will appoint district managers. By this plan it is hoped to perfect a thorough organization, and thereby gain the hearty support and cooperation of every citizen engaged in farm pursuits or interested in the development of our county of Pocahontas.

The whole show will be on the Fair Grounds on Lower Camden Avenue. A reasonable admission fee will be charged and the proceeds will go toward paying the expenses of the undertaking. All exhibits will be entered free of charge. Tickets will be sold for each day, and they will admit to all departments of the Fair. The premium list has not yet been made up, but the prizes will be numerous and liberal.

The Fair is backed by the business men of the town of Marlinton and Pocahontas County, who expect to derive no financial benefit therefrom, and are running a risk of loosing money if on account of weather condittons or for other reasons the attendance is poor. The enterprise is prompted by public spirit entirely and deserves the support of every man, woman and child. In order to be a success unstinted support is required.

The kind of support that is desired does not begin and end with driving into town and buying an admission ticket, although this is important. We want boosting and we want exhibits. Every farmer should have a better horse, calf, lamb, pig, chicken, bull, rooster, ram, or specimen of fruit, vegetable, grain or hay than his neighbor. Bring the best you have in the best condition you can put it. If you don't win a prize you will have put your best against the best, and see where you have come short.

This paper urges every farmer—be he girl or boy, man or woman, to have enough pride and interest in the work in which he is engaged to prepare an exhibit for the Pocahontas County Fair.

The agricultural exhibits and shows held in the county have been successful, but nothing heretofore has been attempted quite so big as the Fair this fall will be. But to make it a go, and to make it worth while, the farmers of the county will have to get behind it and feel an individual interest in it.

The horse fanciers of half a dozen counties will see to it that the horse show will present a speed program of a very high standard. This will bring and hold the crowd. While this is important, what this writer wants to see is for the stockraiser and farmer to come up with his end with as much enthusiasm and pride as the average owner of a good fast horse.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Owing to the failure of the official workers of the State Sunday School Association to be present as was expected, tne District Sunday School Conventions will be held some time in July. It had been expected to hold four conventions this week. The Edray district convention will be held at Poage Lane.

A gigantic sang root was found on Thorny Creek Mountain. It was 16 inches long and weighed dry exactly one quarter of a pound. The rings on top indicated that the plant was 33 years old. It was worth about $2.25.

The Children's Day Service at the Presbyterian church on Sunday was unusually successful. The church was full of people and an offering of $300. was made for the Mexican Mission field.

PRESTON S. CLARK

Preston S. Clark was the youngest of six sons born to Sheldon and Mary Lightner Clark. His father was a native of Connecticut who came to Pocahontas County many years ago and engaged in merchandising and stock raising. All the brothers preceded him to the grave. He was born August 30, 1844, and like all of his father's family devoted the seventy-six years of his life to the energetic pursuit of his calling, that of stockman and farmer, literally dying in the harness.

He had not been in robust health for several years, and on Tuesday before his death had a very severe attack of suffering. He rallied from this attack and was beginning to walk about the farm. On Saturday morning he seemed to feel better than usual and after breakfast walked out to look after a faulty fence but on the advice of his son started to return to the house. His son went on to the field to work, thinking the father was resting at home. But he never reached the house. He fell just in front of the yard gate where he was found a few minutes later with life extinct.

In December 1869 Mr. Clark married Miss Josephine Livesay of Frankford, West Virginia. To this union eight children were born, six girls and two boys. Of the eight the two sons and five daughters survive: viz. Messrs. Norval and Lee Clark, late of Florida; Mesdames Rachel Beard, of Marlinton; Lula McNulty, of Lobelia; Clarence Kelly, of Richmond, Va.; Guy Bell, of Richlands, and Miss Myrtle, at home.

On June 16, 1875, Mr. Clark and his wife united with Oak Grove Presbyterian church, and for forty-five years marched in the great army of Christ, a faithful soldier of the Lord.

He was a devoted husband and father and was always ready to sacrifice to the extent of his ability for his loved ones. He was a man of the kindliest and most generous impulses and all his acquaintances accorded him sincere homage for his uprightness of life and probity of character.

In December, 1918, Mr. and Mrs. Clark celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, and now that the bond that for nearly fifty two years bound them together has been severed by death, the sympathy of all their friends and acquaintances will go out to the companion left behind, as indeed it will to every sorrowing heart today.

"He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angel."

Sunday, June 27th. The Pastor will preach at Mountain Grove, at 11:00 a. m., Minnehaha Springs, 3:00 p. m., and Mt. Carmel, 7:45 p. m.

Thursday, July 1st. there will be an all day meeting at Minnehaha Springs. The program is as follows: 11:00 a. m. preaching, Sacrament of Lords Supper administered. 2:00 p. m. business session of Quarterly Conference; 3:00 and 8:00 p. m. preaching. Rev. H. I. Stephens, Dr. J. H. Light and other prominent ministers will conduct the services. Dinner will be served, refreshments will be on sale.

Come, and help make this a notable day. A real "feast" of Spiritual as well as material things.

Roy Creasy, a young man who worked at the tannery, left here May 17 to walk through the mountains to to his home near Richwood. Inquiry is being made for him on account of the fact that he has not sent for his pay. His accounts were in good shape here and there is no particular reason to be uneasy about him further than the very significant fact that he has not drawn his pay.

DIED

Mrs. Laura Kincaid died at her home in Ronceverte on June 21, 1920 after a long illness, of some cancerous affection of the stomach. She was about 40 years of age. Burial at Ronceverte on Tuesday.

The deceased was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Overholt, of Marlinton. She is survived by her three children. Her husband, Ray Kincaid, died a few years ago.

William Harrison Gabert, was born near Frankford, Greenbrier County, W. Va., Oct. 6, 1840 and departed this life at the home of his daughter near Mill Point, March 9, 1920 being 79 years 5 months and 3 days old, the deceased was a son of the late Stewart Gabert, and came to Pocahontas County while a young man. He was quite an adept in the weavers profession and followed it as a trade for many years. The deceased was united twice in marriage, his former wife being Miss Martha Dotson and the latter Miss Matilda Moore. He leaves to mourn their loss beside a host of friends, three children, Mrs Mary Turner of Millpoint, Mrs. Agnes Barnes of Maxwell and Howard C. of Flint, Michigan. The deceased was converted while a young man and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South and died in the triumphs of the faith.

The funeral services were conducted at Marvins Chapel, by his Pastor, Rev. K. D. Swecker after which the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery nearby.

Servant of God well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past,
The battle's fought the race is won;
And thou art crowned at last.

L. J. B.

Virginia, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan P. Edgar, died at the home or her grandfather, Eli Crouch, at Elkwater, Randolph County, Monday, June 21, 1920. For a day she had been sick with peritonitis.

On Tuesday the little body was brought to Marlinton to be laid in Mt. View Cemetery on Weddesday afternoon, the services being conducted by Rev. J. M. Walker, of the Presbyterian church.

Little Virginia was fourteen months old and was the brightest and sweetest of children.

Rev. Paul Reigle is engaged in a series of revival services at the Buckeye church. Services each night at eight o'clock. He is assisted by Rev. L. P. Driscol, of Atlanta, Georgia.

We wish to thank the people of this neighborhood, Greenbank, Cass and Cloverlick, for the sympathy shown us in the death of our dear wife and daughter. May heaven's richest blessings fall to their lot.

DISEASE NOT A CRIME

Disease is the antithesis of health; it may be briefly and simply defined as a morbid condition resulting from disturbance or failure of natural physiological functions. Diseases which are so communicable as to be a menace to public health are usually controlled by quarantine of the persons so diseased. The public health authorities only are vested with the power of quarantine. The fact that many persons contract diseases because of abuses, intemperance, excesses, indulgences or other acts which may be classed as crimes, does not make it a crime to have the disease. No person falls into the criminal category because he has become a victim of a disease, however loathsome. A person may commit a crime and through the commission of that crime also contract a loathsome communicable disease; but the remedy for the crime is one to be applied by a court of justice, while the community looks to public health officials for its protection against the disease. Venereal disease is a typical example Much venereal disease is spread through prostitution; prostitution is a crime in every state in the United states excepting two; hence many venereal carriers will also be criminals. However, venereal disease may be and frequently is contracted innocently; hence not all venereally diseased persons are or have been criminals.—U. S. Health Service.

Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.

Preaching at night, only as the pastor prerches at Westminster at 11 a. m. and at Huntersville at 3 p m.

The Childrens' Day for Foreign Missions in the Sunday School last Sunday, notwithstanding the rain, was most successful in every way. There were 265 present and the offering amounted to $300.00. Everyone was delighted with the program.

The Sunday mail service is cut out at this place and any relief must come through an act of congress to all that want the Sunday mail. The postoffice force was willing enough, but the Sunday law is against the delivery of mail and as usual with the law it is on the right side. A gentleman in the upper end of the county offered up a prayer to Heaven to cut out the Sunday mail in this county and it seems that he got an immediate and a quick answer.

Wm. R. Bennett, Jr., a son of Judge Bennett, is in jail in Fayetteville, on the charge of the murder of his wife. The young woman was reported at first as having committed suicide but after the examination of a number of witnesses at the inquest the verdict of the jury was that it was murder, and the husband is held without bail. The deceased was the daughter of Alfred Taylor, a well known newspaper man.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Douglas, June 22, 1920, a boy.

Washington, D. C.—Up to May the Bureau of War Risk Insurance settled a total of 127,151 insurance claims, representing a total value of $1,131,552,173.45. At the time of this compilation, only 5,119 claims were pending, and in most of these cases the beneficiaries reside in foreign countries where disturbed conditions render communication impossible.

Up to the same time, the number of applications for conversion of War Risk insurance into Government Life policies numbered 133,242, for amounts aggregating more than $400,000,000.

Regardless of how long a service man's insurance has lapsed or been cancelled, and regardless of how long he may have been out of the service, a special ruling permits reinstatement at any time up to July 1, this year.

George Maltich is Given Life Sentence

Prosecuted vigorously by the State and by the Cherry River Boom & Lumber Company, George Maltich was convicted of the murder of John Moslo, in September, 1919. The interest that the big company took in the matter was the fact that during the year 1919 there were many murdered bodies of woodsmen found in the woods, and because the dead man John Moslo, was an old and trusted employee of the company having been with it for sixteen years.

The prosecution was in the hands of F. R. Hill, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, L. M. McClintic and J. M. Wolverton, who appeared to assist the State. For the defense N. C. McNeil, W. A. Bratton and Andrew Price, appeared. The trial took three days.

Moslo went for a walk through the woods September 7, on Sunday, with the prisoner. He was last seen within 1500 feet of where the body was found drunk in company with the prisoner. The prisoner came back to the camp before night, showing signs of agitation, and left next day without drawing his pay and was captured some six months after that in Ohio. Moslo's body was found September 16. A check known to be on Moslo's person was cashed in Richwood July 8th, by a merchant, who could not indentify the man who cashed it.

Moslo's body showed signs of violence in that there was a withe of water birch tied tightly around his neck and one of the bones was broken.

Maltich's defense was that he left Moslo in company with two Slavonians and that he had nothing to do with any violence.

The defense presented the following points of defense. That the county line was so unsettled at the point that the body was found that there was doubt in which county the murder took place and produced a government map on which the scene was placed in Webster county. That the body was not fully identified as the body of John Moslo. That the question of death by violence was not fully proved. That the check might have been cashed by Moslo himself. That Moslo might have died of wood alcohol. That the defendant was telling the truth.

Both the dead man and the prisoner were Austrians and a good deal of the testimony was given by Austrians.

County Court was in session on Tuesday. There was no business of special importance other than the usual routine before the court. The session was continued until next Monday, when the contracts for the Locust Creek bridges will be let.

Seasonable rains are helping meadows and garden truck amazingly. A little chilly for corn.

HOW PRICES ROSE, AND FELL

Interesting conclusions may be drawn from a recently completed analysis of wholesale and retail prices and wages for the years 1860 to 1872 in which tendencies strikingly like those of the present day are revealed, showing finally a slump in prices which, economists and students of market conditions say, soon may be expected if history is to repeat itself.

The figure of 100 is taken as the basic level of all three in 1860. There was a gradual rise during 1861 and 1862 and 1863, and at the end of the last year wholesale prices were at 150; retail prices at 140; and wages at 130. During the year 1864 came the sharpest rise and wholesale prices jumped to the 210 mark, reaching the peak in January, 1865. Meanwhile both retail prices and wages had taken a more gradual rise, the former standing at 165 in January and wages being at 150.

In April, 1865, the war ended and there came a sudden drop in wholesale prices, which fell to 160 in July of that year and then rallied to 180 by the end of the year. Retail prices and wages continued a steady rise throughout the year; not being affected by the end of the war and reached the respective levels of 170 and 165 at the end of 1865.

In the year following the close of the war, or 1866, there was a marked variation in the trend of the three. Wholesale prices fluctuated rather violently but with a constant downward trend, and they continued this downward course with occasional sharp rallies for seven years following the war, scoring a net loss of from five to ten points a year, until 1872, just prior to the great panic, they were at 130 or just 30 points above the pre-war figure.

If history is repeating itself the man who now denies himself useless luxuries and puts his money in government securities or in other standard investments will be on a sound financial basis when the present troublesome days are over.—From War Loan Organization.

Married, Wednesday, June 17, 1920 Burt Johnson and Miss Rubie Smith, at Berea, Kentucky. The groom is known by almost every person in Pocahontas County, having been our County agent for a number of years. He is now engaged in the hardware and farm implement business at Richmond, Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson arrived on Saturday to spend a couple of weeks at the Allegheny Club at Minnehaha Springs.

Among the graduates of the West Virginia University at the recent commencement were Misses Agnes and Margaret Price, of this place who both took the A. B. degree. They each expect to teach, Miss Agnes to teach in the High School at Ronceverte, and Miss Margaret in the Edray District High School, both teaching English.

Your Chance For a Farm!

200 acres subdivided into tracts from 10 to 40 acres each

At Public Auction Sale

Tuesday, June 29, 1 p. m.

Within 2 1-2 miles of Ronceverte on Union-Ronceverte Road 1-2 mile from Organ Cave.

Location

This is the noted A. R. Jackson farm, and of the best in Greenbrier County, adjoining the farms of C. E. Fullen, Dr. J. A. Jackson and the lats Bolivar Williams.

Advantages

Every tract will have road frontage. Farm well supplied with water. This is limestone Blue Grass land, in splendid condition, and lies beautifully. Purchaser can acquire one or more adjoining tracts.

The man With a Farm Today

will be the man with the generous bank account tomorrow. The demand for farm products constantly increases, with an upward trend of prices predicted for years to come. Farm land values are steadily rising and are yet far below the scale of advances in other directions. Now is the time to acquire a farm of your own. . The small farm, intensively cultivated is a far better investment than a large farm poorly cultivated because of the cost and scarcity of farm labor. These small sized farms afford an ideal opportunity for the farmer of mederate means. A look at this property means a farm for you.

As an Investment

The wise man buys his farm near a growing town, where the expanding population and extending hard roads assure him of a ready and convenient market and a certain and rapid enhancement in value. Ronceverte will become the great transportation center for the 250,000 acres of virgin coal fields being opened up in the nearby territory. The Greenbrier & Eastern Railroad will undoubtedly connect here with the C. & O. and Ronceverte will duplicate the growth of such points as Bluefield, Williamson, Logan, Fairmont, Beckley and other towns which owe their rapid growth to the development of surronnding coal areas. Don't delay! Get in on the ground floor!

Liberal Terms of Payment

will be given on all sales.

A gold watch and other Free Prizes gives away during the sale.

BOWMAN REALTY CO.

Auction Sale Managers — Huntington, W. Va,

NOTE:—Parties attending sale from points on Greenbrier Division can reach Ronceverte on morning train with ample time to return on evening train. Free autos to sale from Ronceverte.

Can You Answer Yes?

Alluring ways to become separated from our earnings confront us on every side. Compared with these the channels of profitable saving are relatively small.

Yet in the business of getting on in life saving is admittedly of far greater importance than earning or spending.

Do you save? Do you save haphazardly? Or do you save and bank consistently?

When you answer yes to the last query, you can begin to expect big things of the future.

The venerable A. Coombs was stricken with paralysis at his home in Marlinton Sunday afternooon. He rallied and is able to speak, but is in a critical state. He has recently passed his 79th birthday.

Tyler May was up from Beard on Monday. He reports things prospering on the farms in his neighborhood, the recent rains helping the meadows wonderfully. He expects to cut his wheat this week. It gives promise of a fair yield.

Miss Anna Lee Ervine returned on Saturday from Huntington where she was taking the summer course at Marshall College. She is now at the home of her father, G. M. Ervine. The coming season she will have charge of a four room graded school at Barnville, Kanawha county, as principal. For her assistants she took three of the good teachers from the Marlinton school—Miss Lucile Shepherd, Miss Sue Courtney and Miss Georgia Sharp.

COX AND ROOSEVELT

Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, were nominated for President and Vice President by the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco on Tuesday. This is a good, strong ticket.

MISS BRATTON, SOLOIST

Waynesboro music lovers were offered a treat when Miss Guy Bratton appeared as soloist at the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning. She sang "The Voice in the Wilderness," by Scott.

Miss Bratton has a mezzo soprano voice of unusual promise, and has already attracted much favorable comment. Her tones, especially in the upper and middle registers, are remarkably clear and well sustained, and she enunciates distinctly, a point usually overlooked by young singers. A voice of such delightful sweetness and volume offers almost unlimited possibilities if properly developed. Miss Bratton plans to continue her vocal studies next fall at the Peabody Institute in Baltimore, where she will doubtless meet with great success.—Waynesboro Blue Ridge Star.

THE HAMRICK FAMILY

From Moccasin Tracks by W. C. Doddrill. "Rattlesnake Bill."

Patrick Hamrick settled in the Maryland Colony in the days prior to the American Revolution. He was the father of twelve sons, who moved with him and settled in Prince William County, Virginia. Some of these sons moved as far south as Georgia; some went to Kentucky. Benjamin and Joel settled in Greenbrier county, now West Virginia. Benjamin married a McMillion and removed to Cherry Tree Bottom, where the town of Richwood is located. From there he went to the Williams river, where he was informed of an intended massacre. Hastily gathering together a few household articles and taking his family, he fled to Donnally'sfort, situated in Greenbrier county, ten miles northeast of Lewisburg. One of his children, a boy only a week old, was carried by one of the men in the back of his hunting shirt one entire day without sustenance.

It was not known whether the child was living or dead until it was taken out at the fort late in the evening. It soon revived, but its collar bone had been broken. After the Indian danger had passed, he moved to the mouth of Big Birch and began an improvement at a place called Big Elk. He was the father of four sons, William, Benjamin, David and Peter. The last named remained in Braxton county, and the other three settled in the Elk valley above Webster Springs.

William and Benjamin married Jane and Nancy, daughters of Colonel Isaac Gregory, and David married a Miller. William, the hunter, had four sons, Isaac, Adam, Benjamin and William G. The last named was one of the valiant sons of Webster county, who responded to Lincoln's call for volunteers. He was wounded at the battle of Winchester, while acting as color-bearer, but he was with Grant at Appomattox and was the proud possessor of a heart-shaped piece of the apple tree under which the surrender was negotiated.

The sons of Benjamin were Allen, Addison, William, James and Christopher. David's sons were James, Peter, John, David, Benjamin, George Levi and William. Interesting sketches could be written of each of these seventeen great grandsons of Patrick Hamrick. They lived active, industrious lives and left sons to perpetuate their names.

The three brothers above mentioned were the ancestors of the very numerous family of Hambricks now living in Webster county. It will be seen from the foregoing, that they are of a prolific stock and the meeting so many stalwart Hambricks between Webster Springs and Whittaker Falls need not create surprise. This is by far the most numerous family in the county, there being about four hundred representatives in Fork Lick district. The descendants of Patrick Hamrick can be found in nearly every state west of the Alleghanies and in almost every county of West Virginia The name is spelled in various ways in different localities. "Hamrick," "Hamric," and Hambrick," are the three forms most generally used.

James Dyer, Senior, came from Pendleton county about 1810, and located above Fork Lick. His son. James married a Sawyers and settled on the Gauley, where he built a commodious house on a hill overlooking the river, at the mouth of Beaver Run. He brought the first wagon to what is now Webster county, in 1837, from Alleghany county. Virginia. He was the first Superintendent of Free Schools of Webster county, and made a most excellent official. John R. Dyer, now (1915) Clerk of the Circuit Court is a great-grandson of James Dyer, Senior, the pioneer. His grandsons, Harvey, George, and Cyrus, are prominent citizens of Webster county.

John R. Cogar came from Braxton county in 1842. He was a son of Jacob Cogar, who was a member of the company of soldiers, that went to Norfolk in 1813 to fight the Britrsh. He was one of the last survivors of the Second War of Independence, having lived to the extreme age of one hundred and four years. John R. married Mary Gregory and settled on the divide between the Elk and the Gauley, in his twenty-first year. He cleared a large farm, which he kept in a fine state of cultivation. As an orchardist he was unsurpassed and his apples would have brought a fancy price in any market. He was one of the best bee hunters in the county, and after he had passed the allotted three score and ten, he still went into the woods in search of wild bees. He was also very successful in the pursuit of bears, deer and panthers. He killed a greater number of the last named animal than any other of the pioneer hunters. He was the father of a large number of boys, who still live in the county which their father helped to establish.

David Baughman settled on the Gauley one mile above Turkey creek in the latter part of the thirties. He was a farmer, a cooper, a millwright, a carpenter, and a blacksmith. He possessed real mechanical talents, and had he received a technical education, he would have become a master workman. He was very peculiar in many ways but his honesty and his veracity were never questioned. He too was an orchardist and his fine orchard still standing is a monument to his industry and perseverance. When he first moved to the Gauley brook trout were very plentiful and could be caught in large numbers. In the spring, they would congregate below his mill dam in large schools, waiting for a tide to enable them to pass up stream. Some large trout may yet be caught at the Baughman mill.

W. A. Browning caught the biggest bass of the season at the Apperson hole last Thursday. It was over 21 inches long and weighed five pounds. He got a mumber of others of two pounds of better. He was bait fishing. This was about the first day that the water was at good fishing stage, and it rained the next day.

"Many of those who borrowed and bought Liberty Bonds ignored the complementary injunction to save and pay for them. A fifty dollar bond in the hands of a patriot turned spendthrift was to him a fifty dollar bond to be spent Saturday night. If the fifty dollar bill turned out to be a forty-five dollar bill, small matter. This was the first and most immediate cause of the depreciation of Liberty Bonds."—Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury.

RESOLUTIONS

Resolutions of respect adopted by the New Hope Lutheran Sunday School in memory of Glenna Elizabeth White who departed thes life on the twrnty-fourth day of June, nineteen hundred and twenty.

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom to remove from our midst into eternity, Glenna Elizabeth White, be it resolved:

That in her death our Sunday School has lost a faithful and prompt scholar.

That the family has sustained a great loss and there remains a vacant place in the home which can never be replaced until the resurrection morning.

That because of her bright smiles and sweet disposition she had won the love of all who knew her, and will be greatly missed in the school and community.

While we cannot understand why Glenna was called from us so suddenly, yet we know by her kindness and obedience her work here on earth was finished and it pleased her Heavenly Father without delay to call her up higher.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family; that a copy be sent to the county papers and that a copy be placed on the secretary's book for future reference.

We will meet with those who left us,
And have joined that glorious band,
When we gather by the river over there.

We will know no more of parting
When we reach that happy land,
When we gather by the river over there.

We will gather by the river over there,
Where the tree of life is blooming bright and fair;
There in robes of spotless white, in the city of delight,
We will gaaher by the river over there.

Mrs. B. Frank White,
Hanson Moore,
Gladys White,
Committee.

Mrs. A. E. Thomas entertained at six o'clock dinner last Saturday evening the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harper Thomas, Miss Bonnie Bell and Miss Edith Thomas of Hot Springs, Miss Icie Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Echard, of Marlinton, after which they attended the Amusu Theatre.

Capt. Ed Blake, of Ronceverte, nnd Dr. Winfred Moore, of White Sulphur, attended the dance at Minnehaha Springs last Friday night.

The Westminster congregation on Knapps Creek gathered several days last week and gave the church a thorough renovating. The building was painted, roof and all, and given some necessary repairs.

We wish to express our sincere and heartfelt thanks to our good neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy shown us in the loss of our dear daughter and sister, Glenna Elizabeth.

HENRY MC DONALD MC COMB

Henry McDonald McComb of Huntersville, died at his home July 9th after months of lingering illness. For the past two years he had been suffering from chronic catarrh of the head. A few weeks before the end the trouble seem to move to his throat and chest and his suffering became intense. The complications that soon set in made it evident to himself and to all those who so faithfully waited by the bedside that it was just a matter of a few days with him. The end came peacefully Friday morning.

Mr. McComb was born Sept. 21, 1862, the son of James Price and Eliza Moore McComb. Sept. 4, 1889 he married Miss Ida Belle Cochran. To them God gave a happy family of children, Harvey, Clarence, Opal, Grace, Beulah, and Francis, all of whom are living save Opal who preceded her father just a few months ago.

Mr. McComb was a farmer, a man who went quietly about his work. He was a good neighbor and in consequence had many faithful friends.

He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, having been received into the church by the session at his house only a few months ago, after he was confined to his bed. Thus passes away another good father, a devoted husband, and a kind neighbor.

He is survived by his wife, and five children, four brothers, Charles, George, Willis, Beckly, and one sister Mrs. Wagoner and a host of friends who deeply sympathize with the family in their great sorrow.

"It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth Him good."

S. L. Brown, local weather observer, reports as follows for the month of June. Total rainfall 5.53 inches; greatest fall in 24 hours 2.28 on the 4th and 5th; rained 14 days, no clear day, cloudy 8, partly cloudy 22. Thunder storms on 14, 15th and 17th Hottest 82 degrees on 11th and 29th, coolest 36 on the 7th; average high temperature 72.7, average low temperature 48.1, mean 60.4 degrees.

Clarksburg, July 11.—A report issued today by the Rev. W. A. Snow, general secretary of the West Virginia Sunday School Association, shows that 296,244 pupils enrolled in West Virginia Sunday schools so far this year, as against 290,750 last year.

The Pocahontas County Teachers' Institute begins August 23rd. The instructors assigned are D. C. Tabler Parkersburg, and Edw. Hayward, Cohoes, N. Y. Miss Hannah M Cundiff of Huntington, will conduct the singing.

The Huntersville district Sunday School Convention will be held at Mt. Vernon Church, Frost, Saturday July 24, 1920 at 10 o'clock a. m.

KILLED BY TRAIN

Otis Johnson, a fireman on the log train of the Parsons Pulp and Lumber Company's train, was instantly killed while making a coupling on the log train, June 27, 1920. He was the victim of an accident not uncommon on the lumber roads. Engine 10 was placing cars, and young Johnson uncoupled a loaded car. Evidently he expected the air brakes to hold, as he stepped across the track between it and the engine. The car came on and caught him, killing him instantly.

The young man was a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Johnson, of the Sinks of Pocahontas County. His age was 22 years and 9 months. He had worked as a railroader for 2 1-2 years, and had an enviable reputation for faithfulness and industry.

Burial in the Arbogast burying ground, the services being conducted by Rev. Pearl Arbogast, assisted by Rev. C. C. Lambert, both of the Methodist church. Surviving him are his parents, three brothers and five sisters.

Died, June 19, 1920, Mrs. Mary Ruth Wooddell, wife of Glen Conrad Wooddell. On the day following the funeral services were conducted from the Arbovale church, by Rev. J. W. Rosenberger, assisted by Rev. D. M. Monroe. Interment in the Arbovale cemetery, beside her in the grave being the bodies of her two little infants, for whom she had gone down into the Valley of the Shadow only to come out in the light of the Eternal City.

Mrs. Wooddell was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Shinaberry, of Cloverlick. She was a faithful and loving wife, and professing christian in the pale of the M. E. Church. Her husband, her parents, two sisters and four brothers survive her.

Senator N. C. McNeil has loaned us his observation bee hive, and it is now in the printing office. It is a glass case containing a large frame of comb, with a queen and a lot of worker bees. A wooden box fits down over it to keep out the light. A hole in the wall permits the workers to go and come from the honey fields. A bee hive is a busy, systematic place The queen can usually be located going around inspecting the cells until she finds one to her notion, and there she will deposit eggs Following her and around her is always a retinue of workers, her special at- [illegible] from the field loaded down with two sacks of polen, he picks out a good open place and begins to shake himself like a wet dog.

Hon. T. S. Scanton, of Huntington was in Marlinton Tuesday night and made a helping address before the Board of Trade. Mr. Scanlon was in Greenbank District last week, seeing to it that the district voted right on the bond issue. Spending the week end at Minnehaha Springs, and coming to town Tuesday, he addressed a town meeting at the invitation of the Board of Trade.

Hon. Tim is a great talker, and to hear and see him one might be led to think he is Irish. His subject "Service or Self," and his text "He who serves others serves himself." He has had long experience in Board of Trade work, and was able to emphasize the things a newly established Board of Trade would meet and have to overcome. His audience, though small was most attentive.

Mr. Scanlon has been a road builder all his life, as a constructor of roads and a booster for better highways. At the present time, he is in charge of the Extensive Construction work being done by Taylor County, having resigned from the State Road Commsssion to do so.

HAWK CATCHES SNAKE

We are informed that F. W. Ruckman, of Millpoint, while out salting his stock, saw a rattle snake fall in front of him as though his snakeship had fallen from the skies. Mr. Ruckman turned his eyes upward and noticed a big chicken hawk soaring above him, and from whence the snake came. He examined the snake closely and found that the head had been eaten off It was about four feet in length and had eight rattles. We are told that these large mountain hawks frequently catch snakes and after killing them carry them to their nest as food, for their young.—Marlinton Journal.

THE FATE OF MR HAWK

A True Story

In a lovely house, surrounded by woods and fields, lives the dearest lady that I know. She is very fond of birds and all through the summer many different kinds come to dip in her bird-baths, and some even venture on the porch to eat from her hands. Such nice, convenient baths as those are! There is deep water for the large birds and shallow for the tiny ones. During the cold, winter days the kind lady hangs suet on the tree branches and scatters seeds and crumbs, so that many birds that used to go South stay with her through the whole season.

Last spring her gentle heart was much disturbed by the quarrelsome English sparrows which came daily to annoy two peaceful swallows that were building a nest under the porch eaves. She tried in vain to think of some way to protect her lodgers. One day she chanced to find a stuffed hawk. "Now," said she, "I'll put this on the porch and, maybe, it will frighten the sparrows away." So Mr. Hawk was placed at the corner where the troublesome birds gathered, and the good lady waited to see what would happen.

First came a flock of careless young sparrows. They spied the fearsome creature and fluttered back to the bushes screaming, "That's the thing that mamma told us to always fly away from." When their mother, Mrs. A. Brown Sparrow, heard about the danger which threatened her darlings she made a terrible fuss, ventured to take a look at Mr. Hawk, and hurried back to tell her husband. By this time the whole colony of birds had collected on the shrubbery, scolding and chattering, with occasional excursions to the porch to view the enemy. "Here's General Sparrow," they all twittered, as a fat fluffy old bird settled down on a twig. They called him General because he had been victor in so many fights. "What's all this noise?" he demanded. "Ha! Mr. Hawk indeed!" Then he puffed out all his feathers and bragged, "Where is he? It takes more than that to frighten me." The General perched on the porch rail and watchfully waited. Not a motion of the big bird could he see. Then like a flash, he darted for the unwinking eye of Mr. Hawk. "Pooh!" he said. Then he pecked at the eyes. "Glass" he chuckled. Then he boldly stood on Mr. Hawk's back, in spite of the fact that the others were shrieking for him to come away. When he [illegible] all talked it over. "Let's get his head," peeped one daring old fellow. So they set upon Mr. Hawk and picked and pecked till, will you believe it, the head really did come off, and two strong birds managed to fly with the heavy burden to the gravel walk. The whole flock began to tear and pull till not a bit of Mr. Hawk's head remained. "There!" they chattered, "we'll teach him to try to fool us!" Then they flew back to find the swallows and worry them.

As for the good lady, she laughed as heartily as she could and gave up trying to get the best of such smart birds. The swallows succeeded in finishing their nest, for the lady was so kind that she more than made up for the trouble that the sparrows caused them.—Elizabeth Watson in Dumb Animals.

SHERIFF GIBSON WOUNDED

IN ATTEMPTING NO ARREST MOONSHINERS

Sheriff William Gibson was shot and slightly wounded Monday afternoon while attempting to arrest Holmes Sharp and Si Bowers on a charge of moonshining. He was hit on the hip and given a slight flesh wound.

On Saturday state prohibition officers raided the home of Holmes Sharp near Minnehaha Springs and captured a 30 gallon still and a lot of mash in the cellar. Sharp was not at home at the time of the raid.

Monday afternoon Sheriff Gibson and officers Moore and Wooddell went to arrest Sharp who lives in the old Lockridge homestead now owned by Dennis Dever. When the officers approached the house, Sharp, accom- by Si Bowers, got out the back way made a run across the oroad fields toward the Alleghany. They stopped in a wheat field and commenced to shoot at the officers. The distance was about two hundred yards. In all about thirty shots were fired. The sheriff it appears was the special target, his black suit and white shirt making a plain mark. Bullets struck all around him, there are three bullet holes in his coat, and he was hit in the hip, a slight flesh wound an inch or more long. From the shells picked up, Sharp and Bowers used a 44-40 and a 30-30 gun.

The officers got in the shooting and soon made it hot for the fugitives that they got behind some trees. The ammunition of the officers gave out, and they had to go for more bullets and men. In a few hours they came back with reinforcements, but Sharp and Bowers had gone to the mountains and probably across the Virginia State line, just a mile or so distant.

Holmes Sharp is a man of about 43 years of age, married, and has a number of children. He belongs to a good family.

Si Bowers was a soldier in the late war, was a member of the 14th division, and was considered the crack shot of his division, winning a medal for his markmanship.

CASS

Dear Editor:

Will you kindly allow me space in your paper for the following story and its moral teaching, "The Story of the Wobbly Calf." Many years [illegible] forest. This calf was very wobbly and it made a very wobbly path The mother of this calf followed the calf and she went in the same wobbly path. The boy who was driving this wobbly calf followed in the same wobbly path. By and by men rode horse back through this forest and they also went by the wobbly path until they called it the bridle path. Years afterward this community built up and wagons and buggies went that way, but, alas they still followed the wobbly path. By and by a city grew around this wobbly path and it became one of their main streets, but the citizens of that city said it will not do to change our wobbly street.

Mr. Editor, there were some in that city who grew very tired of the wobbly street and insisted on it being made straight, and over the protests of those who said they had wobbled for many years and could continue to wobble till the end of their days, the street was straightened, and a good hard road built, and now all its citizens began to rejoice and even the wobbly ones soon saw what a great improvement it was from the old wobbly street with its mud up to the axles of buggies and wagons.

Now, Mr. Editor, it seems to the writer that this story has a moral lesson for us today. We have just voted on the question of whether the old wobbly road shall continue of not and the writer was very much surprised to see that some still thought the old wobbly road was the best. But I think that time will show that they are very much mistaken when we get our good roads which will undoubtedly build up our county and bring it to the front as an energetic county and one eager to be among the best. I am reminded of the story of the man who went home drunk, this of course was in the old days. He staggered up to a policeman and said, "Misher Policeman, hic, will you please tell me, hic, hic, which is the other side of the street." "Why," said the officer, "it is over there of course." "Well shay," said the fellow, "hic, hic, that is funny, I was just over there and a fellow told me it was over here."

Moral: get on the right side of the street.

A Cass Citizen.

COLORED EXHIBITS—J. E. Banks Manager.

The above is the organization of the Pocahontas County Fair. Z. S. Smith [illegible] by the Marlinton Board of Trade. Each department has a responsible head, who is backed up by a cabinet of district managers, who in turn will appoint assistants wherever necessary or desrable.

Mr. Smith has communicated with a great many of the committee, and they have signified their willingness and intention of doing whatsoever they can to put the Fair over.

The manager of the sheep department is Wise Herold of Marlinton. Few, if any one, in the county has been more successful in handling sheep, or in building up a flock of top notchers. Each year his flock was improved by the cuttng out of the poorer and older ewes and the addition of the choicest lambs. His flock of several hundred would clip near six pounds of wool, and the lambs weigh with the best.

No part of the country is better adapted to the raising of sheep than the Greenbrier Valley. This writer has never known of a real sheep man, who knew and liked the business, who did not make money.

The management has done the proper thing in making arrangements for a sheep exhibit, and it is hoped the sheep raisers will get busy and make the sheep show a big one.

Your Future Depends On Your Thrift

The world gives all men and women what they ask for.

If they are content with a mere living, they will receive that, and no more.

On the other hand, if they have a definite plan in life, if they spend wisely and save systematically, they cannot fail to be successful.

Money saved will provide for sickness and other emergencies; it will build the home, educate the children, create opportunities, and blaze the way to Independence and Success.

DOES MAM KILL HIMSELF

It is not the number of years a person has lived, but the number they have yet to live, that is the measure of age. It is said that some are old at forty and some young at seventy.

A high blood pressure is an indication of hardened arteries, and hardened arteries mean old age. It is, therefore safe to say that since it is possible to prevent the hardening of arteries it is equally possible to prevent old age for a considerable time. This may be done by maintaining a good digestion, by eating proper food which is largely vegetable and thoroughly masticating it. It may be done by keeping regular hours, with proper habits and proper but not violent exercise.

The modern tendency to live a fast life is responsible for many of the ills of old age, cerebral hemorrhage, paralysis, heart and kidney troubles are most often only the result of the sowing of wild oats in earlier days.

"A night with Venus means three years with Mercury" is more than a truth; it means the hardened arteries of a syphilitic old age, for syphilis—one of our unnecessary and preventable diseases—is a most prolific cause of hardened arteries. The man or woman who takes chances and contracts this disease does not die a natural death, he kills himself. He deliberately commits moral suicide, and, unknowingly, physical suicide as well.—U. S. Public Health Service

Dear old Pocahontas Times:

I have constantly and anxiously searched your columns that I might locate an announcement like the following—(on a certain time and at a certain place mentioned) We urge that all the people throughout Pocahontas county meet for the great purpose of enjoying together one of those much beloved Musical Associations, which very much endeared our hearts, and exhilerated our very soul with a disposition of higher musical intelligence and enthusiasm. It brought us together in a cause imperative, and a purprse which was noble. It drove from our minds the thought of a worldly hardened life. It enlivened every spiritual function and eliminated to some extent self gratification. It enlarged our musical ability and social disposition. It brought us together as a unit in one great cause. It also stamped almost indelibly, the thought of being one of the important factors to a higher standardization in life, and a great accomplishment we may assess in the life to come. And may it be that many of the old soldiers of musical glory (and not the cross) lift high its standard and push forth with untiring courage and ambition, until our banner is waving victorious in every church and home.

WEBSTER COUNTY

From Moccasin Tracks, by W. C. Doddril.

The last elk seen in Webster county was killed in the Gauley river above the mouth of Straight creek, more than one hundred years ago. A man by the name of Cottle, who lived at Cottle Glade, in Nicholas county, was returning from a trip to Greenbrier county by the way of Elk river. At the Chestnut Bottom ford, some distance above the mouth of Bergoo, he saw a large elk. He immediately returned to the nearest settlement for men, dogs, guns and pack horses. The trail was followed across the headwaters of Bergoo and Leatherwood to a place on Sign-Board ridge, near where John R. Baughman now lives. The afternoon being far spent, the leashes were slipped from the dogs and they started in eager pursuit, bringing their quarry to bay in the Gauley. The hunters followed as fast as the rough nature of the country would permit. When they arrived at the river their flint lock rifles would not fire. They had been loaded and primed in the morning and carried in the rain all day. Cottle, who always carried a hatchet in his belt, waded into the water to his armpits, and seizing the elk by one horn, chopped with such good will that the huge animal was soon dispatched and dragged to the bank, where those engaged in the chase held a regular Indian war dance around the fallen monarch of the forest. The next day they had a sylvan barbacue One of the hunters became deathly sick from eating too much marrow, but his life was saved after an application of the most severe remedies known in backwoods medical practice. In after years, when Cottle spoke of his exciting and dangerous adventure, he always remarked. "By the living Lord, I hewed him down."

Buffaloes were probably the first distinguished visitors to the now famous Webster Springs. They came here in vast herds to drink of the saline water of the "Fork Lick." This lick, or spring, is just below the steel bridge that crosses the Elk. At the time in which the buffaloes visited the lick, the entire river flowed over by the "Golden Shore" and the lick was in the bottom instead of in the bed of the river, as it is now. The buffaloes sometimes traveled almost a hundred miles to drink the water, making deep roads called "buffalo traces" by the first settlers. The space of more than a century of time has not entirely obliterated these roads in the clay soil and shale on the sides of the Elk mountains. When the settlers found out the character of the water of the lick, they boiled it in iron kettles and made a very inferior quality of salt, there being considerable quantities of iron and sulphur in the water. These salt-makers found scores of buffaloes quietly ruminating in the shade of the trees surrounding the lick. Their meetings were not always peaceable ones. Battles royal often occurred between the leaders of herds from different localities. They would remain in the vicinity of the lick for two or three days before returning to the rich pasturage from whence they came. The last buffalo seen in Webster was killed by Colonel Isaac Gregory between the Back Fork and the Elk just before the war of 1812. The place where he was killed has since been called Buffalo Bull knob in commemoration of the event. Immense numbers of elk and deer also frequented the lick.

John A. Simpson, farmer,—I wonder when ambitious cities will learn that it is a dangerous business to be everlastingly campaigning for a greater population. Nearly every town and city in the United States had one slogan, "More population for 1920." This has been going on for the last fifty years until we see our farm population decreased to the danger point. The 1920 census will show five million less people living on the farms in this country now than there were in 1910. It will show an increase of population for the nation of twenty millions. This means twenty-five million more people in the towns and cities and five million less people to feed them. Unless these city folks can find a substitute for bread, meat and potatoes, something serious is going to happen.

FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

To the Voters of Greenbrier and Pocahontas Counties:

I announce myself a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Judge of the 20th Judicial Circuit, comprising Pocahontas and Gteenbrier Counties, subject to the action of the duly selected delegates to the Judicial Convention to be held in Lewisburg, Greenbrier County, West Virginia, on the second Tuesday in August, 1920.

Your support is respectfully solicited.

CIVIL WAR REMINISCENCE

Some Recollections of "61-65"
By John A. Windom C. V. Co. B. 25th, Va, in Randolph Enterprise.

I was in the battle of Rich Mountain and I know that various reports of the fight on top of the mountain are incorrect. There were only three companies and two pieces of artillery on our side. There were six thousand Union soldiers engaged. Col. Pegram was our commanding officer. Our other forces were left at the breastworks to try to hold General McClellan back—a few hundred to hold back many thousands. They outnumbered us ten to one.

The retreat started on the 9th, of July. We were trying to get to General Garnett, who was on Laurel Mountain. We lay in the woods all day and traveled at night. We were three days and nights without food. On the evening of the last day we came to a house below Elkins. They said it was the home of a family of Kittles, and they were southerners Our men crowded in the house and the ladies began to mix up corn bread to cook for us but our men were too hungry to wait for them to cook it. They ate the rough dough. I was outside when a young girl came up with a bucket of milk and a cup. She gave me the cup and nothing ever tasted better to me than that warm milk. A few years ago I was in Elkins attending the Fair. Outside the Fair Grounds I found an old couple living in the last house on the right hand side of the road. After talking to them a little while I found that the old lady was the airl who gave me the milk in July 1861.

One company in that battle was commanded by Capt. Moomaw of Pendleton County. When we were forced to surrender, just about the time General Garnett was killed over in Tucker Co., Capt. Moomaw's Company escaped, and, as many of them as could get there, met in Franklin and they kept on fighting. He was later in the war made a Colonel.

The real fight on the top of the mountain only lasted fourteen minutes. There were about forty killed on each side and all were buried in the same trench. We all left in the night. Col. Pegram rode to the top of the mountain and learned that the northern pass-word was "Indian." He came back and gave it to us, and whenever we were stopped we gave the word "Indian" and went on. In all the years I was in the service this experience in Randolph County was the hardest. We were paroled by General George B. McClellan and it was almost twelve months before I was exchanged. Then I went in the cavalry and I was in about fifty-two battles in all. I never had a scratch.

I am a great admirer of Stonewall Jackson. I saw him often in the war and I think one of the causes of his wonderful success was his ability to surprise the enemy. He always did the thing least expected. If he found a good road, and a bad one, he had his men take the bad one. Sometimes he left the road entirely and had them go through the woods. In this way he frequently attacked from the one point of all others least expected.

I think his constant riding through the woods explains, in part, his habit of riding with his hand held before his face. Another trait that contributed to his success was his secretiveness. On one occasion General Lyons in Staunton said:

"General Jackson what is your next move?"

Jackson said:

"General Lyons can you keep a secret?"

His reply was:

"Yes, General."

So can I." said Jackson, "I was in Harrisonburg, standing in the telegraph office, when the message came that Jackson had died after a wound at Chancellorsville."

That was the worst news General Lee ever received. If he had lived it all might have been different. Jackson never knew defeat. In fact we weren't defeated in the end. When Sherman's army burned a stretch forty miles wide through the Carolinas and Georgia to Savannah, and Phil Sheridan burned all the food, and the mills, in the valley of Virginia we were all just starved out. We could get nothing to eat for the men, and the women and children at home were starving too. Burning up all the supplies from the people at home ended the war sooner, but I am glad our people did not retaliate when they were on northern soil and had the chance. With the exception of the burning of Chambersburg, I, never heard of a Southern Officer fighting with fire, and we never fought women or children.

CALVIN THOMAS PRICE

Who went home to God on December 18, 1919.

By ANNA L. PRICE

I'm thinking of a little child
Whom now we cannot see:
The willing mind, the pleasant smile,
The soul that seemed so free from guile,
A rose-bud on the tree.

Close clinging to the parent stem,
But open to the storm;
With all the care around it cast,
On rushed the sudden wintry blast,
To scathe the tender form.

We miss our rose-bud from its place,
We seek the silent tomb;
But in a sheltered garden spot,
Where chilly tempests linger not,
It will unfold and bloom.

PROHIBITION

PERSONAL LIBERTY AND STATES RIGHTS

Personal Liberty has always been moft highly prized and most jealously guarded by man and rightly so. In the savage state man enjoys it to the utmost degree. Dryden says:

"I am free as nature first made man,
Ere the base laws of servitude began,
When wild in woods the noble savage ran."

As society—government—civilization developed, individual man was called on to surrender his personal liberty for the good of the community. In the age of chivalry it was the right of the noble baron to ride forth at the head of his knights, fall upon a neighbor, kill him and annex his land. In the old days in a controversy it was the personal right of one of the parties to decline a trial in court and instead to challenge his creditor to mortal combat. They undertook to settle disputes by brute force, by "wager of battle," as Nations still do in this age of reason, and whichever killed the other demonstrated the righteousness of his cause. In later times the manufacture of one's rye or corn into whiskey, without let or hinderancs, was a personal right in our own country. As civilization progressed these and countless other rights were taken away from the individual for the common good. The loss of the last mentioned right occasioned the "Whiskey Rebellion" when President George Washington sent an army into Pennsylvania to put it down. Sacrifice of personal liberty, either forced or voluntary, has characterized every step of human progress. The noblest declaration of the principle was made by Paul, "If meat make my brother to offend I will eat no flesh while the world stands, lest I make my brother to offend." The question then is not as to the right of society to deprive the individual of personal liberty for the good of all but whether the benefits of society justify such action.

Prohibition, I have shown in a former communication, has greatly reduced crime, lessened disease, emptied jails, wards of hospitals and Keeley Cures, while it has increased legitimate business and the general happiness of the greater part of society. Can there be any question then of the propriety of depriving the individual of alcoholic drinks in the interest and for the advancement of the human race?

Admitting, however, the truth of the above, many set forth the infringement of States Rights as their reason for opposition to Prohibition as now constituted by law. They are honest in this belief which they hold by heritage and as a matter of individual judgment. While we respect their views, it is aosurb for such shates as New Jersey, Rhode Island and Connecticut, in order to save their "booze" to begin a blatant clamor for States Rights. Where were these states when 1862 sounded the death knell of States Rights? Can such mockery and hypocricy make this country "as wet as the Atlantic Ocean" as New Jersey's Governor boasted that he would do. However much we may lament it. States Rights is now an abstract doctrine, still honored in our hearts but of practical force only in a day that is gone. The tattered shreds of this great doctrine which survived the Civil war have been destroyed by the interpretation put upon the interstate clause of the Constitution. Moreover, it has just been determined by the U. S. Supreme Court a State has no right to make a game law for its own people within its own confines in conflict with a Federal Statute. The arbitrament of war and the decisions of Federal Courts have not left enough of States Rights for honest men to fall out about and certainly not enough to enable others to inundate the country with the Atlantic Ocean.

We have all heard of that child of alcohol "Dutch" courage. It is possible that New Jersey, Rhode Island and Connecticut have discovered a new brand—"Dutch" patriotism?—Charlottesville Progress.

ELECTION DECISION

Charleston, W. Va

An important decision of the supreme court has to do with the signing of the affirmation book at the recent primary. The court ruled that signing of the affirmation book has no part in the returns, and the county court has no authority to throw out precincts or votes, because of failure to sign the affirmation book.

The suit was styled Hiram Sizemore F. E. Shannon and James P. Cooper, against the County Board of Canvassers of Wyoming County, the three being candidates for the Republican nominations for sheriff, prosecuting attorney and assessor.

These three candidates for the Republican nominations in Wyoming county were apparently defeated at recent primary by reason of the county court's refusing to count the votes from six precincts, due to the voters not signing the affirmation book. Upon appeal made to the supreme court, these candidates were successful, the court ordering the county board of canvassers to count votes from these precincts.

"The county court, sitting as board of canvassers of the returns of a primary election, have no authority or jurisdiction on the demand of a candidate voted for at such an election for a recount of the ballots cast at the several voting precincts to exclude such ballots upon the ground that the affirmation books required by section 13 of the primary election law were not signed by voters as required by said state, such affirmation books constitute no part of the returns of said election to be canvassed or considered by such canvass board. The sole jurisdiction of such board is to canvass the returns which the law election officials do make to them and to declare the result as shown on on the face thereof."

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTIONS

Whereas, Section 29 of Chapter 79 of the Acts of the Legislature of West Virginia, Session of 1919, makes it a duty of the County Executive Committee to arrange for mass conventions to be held in each of the Magisterial Districts of the County for she purpose of selecting delegates to the Judicial Convention to be held for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the Judge of the Circuit Court:

Therefore, be it resolved,

That pursuant to said section 29 of chapter 79 of said Acts of 1919, the Democratic Executive Committee of Pocahontas County West Virginia, hereby calls mass conventions to be held by the Democratic voters of said County, at the places in said Districts hereinafter designated ond Tuesday the 3rd day of August, 1920, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of selecting and appointing delegates to the Democratic Judicial Convention to be held in the town of Lewisburg, Ggeenbrier county, West Virginia, on the 10th day of August, 1920, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Judge of the Eleventh Judicial Circuit, composed of the Counties of Greenbrier and Pocahontas, and which mass conventions for the several magisterial districts of this County, shall be held at the following places in the respective districts:

For Greenbank District: At the High School Building, Greenbank.

For Edray District: At the Court House in the town of Marlinton.

For Huntersville District: At the School House in the town of Huntersville.

For Little Levels District: At the High School building in the town of Hillsboro.

It shall be the duty of the members of this Committee in each respective district to attend said mass conventions and to call conventions to order, and designate the temporary chairman and secretary thereof. And in case no member of this committee be present, then some known Democrat shall call the said convention to order, and in like manner designate the temborary organization.

Each of the said mass conventions shall appoint one delegate for each one hundred votes or fraction thereof of more than fifty cast in each respective district at the November 1916 election for Woodrow Wilson for President, that is to say, the said mass conventions shall appoint the following number of delegates;

Greenbank District (806 votes) eight delegates.

Edray district (441 votes) four delegates.

Huntersville District (173 votes) two delegates.

Little Levels District (429 votes) four delegates.

And said mass conventions shall also appoint a like number of alternates, who shall in the absence of the delegates be empowered to cast the vote of the said respective districts in the said Judicial Convention.

And the Chairman and Secretary of each respective convention shall certify the action of said conventions to this Committee, to a meeting of the same, required by law to be held, and which is hereby called to meet at the Court House in the town of Marlinton, at two o'clock p. m. on Thursday, the 5th day of August, 1920.

Be it further Resolved, that the Chairman and Secretary of this Committee may be directed to certify a copy of this resolution to the Democratic Judicial Convention to be held in the town of Lewisburg, on the 10th day of August, and to publish the same in the Pocahontas Times.

L. H. MOOMAU, Chairman.
E. G. HEROLD, Secretary.

A MODERN NIMROD

L. V. McWhorter's Border States.

The following interesting letter was a reluctant compliance with the request of my father for a brief synopsis of a hunter's career. Bearing no date, it was written in April 1907, and is the record of a typical mountaineer, a simile of the hundreds who have spent their lives in killing game throughout the ranges of the mighty Alleghenies. In 1889, my father visited Mr. Arbogast, and went with him to one of his bear traps some three or four miles from his house and up the Greenbrier River. The trap was constructed of logs, and contained a yearling bear, which was dead. The hunter had delayed his rounds one day too long.

"Dear Dr. J. M. McWhorter:

I will try to answer a few of your questions. I killed first deer in 1848 with a flint lock rifle. About 1852 I had the lock changed to percusion. I killed the majority (of deer) with this mountain rifle. In 1878 I got a 45-60 winchester. The first fall after I had the flint lock changed I killed 8 deer, next fall 20; next fall 25. After that I killed from 25 to 30 every fall. 32 was the most I killed in one fall. I killed 2 to 5 Red Deer every summer which were not counted in fall hunts at that time. I killed two at one shot 3 different times. I killed 4 a day 2 (twice) I killed 5 in half day out of six I saw with muzzle loader. I made an estimate I have killed between 6 and 7 hundred deer. 25 was the highest number I saw in one day—I killed and caught several Bear—I shot one wolf and poisoned and caught several others in trap We have had 8 sheep killed in sight of house and many less numbers killed at different times by wolves, bears and panthers. I killed 2 panthers in one day. My father had a dog that treed 11 panthers that he killed. Dog went out on his own accord and treed one. Panther came down and killed the dog. Was snow on the ground—was a young dog along with him came back next morning wounded by the panther. Father took his back track to where the old dog was killed. The panther had carried him into a laurel thicket and had eaten him about half up and was laying by the dog. When father followed the trail to where the dog was the panther walked away Father went about two hundred yards in the thicket. Panther had stopped twice in that distance til he saw Father coming, so he thought. Was a soft snow in April which made things plain.

A bear came at night when I was a small boy father was not at home—took a small hog from where they lay at night before we had gone to bed; heard it squeal as the bear carried it off. Must have been 200 yards away when stopped squealing. The hog bed was about 50 yards from the house. Second night after, it came back caught a fat hog in pen about 30 feet from house. Father heard it squeal went out with gun was too dark to see it. He hallooed and as it climed over pen he shot at the noise did not hit it. I had a salt lick for deer at the root of a chestnut tree; deer and groundhogs dug down through the roots. Went there one morning to salt it—a deer had put its head down between the roots got its head fast was dead, and warm yet. I had killed a number of deer there before and after—I killed an eagle that had swallowed about 6 inches of a deer's rib one end was broken off slanting very sharp the other end being a joint was round. This end was in its craw the other end stuck out about 2 1-2 inches to one side of back bone. The part that stuck out was bleached as white as a bone that had lain on the ground several years, and wore as smooth as if it had been done with sand paper. I suppose in using its wings the feathers wore it smooth.

I only had one close call in the woods that I know of. Was out hunting snow was about one foot deep commenced sleeting in a short time crust on snow bore me up and slick as glass. Feet slipped from under me was on a steep hillside. Down the hill I went feet front about 30 yards to a large log, the gun stopped against the log. I went over turned head in front about 30 yards, run into a bunch of dead brush which caught in my clothes by breaking off, the snags caught which I think saved me from getting killed or badly hurt. It was about 100 yards to stream of water nothing in way to stop me. I worked my way back to where my gun stopped at log, by breaking through the snow crust with heel of shoes. Then used breech of gun to break through crust of snow, until I got down to a stream of water which led to river and home. I met Father about half a mile from home going to look for me. I was born in a cabin 20 feet from the house I now live in, 72 years ago 6th of last March 1907 lived here all the time.

I wish I had kept a statement of every day's hunt during my life taken down every evening. I give this as a true statement &ct.

Kindest Regards to any one who by chance may read this statement.

A. M. V. Arbogast.
Dunlevie, Pocahontas Co. W. Va.

Henry De Man.—Of all the European countries, Belgium, that seemed the hardest hit by the war, has been the quickest to recover. One year after the armistice, the output in all but a few industries had again reached the pre-war level. The number of employed workmen, which was about 700,000 in November, 1918, was less than 100,000 a year later. Emigration of labor is hardly above the prewar rate. The cost of living is only about two-thirds of what it was a year ago, and in spite of the favorable foreign exchange, the downward trend continues. The most characteristic fact of all is perhaps that the output of coal which in most countries is going down steadily has increased continuously and is now practically as high as before the war.

WOOL MARKET

One of the very few important commodities that has decreased in price in the past year is raw wool. With the price of cloth, clothing and all materials into which the use of wool enters being quoted at prices enormously high the price of wool has dropped to pre-war figures. A wool merchant was sought for an explanation of this. Isaac Hirsch, head of the firm of Hirsch Bros., wool and hide dealers in this section for more than thirty years, made the following statement for the Evening Times:

"I am asked every day, 'What is wrong with wool?' The answer is not hard to find.

"In 1914, before the beginning of the World War, the average price was 25c. In 1917 it rose to 60c; in 1918, under Government control, it went to 70c, and today it is 39c, and may go lower. The reason for this slump is partly explained by the fact that at the beginning of the war, England immediately assumed control and purchased all wool raised in its possessions; this included Australia and New Zealand, which are the largest wool producing countries. This supervision, or control, ended on June 1st of this year, causing an enormous quantity of wool to be thrown on the market. Aside from this, our Government had left a large supply after the war ended, some of which has been sold at public auction, but there yet remains fifty million pounds, for which the Government cannot find a buyer. It is certainly parodoxical that after the great use and waste of wool during the war that there should yet remain such an enormous over-supply. We produce annually three hundred million pounds and our average consumption is about five hundred million pounds; consequently, we must import almost as much as we produce. But, there is no trouble to do this, as these is much over a billion pounds of wool lying in Australia today; and South America also has a very large quantity.

"One naturally must sympathize with the wool growers; the winter was a hard one, all kinds of feed were scarce and high—both cattle and sheep were underfed and came through in poor condition to withstand the later storms—as a matter of fact, losses were heavy; and naturally, farmers were hoping that a good price for their wool would recoup them for a good share of their losses and that this would be supplemented by a good lambing season—but, both sources of revenue have failed. The manufacturing situation is also bad. The textile mills are either closing down or working three or four days a week. The prime cause of this is the scarcity of funds, which has scared not only the manufacturer but the retailer—who in turn, has cancelled his orders. It is frequently stated that the decline in wool would cause a great decline in clothing. This may occur, but the fact remains that in an all-wool suit of clothes there is not five dollars worth of wool There is a movement on foot by the farmers throughout the country to hold their wool. Whether this is wise only the future will tell.

"Taking a broader view, the ebb tide of high prices must be stemmed; if such an expedient as holding wool will revive the market, it would be a miracle. It seems the result can only be to delay, not avert, the inevitable readjustment of values."—New York Evening Times.

LONE SCOUTS

Dear Editor: Will you please announce in The Times that a Lone Scout Rally will be held in Pocahontal county about the middle of August. All Lone Scouts of this county are cordially invited to attend the Rally. Various Scout topics will be taken up, games played, swimming contests held, and many other things. Every Scout in Pocahontas County should get in touch with me immediately, either by mail or personally. I would also like for boys who wish to join the Lone Scout organization to write to me at once.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Miss Blanche Dilley which occurnear Rimel, July 2, 1920. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Dilley, of Renick, and was 27 years of age. Her mother and one little sister preceded her to the grave several years ago. She leaves her father one brother, O. M. Dilley, of Frost; one sister, Myrtle Dilley, of Renick, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn her death. Funeral services were conducted at New Hope Church by Rev. C. B. Rutledge, of Frost, July 4, and her body laid to rest by her mother at the old home place. May she rest in peace.

A Friend.

John Burroughs.—I do not see that nature is any more solicitous about the well-being of a man than she is, say, about the well-being of trees. She is solicitous about the well-being of all life, so far as the conditions of life favor its development and continuance—men and trees alike. But all have to run the gauntlet of some form of hostile forces—the trees one kind, man another. What I mean is that evil waits upon all—hindrances, accidents, defeat, failure, death.

VOL. XXXVIII NO 42 — MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, AUGUST 5, 1920 — $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

CHAUTAUQUA

Miss Gertrude Gilbert, advance lady for Chautauqua, was in Marlinton this week assisting in making arrangements for Chautauqua which comes to Marlinton for five days, beginning August 31 and ending September 4.

At a meeting Monday night Dr. Solter was elected chairman, Dr. E. G. Herold, secretary, and W. J. Yeager, treasurer. Hospitality S. N. Hench; publicity, Calvin W. Price; grounds, B. B. Williams; ticket sales, F. M Sydnor; Junior Chautauqua, Mrs. E. M. Richardson.

The program promises better than ever. It it published in another column of this paper.

The season tickets will be sold for $2.50 Each ticket good for ten admissions. Single admissions are 50c for afternoons and 75c at night—a total of $6.25 for the ten entertainments. Two afternoons and two nights at the single rate pay for a season ticket.

The guarantors, about forty in number, have securred Chautauqua by guaranteeing the sale of 400 or more tickets. They take this risk for the good of the community, and not for gain. All they have in it is a good deal of hustling around in an already busy season.

BUT IT IS WORTH WHILE

The following are the men who guarantee Chautauqua to be a success in Marlinton this year—

S. N. Hench, Fred Gehauf, F. B. Mowry, H. C. Solter, M. S. Wilson, Amos Wooddell, Calvin W. Price, F. M. Sydnor, E M. Richardson, C. J. Richardson, F. R. Hunter, Geo P. Moore, J. A. Sydenstricker. H. Williams, A. G. Killingsworth, R. B. Slavin, Frank King E. W. Cochran, C. L Sheets, D. W. Williams, Wise Herold, W. J. Yeager T. B. Greene, W. A. Eskridge.

They meet at High School Saturday night, August 7 at 8 o'clock.

Tickets on sale Monday. August 9. Adults $2.50, children under 14 yrs. $1.00. A limited number of tickets.

LESS SUGAR IN JELLIES AND JAMS

One-fifth to one-quarter less sugar can be used in making jelly and jams, experiments made by household experts in the United States Department of Agriculture experimental kitchen indicate.

Another sugar saving wrinkle tested by the experiment kitchen is to add one quarter teaspoon of salt to each cup of fruit juice for jelly or pulp for jam, marmalade, and conserve. In the case of nonacid fruit this makes the absence of the full amount of sugar less noticeable. The salty taste will disappear after the product has stood for a few weeks, but the flavor will be much the richer for the addition of the salt. Salt was so used in England during the war, and the method suggested was based on reports of the process.

With fruits of pronounced flavor, or where lemon and orange peel or spices are used for flavoring those with mild flavor, various sirups take the place of part of the granulated sugar. Usually half and half is the proportion used in substitution.—U. S. Department of Agriculture.

DEER COMMITS SUICIDE

"We were nearing Petersburg last Friday afternoon," says H. E. Babcock in Randolph Review, "and were just rounding a curve below the Hanging Rocks when the train came to a sudden stop. With others I got out to see what was the matter. There on the track in front of the engine we saw the engineer and fireman struggling with the task of removing the remains of a big buck deer, the sight of which lying on the middle of the track had caused the engineer to whoa

"Fed Pancake, proprietor of Highstone Deer Park near Romney, happened to be on the train and he explained the presence of the dead body of the deer on the track by saying that the animal undoubtedly had been hard pressed by dogs and rather than be captured or killed had leaped over the edge of the cliff 300 feet to the track below, deliberately committing suicide.

KILLS SCRUB PUREBRED

"Scrub purebred sires as well as common scrubs should be eliminated"

Acting on this policy of the United States Department of Agriculture in connection with the better sires movement, a poultry breeder recently killed a cockerel of pure breeding. The bird was badly shaped and had faulty feet.

In reporting the incident to the department the poultryman, who lives in Yates county, N. Y. enrolled his flock of more than 250 fowls in the "Better Sires—Better Stock campaign. The movement, which is nation wide, is aimed at improving the quality of livestock through a wider use of good purebred sires in all classes of farm animals.

Mountain Grove, Va.—This entire community was shocked and distressed at the news of the sudden death of Harper R. Chestnut on July 27, 1920 at the Charleston Chemical Plant, Bell, W. Va. He met his death in the faithful performance of his daily duties at the plant. He, with another employee was working on a job assigned them and in the temporary absence of his co-worker, Harper was overcome by gas and was later found dead at his post. It is hard indeed to be reconciled to the loss of one so young and one whose life was so full of promise, but the assurance that our heavenly Father does all things well makes us know that sometime we shall understand and helps us to submit to His will.

The deceased was twenty years, five months and two days old at the time of his death. He was the son of W. L. and Betty S. Chestnut. Besides his mother and father he is survived by four brothers: F. L Chesnut of Cass, A. J. Chesnut of Bell, W. Va, and Wilber Chesnut and Glen Chesnut of Mountain Grove, and five sisters: Mrs. J. C. Monroe of Charleston, Mrs. C. P. Hamrick of Cass, W. Va., Mrs. C. F. Webb of Warm Springs, Mrs. W. L. Hinkle of Brooklawn, N. J., and Miss Susie Chesnut of Mountain Grove. A number of nieces and nephews besides a host of warm friends remain to mourn his loss.

On July 29, 1920 at two o'clock the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery on Little Back Creek, the funeral and burial services were conducted by Rev. C. W. Reed of the Presbyterian Church at Warm Springs. All the sisters and brothers of the young man were present with the exception of Mrs. W. L. Hinkle of N. J.

The very large congregation at the funeral service bore witness to his place in the hearts of the people. He was held in high esteem by his fellow-workers and employers and a large circle of friends both here and elsewhere will ever hold his memory dear.

Sleep on, dear brother, sleep and rest
Lay thy head on thy Saviour's breast,
We love thee well but thy Saviour loves thee best.

—Wilber Chesnut.

Dr. H. W. McLaughlin writes us that the annual sale of the Augusta County Shorthorn Breeders Association will be held at Staunton on September 3. Fifty head will be sold at auction, 30 females and 20 bulls. Most of the females are cows and heifers bred to grandsons of White Hall Sultan. These cattle are consigned by breeders, offered in good condition, but not overdone. The Doctor is president of the association.

THE CORNER OAKS

The two white oaks at the foot of Marlins Mountain are now members of the Hall of Fame of Trees. The cut above is from The American Forestry Magazine, the editor of which kindly loaned it to The Times to use

The English government granted to the Greenbrier Company the right to locate 100,000 acres of land in whatever sized tracts that it desired. It is apparent that this grant following a similar grant to Lewis and Borden of five hundred thousand acres on the James River that it was granted under the misapprehension that the Greenbrier River valley lay east of the main Alleghany, for England claimed no rights against the Indians at that time to land west of the crest of the Alleghany for English settlers. John Lewis was the moving spirit in both projects founded on the scheme of importing families from the old country and forming a screen of settlers between the Indian country and the rich, ancient settlements east of the Blue Ridge.

Gen. Andrew Lewis was at that time a young man and a surveyor by profession and it was his work that located the lands in the Greenbrier Valley. It is a tradition here that in making that survey that John Lewis encountered the green-brier which grows so plentifully here and named the country Greenbrier. But it is evident that it had the name already from the simple fact that the right to survey was made out in the name of the Greenbrier Company.

It was on the 6th day of October, 1751, that Gen Andrew Lewis marked the two trees as a corner. He made a survey of 470 acres, taking in the bottom land on the river formed by entrance of Stony Creek and Knapps Creek. The lines were run so as to take in very little hill side. The call for two white oaks on a branch indicating that Marlins Run at that time flowed by the trees

So far as we have been able to discover, there are no other standing corner trees of any of the surveys made by Lewis at that time, and if this is a fact, the trees have the distinction of being the oldest marked corner trees standing in the Mississippi Valley.

Though the survey was made in 1751, and though the title dates from that time, the grant was refused by the London land office, no doubt on the ground s that it lay on the wrong side of the Alleghany Mountain The titles did not ripen for more than thirty years, when after the Revolutionary war, the Commonwealth of Virginia made it a pleasing duty to confirm the settlers in their titles.

Before the Revolutionary War the land in Virginia was granted by law in two ways: One by order of council and the other was for military service.

July 12, 1749, an order of council granted John Lewis and others the right to locate 800,000 acres beginning on the North Carolina line and running west and north in one or more surveys. This was called the Loyal Company. It was subsequent to the Lewis and Borden grant.

October 29, 1751, another order was given to the Greenbrier Company to locate 100,000 on Greenbrier River, north-west and west of the Cowpasture and Newfoundland.

Just what they called Newfoundland is more than we can figure out. Probably the lands of the Loyal Company.

Some small tracts were surveyed to sundry persons up to 1754, when an invasion of the Indians in this part of the country put an end to all further surveys until the King's proclamation of 1763, instructing the governor not to grant any lands on the waters of the Mississippi, and requiring those who had settled there to move back east of the mountain.

In 1773, the governor and council issued an order permitting all settlers to perfect their titles who had settled under agreement with the Greenbrier Company. But the flight of the governor soon after prevented any grants being signed.

In 1779, the legislature of Virginia passed an act to perfect the titles of settlers on the Western Waters, and under this act it was held that all persons who had land surveyed by the county surveyor under the order to the Greenbrier Company should be entitled to grants This by a decision of the court of appeals in May, 1783. And the grants to persons for military service were to be located so as not to interfere with these grants

This took care of a great number of persons who had made their homes in this valley on an understanding with the company that if the company ever could make them a title to the lands they would do so, otherwise they were to abide by the consequences, and it was on those terms that the first settlers came here.

It will be observed that the survey was made in the same month that the order was granted to the Greenbrier Company but at a day prior to that grant. The surveys never refered to the orders of council.

The form of an order of council was: On petition of A. B. leave is granted him to take up 400 acres lying in the county of C.

The town of Marlinton is built on the 470 acres. The trees were named the King George Oaks a number of years ago but the name did not take. Then some one started to call them the Charter Oaks, and while no one had any particular objection to calling them Charter Oaks, they speedily forgot the name, and the ancient name of Corner Oaks stands.

Some years ago Col. McGraw sent a tree doctor here and did several hundred dollars worth of work on the trees. A large filling of a cavity is to be seen in the picture.

A fine brick building has been put up by the trees since the picture was taken last winter, and the owner fearing that the tree might fall on it, cut down the largest oak, but the other stands and is apparently good for a few hundred yeirs more.

COUNTY COURT

County Court was in special session on last Saturday.

The Bank of Marlinton and T. S. Dulaney were relieved of erroneous taxation

The First National Bank and the Bank of Hillsboro were designated as County Depositories.

The sheriff was instructed to buy four fire extinguishers.

Two voting precincts were established in the town of Cass. The new place of voting is at Blackhurst's store.

The sum of $9,878.55 was apportioned to the Marlinton and Buckeye road from the Federal and State Aid Funds.

Court will be in session next Tuesday to lay the levy.

JUDGE DAYTON DEAD

Judge Alston G. Dayton, died last Friday, July 40, at Battle Creek, Michigan, where he had gone for his health, which had not been good for some months. Burial at his home town of Philippi, Barbour County. His age was 62 years. He is survived by his wife and their son, Arthur.

Judge Dayton was the Federal Judge of the Northern District appointed in 1905 by President Roosevelt. He was known to many people of Pocahontas county, having spent his summer vacation at Minnehaha Springs for many years.

Mrs. McCoy's Sunday School class of boys and Mrs Light's class of girls spent a delightful time on the lawn in front of the parsonage Tuesday evening.

Marlinton 4, Ronceverte 5, was the result of the base ball game at Ronceverte last Saturday. The score gives an idea what a good close game was played.

The Junior Missionary Society of Methodist church gave a demonstration of home mission work among the mountain people of our southern highlands, at the church Wednesday night.

W. B. Johnson caught two 5 pound catfish and a lot of two and three pound bass at the Kee eddy last Saturday. It was an old time string of bass.

Judge Henry Haymond, an aged and prominent citizen of Harrison county, died last week.

Cloverlick Farm for Sale

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County West Virginia rendered at the June Term 1920 in a chancery cause there inpending of Mozell Dorr Guardian vs C. P. Dorr Jr. et als the undersigned Guardian of the Infant children of the late Chas. P. Dorr will, on WEDNESDAY, September 1st. 1920 in the town Marlinton, West Virginia, at the front door of the Court House of said county, at one o'clock P. M. offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder the grazing farm in said county known as the Clover Lick Farm of the said Chas P. Dorr, lying near Clover Lick in said county, and containing by recent survey 1,886.7 acres.

In as much as the property would probably sell for more if made accessible to bidders with smaller, amounts the farm has been divided into three tracts, Tract "A" containing 288 acres and being the upper end of the said farm. Tract "B" containing 790.7 acres and being the middle of said farm; and Tract "C" containing 808 acres and being the lower end of said farm. Either one of these tracts or parcels would make a magnificent grazing farm, and the middle tract having a good residence and farm buildings would make a fine home for any one.

The farm will be offered first in the three parcels and then as a whole and the most advantageous sale will be the one reported to court. Possession of farm will be given March 1, 1921. The widow is to take her dower out of the funds arising from the sale, and the farm is offered free from widows dower and any other liens, incumbrances, claims or demands of any kind.

Terms of Sale. One Third cash, and the balance on a credit of one and two years, taking from the purchaser bonds good security bearing six per cent interest, interest payable annually on deferred payments, and the title to be retained as ultimate security.

Plots of the farm and the subdivisions thereof are on file in the Clerks Office with the papers in the suit, and also in the office of Guardians counsel, Wm. A. Bratton in Marlinton.

This is the chance of a life time. Not more than once in a generation s a farm like this offered for sale in the open market. The old Jacob Warwick Clover Lick Farm, has been celebrated for nearly a century. A few hours inspection will show the reason why.

This sale being under the direction of the Court is also subject to the confirmation of the court.

Mozelle Dorr, Guardian of Chas. P. Dorr Jr. Hazel Ruth Dorr, Bertie Louise Dorr, Jno. T. Dorr, and Zellie Irene Dorr, Infant Children of the late Chas. P. Dorr.

W. A. Bratton,
Attorney for Guardian.

WOOL DEALERS MORE OPTOMISTIC

While no reliable quotations are available wool traders are more optomistic than recently. The new clip is reaching eastern storage in large quantities, advances running from 15c to 25c per lb. Boston quotes unwashed delaine at 70 a 72c; halfblood clothing; 65 a 68; three-eights combing, 50 a 53; quarter-blood combing, 44 a 46c; and fine clothing, 60 a 62c, but these figures are merely nominal. Announcement is made by the American Woolen Co. that resumption of weaving will be deferred until the goods market comes to life. The British market is equally depressed, and all foreign bourses are dull. The domestic market is glutted with common wool which nobody wants. Odd lots of quarter blood fleeces have sold at 40c in Boston recently. All the good Government wool has been disposed of at $1.40 a1.60 clean, for the best combing grades.—Breeders Gazette.

Walter J. Thompson came home on Saturday from Alleghany Station, where he had been doing blacksmith work for the Peters Mountain Lumber Company.

Squire and Mrs. George R. Curry and their son Milburne, of Hillsboro, and Mr. and Mrs. McConaha and son of Cabin Creek, were guests at the home of Henry Overholt last Thursday.

Andy Hefner, of the Levels, suffered a badly broken leg by being kicked by a horse Tuesday. He was raking hay and the horse got in a yellow jacket's nest. Dr. McNeel was called and set the broken limb.

Dr. Charles B. Marshall. of Sunlight, was one of the young physicians to successfully pass the State Board at Charleston last week.

CARD OF THANKS

We, the parents, sisters and brothers of the deceased Harper Chesnut, wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy in our recent bereavement.

May God bless each one of you richly.

The work of grading the railroad up Spring Creek has been commenced. This will open up a fine timber and coal territory.

Your Future Depends On Your Thrift

The world gives all men and women what they ask for.

If they are content with a mere living, they will receive that, and no more.

On the other hand, if they have a definite plan in life, if they spend wisely and save systematically, they cannot fail to be successful.

Money saved will provide for sickness and other emergencies; it will build the home, educate the children, create opportunities, and blaze the way to Independence and Success.

The World Believes In Thrift

A geodly number of prosperous people in this community believe in it also. They deposit their savings in

The party of Marlinton young people who spent last week at the mouth of Beaver Creek, broke camp on Monday.

Davis and Elkins College

There are a few untaken rooms in the dormitories for young men and young women at Davis and Elkins College for the coming year.

There are five departments of study from which to select. The expenses are very moderate by reason of endowment, and the equipment is ample for the work offered.

Let us send you a catalog of Davis and Elkins College that you may know in detail of the many advantages in school of this kind.

Prohibition raises its hydrant head in this campaign. Word comes from various directions that certain thirsty souls hope to get beer back on the menu. It is what they call 2.75 beer which cheers but does not inebriate. We had said in our haste that 2.75 beer does inebriate but since that time it has been demonstrated to us by sound reasoning that went into the ears, that this opinion should be revised and modified and made to read that it inebriates those who have the capacity to hold a considerable quantity. As a matter of fairness it should now be stated that to those who are not so hollow that 2.75 beer is harmless and a healthy thirst quencher. With this light on the question, if beer does come back, it behooves the careful man to get his content measured and ascertain how much he can consume without deletrious effects and portion himself in the drinking of beer. And be sure that he does not lose his notch stick.

The dry amendment having been adopted by practically all the states, Congress passed a law to put the amendment into effect as it was in duty bound to do, but many of the men in the street and gutter claim that they were intemperate in the legislation and included belly-wash in the measure when they should have been more considerate of the German national drink. Come not between the German and his beer. Ceres wandering over the earth in search of her daughter taught men to make beer, and this is the first time that it has been universally banned in a nation. The Volstead bill was vetoed by the President and it went back to Congress who passed it over the veto. The beer makers took the act to the Supreme Court and that court held that Congress had the power to include beer in its drastic terms, and it put it up to the people to either obey the law or change it.

Harding voted for the Volstead act but so far as we have followed him in his account of himself he has not boasted of the performance. From far and near we hear that the beer drinkers hold this against him but so far we have not seen any Democratic editorial opinion which reproaches him for his prohibition vote. And they whisper around that Cox will get the votes of millions of beer drinkers as a sort of unearned increment because Harding voted for the Volstead act. It reminds us of the time that the laborers were all shouting for Roosevelt because they said that if he was elected they would get a dollar a day for their work without trouble. It used to make us so wild not to be able to argue effectively against the full dinner pail slogan, for no one can demonstrate future events. Cox is the only Governor of Ohio who ever controlled saloons and forced Sunday closing, and to do it had to shake hands with old man trouble. But he never hesitated. This was a strong positive force in behalf of temperance and as compared to the pale party vote of Harding on a party bill, it is a mountain to a mole hill. But the beer users make a distinction there that is unusually discriminating. Cox enforced a law as he was in duty bound to do. Harding passed a law that had objectional details and they hold him responsible.

The Supreme Court drove the truth home. It said that Congress was responsible and if the people did not like it, to elect a Congress that would change the law.

Both the great parties left the subject alone, and both parties yearn with a mighty yearning for the thirsty vote. What is the lesson that is to be learned by the politicians? It is never to nominate a member of Congress for president or any other man with a past.

In 1858, Abraham Lincoln had debates with Stephen A. Douglas in Illinois. It led up to the contest in 1860 when Lincoln defeated Douglass for president, both from the same state. In the famous first debate Douglas said of Lincoln that he had known him all his life and could remember when Lincoln could beat any of the boys wrestling, or running a foot race, in pitching horse-shoes, or tossing a copper; could ruin more liquor than all of the boys in the town together, and the dignity and impartiality with which he presided at a horse race or fist-fight excited the admiration and won the praise of everybody that was present and participated.

And it was on this bad eminence that Douglas tried to place Lincoln.

Then Douglas grew subtle in his charges. He referred to Lincoln as a grocery-keeper in the town of Salem. As we interpret this charge it was the same as if he was charged today with keeping a saloon.

Lincoln evidently knew exactly what he was hinting at for when he rose to reply Lincoln said: "The judge is wofully at fault about his early friend Lincoln being a 'grocery-keeper.' I do not know that it would be a great sin if I had been; but he is is mistaken. Lincoln never kept a grocery anywhere in the world. It is true that Lincoln did work the latter part of one winter in a little still house up at the head of a hollow."

The student of history will ask himself if the man Lincoln thus shamed by being forced to admit that he had distilled intoxicating liquor hid his diminished head and was forced out of public life? Not at all. Each year adds new lustre to his name and he at least is immortal.

A man who is a man is relied upon by all conditions and all classes.

It does much to restore our faith in the Republican party to see that they have nominated our old time friend Frank Lively for the Supreme Court of Appeals of this State. Hon. Geo. W. McClintic arose in the State Convention and named him and if anybody konws judicial timber that lawyer does. Ten matriculated and there were eminent names among them. Chas E. Hogg, by far the most famous West Virginia law writer; F. O. Blue, a lawyer with a national reputation; Chas. E. Carrigan, honest and upright, an old University school-mate of ours; J. O. Henson, regular wizard of a lawyer from the Eastern Pan Handle; Tracy Jeffords, one of the substantial practitioners of West Virginia, and others were in the field. Frank Lively has kept the even tenor of his way all these years and is the kind of a man that makes life endurable. The kind of a man that does his work and sleeps with his fathers unrewarded. But in this case he has received the highest honor that it is possible to extend to an earnest lawyer and we congratulate him and the State of West Virginia.

The Democrats held their State Convention at Wheeling last Saturday. Col. Watson presided. Koontz opened his campaign for the governorship. And Cox spoke to the convention. Cox explained to them that there was some unfinished business for the nation to take up after the election in regard to the great war in Europe. He intimated that it would have been finished long ago if it had not been for an intrigue in the Senate and that he intended not only to bring about the peace that the country is entitled to for having won this war, but to take steps to prevent future wars.

Presidential electors nominated were: C. L. Shaver, L. E. Tierney, J. W. Newman, Luther Carkscadon, S. W. Langfitt, S. H. Bowman, H. P. Bean, and J. S. Thurmond.

For Judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals, Hon. L. C. Somerville of Point Pleasant, was nominated. Mr. Somerville is an able lawyer and highly esteemed throughout the state. He was born in 1863, and commenced the practice of law in 1888. He is in every way fitted for the bench.

The meeting was harmonious and hopeful. But after Cox had met with the militant democracy of the State and passed the time of day, he went down to the river where he met about fifteen thousand of the kind that is going to elect him, and he spoke to them there and was well received by them.

Hon. Fred Ruckman of Mill Point, brought us a piece of rock the other day that we prize very highly. It is about two inches thick and has a surface measure of four by six inches and it is a fragment from the crust of the earth. On the one side it is moulded in a curious way to show 76 holes arranged in a lattice so that they appear in rows from any angle from which they are observed. The holes are slanting and each one shows the trace of a filament all lying in the same direction. It is a fine specimen of the numerous whatisit.

To those who are not satisfied with the reading of this riddle by us we would say that if any such will send us a postal card with his objections set forth we will read the card and thoughtfully file it away.

But when we say that the perfect cast is sacred to the memory of an ancient clathrate radiolarian protozoan, we feel sure that opposition to our theory will die away so far as the great mass of the reading public is concerned and they will let it go at that. We know our West Virginia, and know that it will be hard to get up an argument about any phase of the ife on this planet over a million years ago.

As we picture the hero of this artless tale, who will hereinafter be referred to as Rad for convenience, he was shaped like the common or ordinary berry pie. He had no legs, arms tail, eyes, ears, hands, feet or nose. He could not move. He lay on the bottom of the sea. On his top side he was latticed with perforations like the top of the pie. The careful cook cuts these little orifices in the top crust of the pie to keep it from exploding and blowing the stove up as though with a bomb. But Rad had to have these windows to his soul for without them he could not have lived. From each of the orifices there was a slender filament that was like a spine or bristle and these waved in the water and made Rad look like he needed a hair tonic or a shave. One or the other. But as the water washed over Rad the filaments and orifices took from it the food that was needed.

The outside of Rad was a membraneous shell or skin and inside he was something not much more substantial than slime. And so he lay and grew and knew not that in the course of ages that his descendants would improve until they produced a rip roaring descendant that would be called man with cunning enough to trace back every step between the day of Rad and the day of the Radical.

One day as Rad lay peacefully extracting his daily portion from the sea waves, there came a disturbance and a wave of mud rolled over the place and covered Rad up and flattened him out on the bed rock. And his time had come. But Rad was turned into stone and in the ages that ensued the mud was gradually washed away and Rad was uncovered and was to be recognized by the lattice like holes and the sign of the mark of each little filament of bristle each lying the same way marking the course of the wave of mud that went over him, and they are plain to be seen even unto this day.

Some more ages went by and the great deep was broken up, and the mountains arose as the earth crust wrinkled. When the earth movement was over, the bottom of the sea was turned into mountains and nature went to work to form them for higher grades of life. The piece of rock which was Rad was broken off, washed down a torrent, picked up by a descendant and is now on the desk of another descendant who believes that Rad was a good Rad but very stupid.

And this is the story of Rad.

It will be remembered that the famous murder trial of George Maltich, a Crotian, took place at the June Term of the Circuit Court, and it was a case that attracted wide attention because it concerned the killing of a man whose body was found in the woods on Cranberry in 1919. That year a number of bodies were found in the wilderness bearing marks of violence and great concern was felt by the public in this section of the state over these mysterious murders.

The defendant Maltich was a man of a very low order of intelligence and the usual difficulties arose that always occur when an American court and jury has to deal with foreigners. He was defended with considerable vigor by three members of the bar each one of whom had had more than a quarter of a century active experience in the practice of law. The trial court was particularly anxious that nothing be taken for granted as to the charges against the luckless defendant. The case had been matured against this defendant by one of the largest lumber corporations in the country and special prosecutors appeared and conducted the trial.

Among several of the points of defense was that the body found in the woods was not that of the missing man John Moslo, who was last seen in company of the prisoner. One of the most damning bits of evidence was a scrap of paper found by the body on which was written the following name and address: "Franciska Bronisel, 1167 Norwood Rd., Cleveland, O." A witness appeared, an intelligent Austrian who qualified also as an interpretor. His evidence was to the effect that the name on the paper was the name of a sister of John Moslo, and by a strange coincidence, he the witness had been with Moslo a short time before he disappeared, and that he had seen Moslo write that name on that piece of paper in his presence, and that evidence could not be shaken.

There was no time during the trial to investigate this point of evidence and the trial resulted in a verdict of guilty and the unfortunate defendant was sentenced to serve for life in the pen.

After the trial, counsel for the prisoner wrote to Mr. S. S. Saffold, a prominent citizen of Cleveland. Mr. Saffold spends his summers in this county and is widely known here. By birth he is an Alabamian and comes from a long line of lawyers and judges. He took an interest in the matter and hunted up the woman whose name was on the paper and she told him that she had a brother who had worked in the woods in West Virginia, in the Richwood country, but that brother had come from there and was now alive and well in the old country. She further said that his name was not Moslo. The investigation will be carried further and if it should hereafter appear that Moslo is alive something will be done for the relief of the convicted man.

Cloverlick Farm for Sale

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County West Virginia rendered at the June Term 1920 in a chancery cause there inpending of Mozell Dorr Guardian vs C. P. Dorr Jr. et als the undersigned Guardian of the Infant children of the late Chas. P. Dorr will, on WEDNESDAY, September 1st. 1920 in the town Marlinton, West Virginia, at the front door of the Court House of said county, at one o'clock P. M. offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder the grazing farm in said county known as the Clover Lick Farm of the said Chas P. Dorr, lying near Clover Lick in said county, and containing by recent survey 1,886.7 acres.

In as much as the property would probably sell for more if made accessible to bidders with smaller, amounts the farm has been divided into three tracts, Tract "A" containing 288 acres and being the upper end of the said farm. Tract "B" containing 790.7 acres and being the middle of said farm; and Tract "C" containing 808 acres and being the lower end of said farm. Either one of these tracts or parcels would make a magnificent grazing farm, and the middle tract having a good residence and farm buildings would make a fine home for any one.

The farm will be offered first in the three parcels and then as a whole and the most advantageous sale will be the one reported to court. Possession of farm will be given March 1, 1921. The widow is to take her dower out of the funds arising from the sale, and the farm is offered free from widows dower and any other liens, incumbrances, claims or demands of any kind.

Terms of Sale. One Third cash, and the balance on a credit of one and two years, taking from the purchaser bonds good security bearing six per cent interest, interest payable annually on deferred payments, and the title to be retained as ultimate security.

Plots of the farm and the subdivisions thereof are on file in the Clerks Office with the papers in the suit, and also in the office of Guardians counsel, Wm. A. Bratton in Marlinton.

This is the chance of a life time, Not more than once in a generation s a farm like this offered for sale in the open market. The old Jacob Warwick Clover Lick Farm, has oeen celebrated for nearly a century. A few hours inspection will show the reason why.

This sale being under the direction of the Court is also subject to the confirmation of the court.

Mozelle Dorr, Guardian of Chas. P. Dorr Jr. Hazel Ruth Dorr, Bertie Louise Dorr, Jno. T. Dorr, and Zellie Irene Dorr, Infant Children of the late Chas. P. Dorr.

W. A. Bratton,
Attorney for Guardian.

Notice of Trustees Sale

Acting pursuant to authority vested in me by virtue of a certain deed of trust, executed by L. S. Cochran, to me as trustee, for the Bank of Hillsboro, a corporation, bearing date the 6th day of November 1915, and on record in the office of the Clerk of the County Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia in Trust Deed book No. 9, at page 283; to secure a note of $4,000.00, bearing date as of the same day and payable four months after date to said Bank of Hillsboro, the same having been reduced to $3,736.00 as of the 6th day of July 1920; and default having been made in the payment of said note, and having been requested so to do by the said Bank of Hillsboro, I will, on Wednesday, the 1st day of September 1920, at One o'clock p. m. of that day, at the front door of the Court House of Pocahontas County, in the town of Marlinton, West Virginia, proceed to sell, at public auction to the highest bidder, the following real estate, to-wit:

Those certain lots, tracts or parcels of land, situate, lying and being in the town of Marlinton, West Virginia, and known and designated on the proper plat of said town, as Lots Nos. 13, 14, and 15, in Block No. 34, and being the same lots that were conveyed to the said L. S. Cochran by Andrew Price, Trustee, by deed bearing date the 24th day of March, 1914, and of record in Deed Book No. 50, page 358.

These lots have upon them a large concrete building, now used as a garage, and a one story frame building, used as a dwelling and barber shop.

Terms of sale, CASH on day of sale.

Given under my hand this the 2nd day of August, 1920.

A. P. EDGAR, Trustee.

Notice

At a Special Session of the County Court held for the County of Pocahontas, at the Court House thereof, on the 31st day of July, 1920.

It appearing to the Court that the public convenience and public good require that Voting Precinct No. 4, of the Greenbank District of this County, be divided and made into two precincts, there having been more than two hundred and fifty electors in said precinct at the last general election; and it further appearing to the Court that the public convenience and public good require that a part of the territory now embraced in voting Precinct No. 7, of said district, be included in Precinct No. 4, as herein after arranged.

It is therefore ordered by the Court that the lines of voting Precinct No. 4, of this County, be and are hereby changed as follows, to-wit:

PRECINCT NO. 4,

Beginning at a point on the Randolph County line, where the Shaver's Fork of Cheat River crosses the same, thence up the said Shaver's Fork of Cheat River to the head thereof, thence to the head of the west fork of Trout Rnn, thence down Trout Run, so as to include a part of the territory heretofore embraced in Precinct No. 7, but leaving T. R. Beverage in voting Precinct No. 7, to the C. and O. Railroad, thence west with the C. & O. Railroad to the Railroad "Y" below Cass, thence with the Railroad "Y" to the County Road, thence, continuing in a westerly direction, with the County Road to the first ford of Cold Run, thence parallel with the C. & O. Railroad to the Moses Spring Run on the line of the Edray District, thence with the said district to the Randolph County line, thence with said County line to the point of beginning.

And the voting place in said precinct shall be as heretofore established in the town of Cass.

PRECINCT NO. 8

And it further appearing to the Court that the public convenience and public good require that a new precinct be created out of the territory heretofore embranced in Precinct No. 4, and the Court proceeded to designate the lines and boundaries of said precinct, to be known as voting Precinct No. 8, in said Greenbank District, as follows, to-wit: Beginning at the point on the C. & O. Railroad track, where the line between the precincts No. 4, and No. 7, crosses the same, thence with the line of precinct No. 4, west with the C. & O. Railroad track, to the railroad "Y" below Cass, thence with the railroad "Y" to the County road, thence with the county road to the first ford of Cold Run, thence parallel with the C. & O. railway to the Moses Spring Run, on the line of the Edray District; thence in an easterly direction with the line of the said district to the line of precinct No. 3, as heretofore established, thence with the line of precinct No 3, in a northeasterly direction to the line of precinct No. 2, heretofore established, thence with the line of precinct No.2, to the line of precinct No. 7, thence with the same in a westerly direction to the point of beginning.

And the place of voting in this precinct shall be at Blackhurst's store building in east Cass.

And the Clerk of this Court is directed to publish a copy of this order for one month in the Pocahontas Times and the Marlinton Journal, two papers of opposite politics published in this county, and to post copies thereof as required by Section 6, of Chapter 3 of the Code.

S. L. BROWN,
Clerk.

VOL. XXXVIII NO 46 — MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, SEPT. 2. 1920 — $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

WOMEN'S CONVENTION

As Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee for Pocahontas County, Dr. L. H. Moomau has called a convention of the women Democratic voters, of the County, to be held at the Court house on Saturday, September 4th, at 2 o'clock p m.

The business before the Convention will be the election of two women from each of the four magisterial districts of the County as members of the Executive Committee, and to name a vice-president of said committee. It will be a ladies meeting from start to finish. A large attendance on the part of the woman who will vote the Democratic ticket is urged. Naturally a body thinks his own political beliefs are the ones that naturally appeal to smart people. But that aside, we think the Democratic party would appeal especially to the women voters this year. The League of Nations as a means to put an end to wars, is an issue between the parties. The Democrats have a forward looking program. On account of the friction between the progressive and standpat factions, the Republican party was unable to take a positive, definite stand on any issue.

If we know our women, while they deaply love an argument and a dispute, they insist on a specifying wherein, and we think we rather have the Republicans there.

Through the appointment of C. H. East, of the Gazette, Charleston, as temporary president of West Virginia, the Newspapermen's Cox Club of Cincinnati is extending its organization into this state, and it is expected that every Democratic newspaper, and many of those that are Republican, will be represented in club. Mr. East has already begun active work in organizing the state and the West Virginia division will be completed without delay. This association is novel in its work and is said to be the first movement of its kind among newspaper men supporting the candidacies of either Governor James M. Cox or Senator Warren G. Harding for president. Both candidacies have a special significance to newspaper men, because a newspaper publisher will be the next president of the United States. At one time both candidates were reporters. Members of the organization have no dues or obligations other than so support Governor for president.

MARLINTON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. J. M. Walker, Pastor.
Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.

Preaching at 11 a. m. 8 p. m. by the pastor. Reports from the meeting of Presbytery in session at Muddy Creek this week, will be given at the morning preaching service. E. D. King and the pastor are representing this church.

Preaching at Hamlin Chapel at 3:30 p. m. by the pastor.

Grand jury term of court next Tuesday, May 8th.

It will pay to go out of your way to see the fall hats at the Red House Store. Now on display.—Adv.

Hereafter no mail will be dispatched from this office on Sunday. The distribution of Sunday mail stopped July 1st. It being a moral issue there is nothing to be said by us.

The Womans' Christian Temperance Union will meet at the home of Mrs. Albert Moore on Upper Camden avenue, September 8th at 3 o'clock p. m. This being an important meeting a full attendance is desired.

Carpenters are at work on the extensive stables and pens on the Fair Grounds on Lower Camden. The dates are September 30, and October 1 and 2. The Fair promises to be a success. An expenditure of three thousand dollars in buildings and premiums has been assumed. Gather up something and exhibit it. But if you have nothing to bring, come anyhow.

The last report from Mrs. Ben Campbell, of Dunmore, who was operated on for gall stone at the King Daughter's Hospital, Staunton, she was getting along nicely. Her sister, Miss Mattie Moore, specialist, was with her two weeks, and then returned to her work at Wilmington, Ohio.

FATAL ACCIDENT

Stephen P. Bright, aged about 38 years, was instantly killed by being run over by a truck driven by Early Dilley on Drennen Ridge on Monday evening, August 30, 1920. He and Jacob Coombs were walking from Edray, and being overtaken by the truck driven by Early Dilley, were invited to ride. Mr. Coombs got in the truck, but Mr. Bright choose to ride on the running board. Coming down the hill above Campbelltown, his hat blew off, and loosing his balance in some way, he fell or jumped off, and the heavy wheel passed over his head, neck and shoulders. His neck was broken, also his arm and jaw, and he suffered other injuries. Death was instantaneous.

Stephen Bright was the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John L. Bright, and a brother of Harvey Bright. His father died last winter, and two brothers have died in recent years. He was a quiet, industrious citizen.

Clifton Forge, Va.
August 26, 1920.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

I wish to invite your special attention the present train service afforded the people of Pocahontas county, and the whole Greenbrier Division.

You will observe that no connections are afforded for local points and branch lines west of Hinton. A person wishing to go by rail to Meadow Creek, or any point on the Sewell Valley Railway, which supplies a large part of Greenbrier county, is forced to spend the night in Hinton. Many people living in Pocahontas and Greenbrier counties have business interests up Sewell Valley and at other local points west of Hinton, which requires their attention at different times. It requires a part of two days to go from Marlinton to any local point west of Hinton. This works a distinct hardship and needless expense for people bound for this region.

Under the pre-war schedule and the schedule effective April 11 to June 24 this year connections were afforded the people of the Greenbrier Division for all local points and all branch lines between Clifton Forge and Huntington. I have ascertained that there is much dissatisfaction throughout the entire Greenbrier Division, because of existing bad connections for the west.

Being interested in the general welfare of the people on the Greenbrier Division, and especially the people of Pocahontas county, I take this means of calling your attention to the existing conditions and offer the suggestion that you might exert your influence as a publisher and have the people of your community petition the Public Service Commission at Charleston, protesting against inconvediences endured by them and ask that the pre-war schedule be restored.

With trains 13 and 14 running through from Clifton Forge to Huntington connections are afforded people of the Greenbrier Division for all points and branch lines between these places.

I am, Very respectfully yours,
James E. Edray.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Moore, of Claremont, Florida, are now in Pocahontas and will spend the month of September in West Virginia. They like their Florida home very much. Mr. Moore reports his orange grove coming into bearing, with the prospect for a good crop. The climate and the out of doors life he leads in attending to his trees is preserving his youth, and he feels that it has given him a new lease on life.

Try Corby's Mothers Bread and the famous Corby Cakes, both at MORGAN'S Store.

Marlinton continues to pile up its baseball reputation. The game last Saturday was at Renick and the score was 9 to 2 in favor of Marlinton.

Greenbrier Presbytery meets this week at Muddy Creek church, near Alderson. Rev. J. M. Walker is in attendance. Elder E. D. King represents Marlinton Church and Letcher Herold, Westminister.

HOW SHE'LL VOTE

Now that women are assured of a vote in the election this fall, the political sharps are figuring the effect their vote will have in the outcome. In the State of New York, where the women participated in the last election, the wise men think they find that the average women votes the way her father did, rather than follow the lead of her husband. Also, that the woman does not regard party lines with the regularity of the average man, weighs candidates and issues more carefully, and is more independent, and consequently casts a more intelligent ballot

In West Virginia, Chairman Dunlap, of the Democratic party, is of the opinion that women suffrage will mean a Democratic victory, giving as his reason that the 40,000 negro voters of the State are Republican almost to a man, and the colored men greatly outnumber the colored women.

Adam B. Littlepage, before he decided to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, make the broad statement that equal suffrage would change the face of party power in West Virginia. He submitted that under ratification cf the suffrage amendment, 278,000 white women and 37,000 colored women would become qualified voters in West Virginia.

"The state is about 20,000 Democratic now on a straight white vote," said Mr. Littlepage, "and with the women voting the ratio of gains for the two parties would change the political complexion of the state by a safe margin. I should have no hesitancy in running for governor if the women get the ballot."

Call For mass Convention of Democratic Women

Pursuant to the call of the Democratic State Committee, I, Dr. L. H. Moomau, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, do hereby call a mass convention of the Democratic women voters of said Pocahontas County to be held at the Courthouse in the Town of Marlinton, West Virginia, on, Saturday, September 4. 1920, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing two associate members of the said Democratic Executive Committee in each Magisterial District of this County, and a vice-Chairman thereof; and to transact such other business as may seem proper to said mass Convention.

Said mass convention will be called to order by the undersigned chairman who will designate the temporary organization and retire. Let me urge the Democratic women of Pocahontas County to attend this convention, and exercise all the rights that have been given them by the ratification of the Suffrage Amendment. There will be no interference on the part of the men at this convention; every thing will be in your hands.

Given under my hand this 31st day of August, 1920.

Dr. L H. Moomau,
Chairman, Democratic Executive Committee, Pocahontas County.

MRS. SALLIE E. MOORE

Mrs. Sallie E Moore, aged 70 years, died at the home of her son, Ellis H. Moore, three miles on the Shelbyville pike, Thursday morning August 19, 1920, at 6:30 o clock.

Mrs. Moore had been in feeble health since last winter, when she suffered from an attack of influenza. She had never since regained normal health, but was able to be up.

The deceased moved to Rutherford county with her son about three years ago from West Virginia. Her husband came here with her, and died in November, 1918.

Mrs. Moore was born in Hantersville. West Virginia, August 24, 1850 Previous to coming here she and her husband had been residents of their native state all their lives. Her husband was a successful farmer, and was well known as a man of the highest integrity.

Mrs. Moore was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and had been identified with that church for a number of years. She was a woman of many splendid traits of character and was a devout Christian.

Surviving her are her son, Ellis H. Moore, a prominent farmer of this county and a member of the firm of Batey & Moore real estate agents; two brothers, Rev. W. T. Hogsett and S. R. Hogsett, of West Virginia.

Funeral services were conducted from the residence of her son on the Shelbyville Pike. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery.—The Home Journal, Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

The Clover Lick farm belonging to the C. P. Dorr estate was sold at public auction Wednesday at which sale Yancey Ligon became the purchaser at the sum of $58,000. The sale is subject to confirmation by the Circuit Court.

Samuel Beard, of Lewisburg, and Dr. Arbuckle, of Maxwelton, were in town Saturday.

FOR SALE—One 15 H. P. Frick saw mill outfit, in good running condition, mill practically new.

S. Reece Pritchard,
Dunmore, W. Va.

LOST: Between Minnehaha Spring and Marlinton, August 28, 1920, 30X3 & 30X3 1-2 tires. Finder pleese notify Mr. Baxter's Garage and receive reward.

THE CHAUTAUQUA

Fourth annual Chautauqu is in town this week. The program is better than usual. Little difficulty was had in selling season tickets,. which were limited to 400. Mrs. Bretta Crapster Lucas is the Superintendent.

Away back in 1917 Junior Chautauqua was but a handful of children, most of whom were put forward by fond and proud parents, this year a troupe of lusty youngsters, a hundred and better strong, who have been anticipating the event for a year.

As we have been known to remark, Chautauqua is well worth the time and trouble and expense it costs, for the wholesome entertainment and instruction it brings to us older folks and the effects it has upon the community, but its real value is its educating influence and lasting impression upon the children.

Chautauqua has come to stay. It was put forward by a number of progressive citizens, who had the good of the community in view. Now the children demand it, and they always get what they want when it is good for them.

Thursday night—Concert by Colangelos band. S. O. Gum, of Marlinton, served in France in band led by one of the Colangelos.

West Virginia News Briefs

Most impotrant events of entire state covered by our correspondents

Fairmont.—A flood of potatoes on the market has brought decline in prices.

Charleston.—There were 35 deaths from accidents in West Virginia industries during the month of July.

Bluefield.—A four-foot vein of coal has been found on the state prison farm on Big Creek, Marshall county.

Martinsburg.—Hampshire county is to have a new courthouse, following meeting of taxpayers and court officials.

Morgantown.—Twenty members of West Virginia University faculty may resign because of housing shortage here.

Fairmont.—W. H. Grimm, a B. & O. brakeman, fell from a freight car here. The temporal artery was severed, but he will recover.

Charleston.—Gus Pauling, 86, Civil War Veteran, well known in Charleston, is mysteriously missing. He disappeared four weeks ago.

Huntington. — Recruiting records were broken for one day, when 29 enlisted in the army. August ordinarily is a dull month for recruiting.

Charleston.—Three fires broke out at Nitro as the result of an electrical storm, destroying property estimated by the owners, the Charleston Industrial corporation, to be worth several thousands of dollars.

Charleston.—W. A. Compton of Pomeroy, O., president of the Columbus-Charleston Highway Association, and L. E. Poteet, local realty man, conferred here to secure federal aid in the proposed Columbus-Charleston highway.

Parkersburg. — Several perplexing questions in regard to the assignment of pastorates and other posts in the conference will arise at the annual session of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, which begins on September 1, in St. Paul's church.

Charleston.—A fire, which broke out suddenly and spread rapidly, destroyed the by-sulphide plant of the Warner-Klipstein Chemical Company at South Charleston. The building was burned to the ground and will mean a loss of approximately $15,000. The loss, however, is covered by insurance.

Fairmont.—Two persons were killed when an automobile in which they were riding went over the embankment into the Monongahela river near here. The dead are Earl Doll, 26, of Rivesville, and John M. Thorne, aged 27. Doll was killed instantly, and Thorne died at a hospital a few hours later.

Wheeling.—Joseph Lipski, a Russian, was arrested by Officer McLaughlin and committed to the lockup on a charge of assault with the intent to kill his wife. It is said that Lipski, who has not been living with his wife for some time, entered her room with a ladder at 2136 Main street and knocked her down and then kicked her into unconsciousness. The woman is in a critical condition.

Huntington.—The clever swindler, who by check manipulations mulcted the American Bank and Trust Company here of more than $5,000 early in June, has since successfully accomplished the same swindle, using methods identical to those employed here, not less than five times since he left Huntington, according to private detectives here. The method of operation involves a deposit of $5,000, and through a ruse, checking the amount out twice, almost simultaneously.

Charleston.—There has been a tie-up in the finances of all the state educational institutions in West Virginia for next year. The state board of control, which has authority over the paying of all the expenses of the state schools, has declined to approve the schedule of salaries proposed by the state board of education for the coming year. The board of control has taken the position that it can not pay the proposed salaries because they aggregate a sum for the year which is greatly in excess of the legislative appropriation for that purpose. The state board of education, on the other hand, says it will be impossible to provide professors and teachers in the institutions unless the schedule of salaries they have fixed can be offered to candidates for the positions.

Huntington.—Expenditures from the school fund of Cabell county for the maintenance of city and rural schools during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, amounted to $667,407, an increase over the previous year of $98,079. The statement shows a net balance in the school fund of $264,128. The total income for school purposes in the past year was $931,414.54, of which $523,772 has derived from taxes, $110,218 from the sale of bonds, and the remainder from public service corporation tax and miscellaneous receipts.

Wheeling.—As a result of a collision between an automobile owned and driven by J. H. Cowan, of Oakmont, Pa., and a motorcycle ridden by Frank ("Babe") Hanket, of Fulton, at "Dimmydale," on the National pike, Cowan was given a hearing in police court and held to the grand jury in $500 bond on a charge of reckless driving. Young Hanket suffered a compound fracture of a leg by the accident and is in the North Wheeling Hospital.

Charleston.—Amounts paid into the state treasurer through taxes paid on charters granted by the secretary of state for the fiscal year ending June 30, were announced by State Auditor John S. Darst. Taxes for charters for the year 1920 totalled $388,482.83. During the year following amounts of back taxes were paid—1917: $1,423.60; 1918, $1,251.20; 1919, $3,903.32. The amount paid during the fiscal year 1919-20 to cover taxes on charters for the year 1921 was $431,463.15. The amount paid in July to cover taxes on charters for the year 1921 was $298,423.67.

Charleston.—Reviving an old custom, thought by the local county clerk to be almost extinct, William Okey Bittinger, son of the parties of the second part, was bound out to Elmer Thomas by Elizabeth Miller, according to an agreement filed in the county clerk's office. The binding out of the boy until he is 21 years of age is included in the agreement, with the provision that Thomas is to furnish the boy with board, clothing and education during that period. This is the first document filed in the local county clerk's office for a number of years and is considered a curiosity.

Wheeling.—As a result of the injuries when he fell under a heavy truck owned by the Wheeling Building Material Company, Michael, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs J. R. Counihan, 1131 Grandview street, died at the Wheeling hospital. It is said that the boy was riding with the driver of the truck, Adrian Norton, with whom he rode whenever possible, and as the machine approached the home of the boy, he started to get off while it was still in motion, and in some manner fell beneath its wheels, receiving the injuries which resulted in his death.

Charleston.—Another chapter in the settlement of the Virginia debt case was written into the records here when representatives of the Virginia debt commission of Virginia appeared before the West Virginia State Board of Public Works to secure the release by this state of $1,132,500 worth of Virginia debt bonds, held in escrow by their state pending the establishment of ownership and production of the debt certificates they represent. The proofs of ownership were presented to the Board of Public Works, which met in special session to hear the case by Colonel Joseph Burton, insurance commissioner of Virginia and secretary of the Virginia debt commission since its creation, and Major B. De Williams, who also represented the Virginia commission.

IN MEMORY

Mrs. Ann Eliza Moyer, beloved wife of Henry M. Moyer, died at her home near Bartow, after an illness of one year, on June 23, 1920, in the 65th year of her age, having been born in Pendleton County, September 11, 1855. She is survived by her husband and their ten children.

It is hard to give her up, but she has gone to mansions above prepared for those who love the Lord. Her last hours were spent in talking of Jesus and praising the Lord. After a farewell to her loved ones, she died as one falling asleep, saying she saw the White City. One of her favorite hymss:

"There's a beautiful city far up in the sky
It's out in the realms of the sweet bye and bye;
The walls are of jasper, the streets are of gold
And they who live there can never grow old."

There she has met her Lord and King. H. M. M.

EDUCATIONAL JOTTINGS

BY COUNTY SUPT. G. D. MCNEIL

The allotment of four hundred and fifty dollars made by the Y. M. C. A. for giving correspondence courses to ex-soldiers has been exhausted and a new allotment of three hundred dollars made. Any ex-soldier may receive a free scholarship entitling him to a course in agriculture, architecture, civil engineering, bookkeeping, shorthand, automobile mechanics, English, mathematics, electrical machinery, steam engineering and many others. Application for these scholarships should be made immediately to the county superintendent of schools.

District Institutes will be held as follows: Greenbank District at Cass, October 15th; Huntersville District at Huntersville, Oct. 29th; Little Levels District at Hillsboro, Nov. 5th Edray District at Marlinton, Nov. 5th.

A District Reading Circle will be held on the Saturday following the District Institute, and it may be possible for some rural teachers to attend both meetings before returning home thereby economizing money and mileage. Attendance at District Institute is counted as time taught. Programs will be arranged and distributed.

Temporary Certificates good for one year will be issued to persons who have taken a four-years high school course plus six weeks normal training or other work in summer school. Having held an emergency certificate does not prevent the issuance of a temporary certificate.

Emergency certificates good for one year will be issued to persons who have attained the age of eighteen and who have not held an emergency certificate provided the applicant is a graduate of high school or equivalent. Persons who have held regular certificates of the first grade within the last five years may receive the emergency certificate. At some late date, an examination will be given on spelling, reading, arithmetic, geography, history and theory and art. Those passing this examination may receive emergemcy certificates. Under no circumstances will certificates be issued to persons who are under eighteen years of age, and no emergency certificate will be issued to parties who have held such certificate before.

About thirty vacancies exist in the schools of the county. By distrcts these vacancies are distributed as follows: Levels, six; Huntersville, six; Edray seven: Greenbank eleven. While this showing is poor enough, it is much better than at this time last year.

The increased salaries have brought in a number of first grade teachers from outside the county.

A PLEA FOR RURAL SCHOOLS

(By a mere rural teacher)

Why haven't we better rural school buildings? Why aren't rural athletics better organiled? Why are community centers so seldom found outside of magazines? Why are rural people so hard to interest in current movements? The answer to all these questions is this: Our rural teachers are not capable. Again "Why?" Because your perfect teacher found in the city system has so often gained the essential experience at the expense of the rural school Because the preparation offered for rural teachers is so inadequate. Our training schools offer model classes of various kinds, wherein we are taught to keep large classes of children busy at a task suited to their uniform age for a given length of time.

When a student bravely confesses to a supervisor that she will have to teach several grades, the average supervisor says, "Ah! my dear, you will have to adjust yourself to conditions." Occasionally one is advised to correlate work, to put various classes together, thus organizing so as to work with the least possible loss of time.

So the young rural teacher goes forth, in many cases, to districts where civil war is continual. She finds seating inadequate, light poor, and last, but by no means least, she finds that she must "adjust" herself to keeping a roomful of children, whose ages vary from six to sixteen, busy at the work that is suited to their various grades. The "new teacher" gives out lists of books, frames a program and plays at intermission. (You know many boards of trustees will not hear of a school closing before 4 P. M.) Having spent some time in dividing all the janitor work, she thinks the work of this day completed.

When she reaches her boarding place, it is to feel flattered because Mrs. A. wishes to speak with her over the telephone. On picking up the receiver she is told that, "my child" must not sit with the little Jones boy; no not even if it is the only seat where his feet can touch the floor. One change in seating and lo! everyone wants to changd seats or seatmates, "Because you let Johnny."

Correlating of work is often criticised as being "new-fangled." Then we have the parent who thinks the A. B C's the first essential. These A B C faithfuls do not hesitate to express to the "school-ma'am," for she has very few pupils in one class and many rural people feel this the thing to do when "Johnny ain't learnin' nothin'."

Can you blame her for going to town at the end of the year? Can you blame her because the children have not had a successful year?—Ex.

Thrift for the School Child

Knowledge is power and to gain knowledge many books must be studied-books on geography, history, grammar, arithmetic and the like. But knowledge without action is valueless,

Enthusiasm and determination are necessary. To give these to the school child another book is needed—a Bank Book. This encourages boys and girls to practise Thrift, and Thrift fires them with enterprise and ambition and sets them on a sure, straight path to success.

ELECTION LAWS TO BE REVISED

LEGISLATURE FACILITATES THE VOTING OF WOMEN IN THE COMING ELECTION.

Democratic Leaders Encouraged Over Reports to State Headquarters From Every County Throughout the State —Strength of Cox and Roosevelt Is Growing Daily.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 15.—The biggest event of the present political campaign in West Virginia was the assembling here yesterday of the State Legislature for the purpose of changing the registration and election laws to facilitate the voting of the women in the coming election.

Though enfranchised by the Anthony amendment to the federal constitution, the women of West Virginia, under the present registration law, as construed by Attorney General England, would have had no adequate opportunity of being registered, and, therefore, would have been robbed of their newly-won vote.

Governor Cornwell's interpretation of the present law, under which he originally decided not to call the Legislature together, was that the registrars could make up the lists of all the women in their precincts prior to the two days in which they will sit publicly to correct the lists.

General England's opinion, however, being binding until reversed by court, held that the women to be registered would have to appear personally during the two days. This meant that only a few of them, particularly in populous sections, could have been registered.

As all persons, to be entitled to vote in West Virginia, must be registered, it was imperative that the Legislature be called upon to change the law so that a full, legal registration of the women might be made.

Then, as the Attorney General declared in his opinion, there are hundreds of precincts in the state which, with the women voting, will have so many voters that it would have been physically impossible for all of them to cast their ballots on election day. So it was necessary that the county courts be authorized by the Legislature to make provisions in these large precincts.

The last week has been a propitious one for the Democratic campaign in this state. Encouragements have come to state headquarters from every county. The Democratic leaders are united as never before in their determination for victory.

The strength of Cox and Roosevelt in the state is daily growing, and the party leaders at state headquarters believe it will continue to grow to election day. West Virginia, above everything else, is not reactionary.

The progressive policies for which Governor Cox and Mr. Roosevelt stand are taking with the people of this state as the progressive policies of Theodore Roosevelt, on a different ticket, took with them a few years ago.

Arthur B. Koontz, Democratic nominee, is shown by information received at state headquarters to have by far the best chance of any of the three candidate for election to the office of Governor. This is not only the positive opinion of the Democratic leaders, but is admitted by thousands of Republicans, some of whom supported Morgan, and others who voted for Grosseup or Montgomery.

The Democrats are positive of it, first, because the whole Democratic party in the state is united behind him; second, because they believe the vote of the women will be strongly in his favor; third, because the Republicans are divided in their support of Morgan, on the regular Republican ticket, and Montgomery, the independent Republican candidate; and fourth, because all classes of citizens can vote for Koontz knowing he is not prejudiced against any of them.

Republicans admit it, first, because there are many of them who will vote for Koontz, not being reconciled to the methods used in securing Morgan's nomination; second, because there are others who do not think Judge Morgan has a chance of election and are afraid of Montgomery's alleged class prejudices; and third, because there are still others who do not believe Mr. Montgomery can be elected and fear Morgan's alleged obligations to a certain clique of coal operators and politicians.

The great body of honest labor in the state has nothing to fear in the election of Mr. Koontz, because he has promised it and every other class a square deal, and he is not obligated to any of the interests which labor complains has not been given it a square deal. Furthermore, Mr. Koontz has declared himself unalterably opposed to the private guard system, and has pledged himself to the enforcement of law and order through the legally appointed officers of the state of West Virginia.

Brannon Knows the Law.

For Attorney General, the Democratic party is presenting Edward A. Brannon, of Weston, a son of the late much beloved and honored Judge Henry Brannon, of the Supreme Court of Appeals. Mr. Brannon, however, has won distinction on his own behalf, both as a lawyer and as a member of the state legislature.

ROAD PHILOSOPHY

After almost a whole year of strenuous effort, in all weathers, work has been temporarily suspenced on the Huntersville road project, leaving the work in a curiously unfinished condition. During the entire time since the operation commenced travel conditions have been unspeakably bad, and the public much inconvenienced thereby. Vast sums of money have been paid out of the County and National treasury as the work progressed and yet the job is unfinished and the contaacting company unable to proceed.

In the Edray district a similar project has recently been completed, (about two miles of macadam near Buckeye) which was three years in building, at a cost not precisely known, but which undoubtedly was very large, considering the quantity and quality of the work. It is presumed that some of the district road funds, levied at the very high rate of 30 cents on the hundred dollars went into this work, in addition to county and state funds, as very little has been expended on the ordinary upkeep of the district roads during the time the Buckeye job was dragging its slow length along.

I have been asked what can be done to help the admitted poor system of road building. My answer is, more attention to the important question of cost and time involved in the completion of a given project, and more efficiency in the Engineering and constructing departments.

I realize perfectly that candid speaking is so rare a quality in a candidate for political office, that he utters truth only at the risk of having his words used effectively against him.

What is meant by considering costs of construction is that the work be laid out in such a manner that ordinary curves in the road be left and slight grodes also. It is the insisting on these points that contributes enormously to excessive cost. Heavy grades and abrupt curves we will always have with us in mountainous terrain, therefore why the insistance on speedways?

Earth roads we will have with us for many years, therefore we must give more attention to their building and upkeep and improvement. The earth road is a good road for about eight monthe of the year, and the money expended on annual upkeep is well spent.

It is admitted by the best business brains of the country that the present time is a post-war period of unsettled conditions and expended values, therefore it is a time to go slow on the big contract; to use the time honored expression, bite off no more than you can chew.

VETERAN GONE

Andrew Sheets died at his home at Cass last Tuesday, September 7, 1920, aged 80 years. His death was very sudden, falling off his chair. He is survived by his two daughters, Mrs. Nannie Morris and Miss Lucy. His wife died about a year ago. Burial on Wednesday at the Sheets family graveyard in the Hills Services conducted by Revs. Rosenberger, Blackhurst and Gray.

Mr. Sheets was the last surviving member of his family. During the war between the s atates he was a brave Confederate soldiers in the 31st Virginia Infantry, serving the entire four years. He was a good citizen. For more than forty years he had been a member of the Methodist Church.

Sistersville.—Riggs Brothers, well-known orchardists are going in for goat farming on a large scale. They have received a consignment of 252 head in a double-decked stock car. This is the first time goat raising has been attempted in West Virginia on an extensive scale.

Wheeling.—Mrs. Adolph Becker, of Chantal Court, was badly cut about the face and body when the car in which she and her husband were riding, was struck while on the National road near the bottom of Wheeling hill by a Cleveland car, one of a train being driven through to Maryland.

Married, at the Manse in Marlinton, September 15, 1920, Roy Kellison and Miss Mamie Geiger, by Rev. J. M. Walker, officiating minister.

Huntington. — City commissioners have cut the city tax levy to 75 cents, instead of 80, as previously decided upon.

Huntington.—County tax levy has been cut one cent. The new figure is 4 cents on every hundred dollars' valuation.

Petersburg.—The Potomac Valley Bank of this city has been approved as a new institution by the state banking commissioner.

Wheeling.—Mrs. Geo. Moesigner was badly crushed when her horses became unmanageable and her wagon crashed into a fence.

Charleston.—Naval recruiting officers are searching for Rupert Janvrin, who was gassed overseas and entitled to a silver victory button.

Lewisburg.—B. E. Smith has brought to town the fossil tooth of a megatherium, an animal of the sloth family, from his camp at Pence Springs.

Charleston.—Nearly 3,000 school teachers took the third uniform teachers' examination, held throughout the state recently. Grades are being prepared.

Charleston.—A controversy over a contract to sell school supplies brought about a $50,000 damage suit. D. M. Jones asks that amount in damages from the Theodore Kunst Co.

Huntington.—The B. & O. Railroad, acceding to a request of the Chamber of Commerce, is completely moving a hill which obstructs the view of motorists traveling a parallel highway.

Rodney.—Forty-nine of the 55 West Virginia counties had pupils in the state deaf school and 34 counties had representatives in the blind school last year.

Morgantown.—Rumors that a $6,000,000 coal land deal was pending here was confirmed by M. M. Cochran, of Uniontown, Pa. The deal contemplates the purchase of 13,000 acres of coal land.

Sistersville.—Arthur Spencer, 11, of Middlebourne, was probably fatally shot by his playmate and cousin, Adam Ash, 14, of Pleasant View. The contents of the shotgun were emptied in the boy's back. The shooting is believed to have been accidental.

Huntington.—Shot four times by two men whom he attempted to place under arrest for riding a freight train, Bob McClain, Chesapeake and Ohio railway detective, is in a serious condition in a local hospital. The shooting occurred at Salt Rock, Cabell county.

Huntington. — Conspicuous among the registrants at the police station was a 16-year-old boy, a day laborer at one of the citys' industrial plants, who was arrested by Patrolman Harris on a charge of smoking cigarettes. In police court the youngster was discharged.

Huntington.—Society women of this city have taken up cycling as a recreation. A sensation was caused when Miss Janet Hatch, Miss Catherine Enslow, Miss Jennie Hatch and Miss Eloise Campbell, society leaders, appeared on the streets on bicycles, and prominent young women are following their lead.

Charleston.—Thirty delegates from Fayette and neighboring counties held a joint conference with the State Board of Public Works and the State Board of Control, and pleaded for continuance of the West Virginia trade school at Montgomery, a branch of the West Virginia University until two years ago, as a preparatory school for colleges. The board announced some time ago that they were planning to turn the institution into a school for colored deaf and blind. Definite action has been deferred.

Charleston.—Ed Scott, miner, of Kaywood, Cabin Creek District, and former Executive Board member of District 17, United Mine Workers, was shot through the lungs and probably fatally wounded at a miners' meeting at Whitesville, Boone County, on Big Coal River. The bullet was fired, according to eye witnesses, by Tom Akers, special constable, who came to the meeting to serve a peace warrant on Scott. The latter, witnesses said, was in the act of pulling his gun when the officer fired.

Huntington.—Co-operation of Huntington residents who were missed in the first census of the city with the Census Bureau at Washington is necessary for a complete enumeration of the city, H. E. Mathews, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, has pointed out. Individual census blanks have been mailed from Washington to each of the persons named by the Chamber of Commerce as having been missed in the original count. It is imperative that these blanks be filled and mailed back to Washington as quickly as possible, Mr. Mathews said.

DIES IRAE

By ANNA L. PRICE

In a dream of the night I was lifted away,
By the thoughts of my mind to the Judgment day;
And hard hearted sinners who would not repent,
Find now to their sorrow God's mercy is spent.

He gave them full time and a conscience to feel,
From hurt and dire sickness how oft did He heal;
Receiving His mercies they scorned Him who gave,
And His richest blessing, a Savior to save.

The air is surcharged with a sulphurous fume,
A third part of sunlight is shrouded in gloom,
The moon and stars sicken, the earth quakes with fear,
Day of wrath approaching—'tis already here.

Where are the Christians? Ah, in holy estate,
Or in refuge at Pella beyond the gate:
Gone are the preachers, the churches and all,
And over the world is a funereal pall.

Swear, on break the laws, wicked ones that ye be,
God has let you alone, ye are perfectly free,
But He'll bring you to judgment, you shall stand at his bar,
Condemned and convicted and the day is not far.

I awoke from my dream heart-sick and in pain,
I ask not to dream in such fashion again;
But God's hatred at sin in His word is revealed,
And the end of the wicked must not be concealed.

Do you ask to be saved, how and whither to flee?
I point you to Jesus and Mount Calvary;
Repent and believe, cast your vile sins away,
And hasten, O sinner to escape while you may!

WEST BY AUTO

D. L Barlow Gives an Account of a Part of His Trip. He Meets Many Pocahontas People

Synopsis of article in last issue—with auto trip and complete camping outfit, he, together with his family, left Huntington, W Va. June 15, and traveled by way of Ashland, Kentucky, from which place he entered Ohio. From Portsmouth he followed the Scioto trail to Chillicothe—the Franklin Pike to Washington Court House—the Jamestown and Zenia Pike to Dayton and then over Pikes Peak Highway to Richmond, Indianapolis, Danville, Rockville and Montezuma, Indiana. On the night of June 21, he camped west of Dana near the Illinois line, and spent a day looking at the black soil and growing corn in a real corn country. At Tuscola he turned north on Egyptian Trail. Rain changed his course at Campaign and he journeyed east to Danville, Ill., then north on Dixie Highway to Chicago Heights—east to Gary, Indiana, where he spent a day on the beach. From here over Lake Shore Road to Michigan City, at which place he took a morning drive along the Lake and among the beautiful summer cottages which overlook the beach—thence east by the way of South Bend and Elkhart to Goshen.

Pocahontas People

At Brimfield we met Jake McLaughlin and wife. Mr. McLaughlin has prospered and is assessor of his county. We left Mr. McLaughlin and wife with the promise that we would be back and spend the night with them, but for want of time we failed to get back.

Sunday June 27th, we spent a very pleasant day with Albert Lindsey and wife. These people by industry and economy have accumulated 198 acres of land and built a good home and are in a true sense prosperous. They entertained us in real West Virginia style and we had a glorious day talking over the days of old.

Sunday evening we drove over to Mrs. Sallie Waugh's. She and her daughter Bessie live together. Bessie married a prosperous farmer by the name of LaMiller.

Monday June 28th. we were at Jake McClure's for dinner, and our party together with Mr. McClure and wife ate supper with Mrs. Waugh and daughter. They had for supper everything I could think of—even chicken dumplins which to me are like the Old Oaken Bucket—dear to my heart. Here Jake led me to tell of the side-splitting things that had occurred in our boyhood days, and we laughed until I was afraid some Indiana officer might arrest us for disturbing the peace of the community.

Jake compelled us—not against our will however—to remain with him two or three days. He was busy with his clover and alfalfa, but it rained which gave us plenty of time to talk over the days of old. He has 159 acres of good land and is well fixed. He has one of the best farm homes I was ever in. The house is supplied with two kinds of water—well and cistern—hot and cold. Cooks and eats in the basement when the weather is hot; has a well equipped bathroom. His house is finished throughut with the best hardwood, even his back stairs are built of genuine black walnut, House heated by furnace and wire for electricity. A prosperous farmer—a man who sees and learns things. Two years ago he and his famely took an automobile trip over the great west. He traveled for four and a half months. He went as far as the ocean would let him and bathed in the waves of the Pacific. What a change. He used to bathe in the old mud pond at the Jackson House on Charlie Baxter's farm, and in the old dipping above Stony Creek Church. Thirty years has made a change in his life. From a hoe to a riding cultivator, From a corn knife to a corn binder, from hand shucking to the shreder, from the sickle to the reaper and shocker, from the dipping hole to bathing in the Pacific. And best of all he has a wife who is all kindness and business and would make a living for herself and family if placed among the pines of Red Lick Mountain.

July 1st, We left Indiana over the Toledo and Chicago Trail. The road today was fair. We found this a meadow county—not much corn. Near Delta we noticed the effect of a storm. East of town 21 barns had been blown down. We counted ten or twelve of these wrecked buildings from the road, and noticed one family living in a tent on the site of a wrecked home. We camped eighteen miles west of Toledo.

July 2. Drove into Toledo, thought car was using too much gasoline and sought to have it adjusted here. I ran a cross a man who sold cars like one I was driving. He said, "I cannot recommend any mechanic in this part of the city, but as you are journeying east stop at Moline and call on S. who will adjust your car and do it right." S. is the third mechanic that I have called on who really helped me in my trouble.

We passed some nice farms today—a few of which were devoted to trucking. A great many beets are growing in this section. We camped tonight within three or four miles of Sandusky. This was a lovely camping place. The people here by the name of Scheck wanted us to spend several days with them and take in all the points of interest near here.

July 3rd, we spent at Cedar Point just east of Sandusky and the people are here proud to tell you that Cedar Point is the most famous bathing place in the world.

July 4. We spent the Sabbath at Rye Beach. Sunday was a bright fine day—just right to lie on a cot in the shade or on the sand.

July 5. Monday we drove south and camped by permission in an old orchard four miles south of Mt. Gilead. On this day all the people were celebrating except the farmers who were forced to be at home at work. On Lake Shore Road we met hundreds of cars. They were in greater number than you will usually find on Sixth Ave., Huntington. A great many of these cars were from the city of Cleveland.

July 6. Early in the morning we arrived at Deleware which is recognized as a school town, and in the evening we drove east ten miles to see W. G. Cochran with whom I spent my boyhood days among the hills of Pocahontas. In childhood we had dreamed of the west, but I failed to see far enough into the future that on a summer evening in 1920 it would be my pleasure to drive my car on to Green Lawn Farm which is located on good road one and one-half miles west of Sunberry and owned by my friend Cochran. I found him and three boys in the hay field raking and loading hay. A rain storm was approaching from the southwest. Cochran, not expecting to see me, at first did not recognize me, but his son Allen looked up from his work and said, "I'll be dogged!" W. G. at once stopped his hay loader and prepared to come down. I ordered them to drive ahead and get as much hay in as possible before the rain, which soon drove us to the barn. It rained during our stay here which gave us plenty of time to eat, talk and sleep. Cochran has a good farm and it would be hard to find a better barn. It is painted snow white and name of the place, "Green Lawn Earm" is printed in large black letters on side of the barn. This farm derives its name from the large, beautiful, well kept and shaded blue grass lawn which extends to the road and surrounds the large square colonial home. A great many of the farms of the west are named which appeals to the traveler and proves to him that the owners are progressive and worth while. Cochran's farm is all improved and is equipped with the best machinery. The children have as good schools as you will find anywhere, and some great scholars should go out from this home. A better family of children would be hard to find. The home life seems to be ideal. The mother in this home was one of my old pupils. West Virginia can ill afford to lose such people.

The morning of July 9 was bright and clear. We bid good bye to Cochran and family and started for Columbus twenty-two miles distance. After looking over Columbus for a few hours we continued our journey by way of Chillicothe to within 15 miles of Gallipolis. Our last camping place was with a man by the name of Davis and because of his hospitality I shall never forget him. About forty miles of road through here was very rough and some of it very steep.

July 10. We arrived in Huntington, feeling that we had had a good outing and had learned many things about the country through which we toured that we could not have learned otherwise. The people—both city and country—with whom we met extended to us every courtesy and kindness. We were much better treated than we deserved. We always offered to pay farmers who gave us camping sites, but without exception they would say our only charge is "Come again," "Stay longer," or "Write us when you get home."

The Country

The country through which we traveled is clear of brush and filth. The barn lots where we camped are as clean as a well kept lawn. Most farms have a grove of timber, but these groves are clean and in good grass. Some of the groves have been planted and the trees line both way like a field of checked corn.

The Farmer

The farmer of the west is a great worker. He is in the field early and works late. We have no better citizen than the farmer The agricultural class now and always have had the worst end of the bargain. These people complain less, receive less for what they sell, pay more for what they buy and take more abuse than any other class. If I had space would like to speak of some of the organizations that have worked a great hardship upon the farmer, but for the present will only say that some day the farmer may quit work long enough to find out who is on his back and unload.

The Roads

While on our trip we traveled over hundreds of miles of improved as well as hundreds of miles of dirt road. A large per cent of the so called improved road, either from poor construction or from want of timely repairs is in a far worse condition than the dirt road and we often followed the dirt road from preference. We found a number of different kinds of improved road, but not knowing how long the badly worn roads had been used, we cannot intelligently say which kind of road is best. It might be well for those who have charge of road construction to stick to brick, concrete or macadam, until some of the new kinds of roads have beyond a doubt proven their worth, until then follow the old rule. "Be not the first to adopt the new."

The people of the west want mileage and in order to get this have built miles and miles of eight foot road—a dreat deal of which is brick or cement. You meet but little inconvenience in turning out to let others pass you from the fact that the sides of road are lightly macadamed and solid. We do not remember any road over sixteen feet wide.

Many places have bonded up to the limit—the money is gone and there is but little road to show for it and they are now in a bad row of stumps. A president of one of the county courts told me that he had constructed a few years ago a mile of 16 foot brick road for $18,000. This road has concrete base and curbs. He took bids on same kind of road early last spring and the lowest bid was over $83,000 per mile. Sand, gravel and brick were in short haul of this road. It in plain to be seen that it is impossible to build any great amount of road under present conditions and the citizens seeing and realizing the value and necessity of good roads may be tempted in an evil moment to vote upon themselves (which they have done in many places) a bond issue and the money so raised will melt away like a snow bank in an August sun, and leave them with high taxes to pay as well as comparatively no road. In many places bond issues have so fixed the people's "bills for snapping" that they will not have any roads for years to come. If you do not believe this, borrow money for your own business and spend it in the same wreckless way that public funds are being spent in many places and see how soon it will be until the sheriff will have your bush.

I happened to pick up a copy of the 1920 West Virginia Interstate Program and in it I notice that the Department of Schools is advocating the adoption of the proposed amendment to the State Constitution which provides that the State legislature can authorize the issuance of bonds not to exceed $50,000,000 in amount outstanding at one time and to be retired in thirty years. The purpose of this bond issue is to build a system of roads. The School Department says: "It will not mean one cent additional direct taxation." It has been my experience that a bond issue will increase taxation both direct and indirect and I would like to look upon the face of a country where they do things by bond issue without increasing the rate of taxation. I have watched the results of bond issues for years and cannot today cite you to a case where the people have received anything like 100 per cent for money raised in this way. We are told of the good that may result from State aid. The state is now and has been for years collecting several hundred thousand dollars of indirect tax from automobile license &c. Why not let the State show us its faith by its works before asking us to go in debt to the amount of $50,000,000. I have not yet seen a mile of state aid road for which the people did not pay dearly in addition to the so called state aid.

I am of the opinion that no body of men can sit in the city of Charleston and work out a system of road specifications that will be suitable to all sections of the State. They can give width, depth and height, but fail to give length which is the thing the people want. State road aid may be offered to a county under certain conditions that will be detrimental to that county. A county road engineer knows the conditions of his county. He knows the mountains, the hills and the road material available, and let him together with the county court decide the best kind of road, ever keeping in mind that it is mileage as well as good road that the people need.

A country is comparatively worthless without roads. You at some time since I left Pocahontas, built a few miles of macadam road. I see what I call a 10 ft. road from Campbelltown to foot of Elk Mt. This road has two great faults—it needs to be repaired and extended. The same might be said of other roads in county. You cannot build your roads in one year nor in five but each year build every inch of road and keep up that you have built that your tax limit will allow. In a few years you will be surprised at the number of miles of good road you have and paid for, while others will have bond issue, interest, sinking funds, mud and rocks.

Cost of Western Trip

As to the cost of my trip will say that we spent $1.25 on car. This expense was caused by driver getting wires crossed when cleaning spark plugs. The first garage mun upon whom we called for help thought the trouble was with carburator and got it out of adjustment. I had the next mechanic we called on to examine the wiring. He soon found the trouble and fixed it. At Moline, Ohio, we had the carberater adjusted by a man who was familiar with the model of cars like the one I drove. Had the mistake not been made in crossing spark-plug wires, I would have had no car trouble. The gasoline cost a fraction over two cents per mile. Being tourists we had quite a load on car. Counting all expense such as gasoline, oil, board and paying the driver, the cost was 8 1-9 cents per mile for four of us My friends tell me it was luck; that they could not get off with out heavy car expense I believe that more expense is caused by reckless driving than by anything else. My car has been run nearly three years and during that time nothing has been broke about it and the air has never been out of but one inner tube.

Rules for Those Who Travel

1st. Select a car that is in general use. We did not but were running the risk of being laid by for days waiting for repairs should we have had a break down.

2nd. Wear old clothes. Our girl Goldie, requested me to say that she wore on our trip an old sweater which I wore all last winter while feeding cattle. It cost me $1.48 with war tax added and is worth about one-third of this.

2rd. If you are camping take only that which is absolutely necessary. Buy from farms. A country that does not have plenty to sell is not worth seeing.

4th. Never camp anywhere without permission—not even on church or school ground.

5th. Be sure you leave your camping ground in as good or better condition than you found it.

6th. Treat with the essence of kindness those who so kindly furnish you camping ground. Always ask your bill and bid people goodbye when you leave.

7th. Always be ready to help other tourists when you can. It will be repaid with interest.

8th. Map out your route, but never plan to make a certain point in a day's drive. Drive slow. Stop and examine all that is worth seeing. Travel as if though you do not care whether you get there or not. If you are compelled to rush stay at home.

9th. If you are traveling with others not of your party, let each party do its own cooking, eating and dishwashing. The world is not large enough for two or more families to live peaceable together for any length of time even in camp life. Otherwise they can be of great service to each other.

10th. If you want information ask the first gentleman or lady you meet. You will not only get the information, but you will be almost thanked for your inquiry.

11th. Never act bigoted or smart. It does not pay.

12th. Do right. It does pay.

I shall not soon forget the people who were kind enough to take the risk and let us camp in many places near their buildings which cost thousands of dollars. In some places we were urged not to take the trouble to erect our tent but to drive our car in barn and set our cots on barn floor. This we always refused to do, because of the fear of fire. We always slept under our own vine and fig tree.

Three cheers for the big hearted farmers of the grain belt.

EDUCATIONAL JOTTINGS

BY COUNTY SUPT. G. D. MCNEIL

On account of some changes made in the regulations relative to emergency and temporary certificates, these regulations are again published.

1 Applicant for any West Virginia license to teach must be eighteen years of age on or before Oct. 1, 1920.

2 Temporary certificates will be issued to applicants who submit certificate showing graduation from first class high school and attendance for six weeks at approved summer school. Any equivalent for above training will be accepted. For example, two years highschool, plus two years in seminary, plus one year college work. In such case the one year college work would make attendance at Summer school unnecessary. If in doubt as to your eligibility for temporary certificate state your case to County Superintendent. The holding of emergency certificate does not bar the temporary certificate.

3 Emergency certificates, first grade will be issued to applicants with high school diploma plus six weeks summer school as in case of temporary certificate. Emergency, second and third grade may be issued upon graduation from high school without additional work. Having held one emergency bars from holding this certificate.

4 any one who can engage a school where vacancy exists may take examination for emergency certificate. This examination will be held at Marlinton, Oct. 2. 1920.

Examination is given in six subjects: spelling, reading, history, geography, arithmetic and theory and art. Applicants must be eighteen, and having held emergency certificate bars from examination.

Many requests are in for Elementary Manuals. The supply of these manuals is exhausted and no more will be published until the new State Superintendent is elected and inaugurated. The manuel issued in 1918 is the latest. Teachers possessing this issue need not inquire for new manuals.

Prin. C. J. Ramsey remains in charge at Marlinton with Mr. Walker at head of graded school.

Mr. Harr goes to Ronceverte and his place as principal of Levels Dist. High school is taken by Mr. Vance. In the Greenbank High, Mr. N. Phay Taylor takes Mr. Koon's place as principal.

The three high schools have been reorganized and many new teachers employed. Normal Training Departments are maintained in the Levels and Edray District High Schools. Graduation from these departments entitles the student to a first grade certificate good for three years and renewable at the end of that period The Edray Dist. High, maintains a Business Dept. while the Levels and Greenbank schools emphasize Agriculture.

A West Virginia farmer in an isolated section of the state where there were no good roads, in fact nothing but mountain trails.

His wife was recently committed to one of the state asylums.

In discussing the matter with his physician, the farmer said:

"I do not know what made her go insane. She had nothing to bother her. We lived in a quiet place. Why she had not been out of the kitchen for eighteen years."

THE HORROR OF THE WOODS

Following the accounts that have persisted for some months, the ape, baboon, gorilla, wild man, or terror that has been reported at varions points from Pittsburgh south, has appeared and taken up his habitation in the dismal fastnesses of Black Mountain and there is something approaching a panic in that part of the county, to say nothing of the fearsome thing appealing strongly to the imagination of every sch ool child in this city. Those who wander through the beautiful woods surrounding this town are not wholly at ease by reason of the reports that come in.

We have made some investigation and we hear that a bunter saw the beast some weeks ago in a blackberry patch on Black Mountain near the mouth of Day's Run. He makes no mystery about it, and savs that it is no more and no less than some apelike animal escaped from a show and that it has been hanging around the bountiful berry patches of Williams River for food. He does not seem to have been particularly afraid of it, and succeeded in finding its nest and he said that the beast had collected a lot of railway spikes from the old abandoned railroad of the Campbell Lumber Company.

This carries out the theory of a half tame gorilla.

The next clear sight of the animal was by a woman who lives near the mouth of Day's Run and she had a bad scare. She was some distance from her house and the thing pursued her. She ran home and slammed the door in its face and called on two watch dogs to drive the brute off. The animal waited until the dogs came up and seized and choked them to death one after the other in a few moments.

Repeated calls have come from that section for the State Police to come and capture or kill it. The appeal has even reached Elkins, the headquarters of the force stationed in this part of the State. The local force is preparing to go to the mouth of Days Run to investigate the matter one day this week.

PRICE HILL ROAD

Advantages of Having the Road on The Price Hill Fixed.

The people of Pocahontas County realize that there are great sums of money being paid out on the roads. This is a good thing, for if there is anything that helps to make a good community it is good roads. It would be a good idea to fix up the worst road first, and the Price Hill is sure one of the worst.

The road on this hill is traveled as much and maybe more than any other road in the county, and if this road could be fixed it would be a great advantage.

1. It would enable farmers to bring their produce to and from Marlinton more easily, for they could haul more, and maybe this would help in bringing down the high prices of farm products.

2. It would be of advantage to the school children.

3. It will not cost near so much to fix it now as it will if it is left as it is, for each day it is getting worse. This can be noticed after a rain. As you go up the hill you notice slides which have filled up the side ditches, thus causing the water to run across the road leaving deep gutters. People who drive cars over this piece of road know that there are only a few places where cars can pass without danger of going over the hill.

LITTLE KNOWN FACTS ABOUT THE U. S.

There are so many interesting facts about our own United States that are so little known that it sometimes serves a useful purpose to recount them for the benefit of those who may not have had the opportunity to look them up. In a recent article published by the Geological Survey we learn that the gross area of the United States is 3,026,789 square miles. The land area amounts to 2,972,774 square miles and the water area—exclusive of the area in the Great Lake, the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Gulf of Mexico within the three mile limit—amounts to 53,015 square miles.

The southernmost point of the mainland is Cape Sable, Fla. which is in latitude 25 degrees 07' and longitude 81 degrees 05'. The extreme southern point of Texas is in latitude 25 degrees 50' and longitude 97 degrees 24'. Cape Sable is therefore 49 miles farther south than the most southern point in Texas.

A small detached land area of northern Minnesota at longitude 95 degree 09' extends northward to latitude 49 degrees 23'.

The easternmost point of the United States is West Quoddy Head, near Eastport, Maine, in longitude 66 degrees 56' and latitude 44 degrees 49'; the westernmost point is Cape Alva, Wash., in latitude 48 degrees 10', which extends into the Pacific Ocean to longitude 124 degrees 45'.

From the southernmost point in Texas due north to the forty-ninth parallel, the boundary between the United States and Canada, the distance is 1,598 miles. From West Quoddy Head due west to the Pacific Ocean the distance 2,807 miles. The shortest distance from the Atlantic to the Pacific across the United States is between points near Charleston, S. C., and San Diego, California, and is 2,152 miles.

The lenght of the Canadian Boundary line from the Atlantic to the Pacific is 3,898 miles. The lenght of the Mexican boundary from the Gulf to the Pacific is 1,744 miles. The length of the Atlantic coast line is 5,560 miles and that of the Pacific coast line is 2,730 miles. The Gulf of Mexico borders the United States for 3,640 miles.

Nearly all maps of the United States show the parallels of latitude as curved lines and are likely to lead the ordinary observer to believe that certain eastern or western States are farther north than some of the central States that are actually in the same latitude. For this reason, one who is asked which extends farther south, Florida or Texas, is very likely to say "Texas," but, as stated, the the mainland of Florida is nearly 50 miles farther south than the southernmost point in Texas. For the same reason, when we consider the geographic positions of countries south of the United States we find that errors are likely to be made in estimating position or extent in logitude. Few realize that the island of Cuba, for example, if transposed directly north would extend from New York City to Indiana, or that Havana is farther west than Cleveland, Ohio, or that the Panama Canal is due south of Pittsburgh, Pa., or that Nome, Alaska, is fariher west than Hawaii.—National Hotel and Travel Gazette.

Editor Times:

We just returned from Seattle and other north western points where we spent six weeks. We also took a trip by auto through Mt. Ranier National Park, and threw snowballs on the 10th day of July. We could only go to Paradise Valley Inn, a hotel four miles from the top of Mt. Ranier, by auto. It was a grand trip. Everybody seems to be flourishing in this country: bumper crops of all kinds. Politics are also raging here, and we are going to defeat Governor Allen, and also going to elect Cox for President. We expect to visit Pocahontas next year. I am still running as locomotive engineer on the Santa Fe.

LEWISBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Lewisburg District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in annual session at White Sulphur Springs, September 20, 21 and 22. Rev. H. I. Stephens, presiding elder of the district, presided over each of the seven sessions of the body.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. L. B. Bobbitt, of Lewisburg. Devotional services preceeding the business sessions were conducted by Revs. Oscar W. Luspy, of Covington; Geo. H. Echols, of Hillsboro, and Elmer C. Sloane, of Minnehaha Springs. Dr. Clovis C. Chappell, of Washington, D. C., preached four inspiring sermons on Personal Evangelism.

All the services of the Conference were well attended and a deep interest taken. The various reports showed the church in a healthy condition spiritually and financially. There has been over 600 conversions and additions in the last six months, while last years' record shows 1705 additions to the churches in the district. In finance the district holds second place in payment of Centenary pledges in quoto. Salaries of pastors have been raised $6,000 this year. The average salary being about $1200.

Several important resolutions were adopted. The committee on temperance presented the strongest report ever adopted.

At the close of conference the Presiding Elder was granted a vacation of three weeks and a purse of about $250 presented him.

White Sulphur Springs entertained us in a royal manner and all felt that this was one of the best conferences ever held. The next session will be held in Covington.

Substance of report of committee on Temperance, Lewisburg District Conference, M. E. Church, South, White Sulphur Springs, Sept. 21, 1920:

Dear Brethren:

We your Committee beg leave to report as follows:

We rejoice in the fruits of prohibition everywhere apparent. Crime is on the decrease and bank deposits on the increase. Ignorance, sloth and filth are giving place to education, industry and cleanliness. Tears and sorrows are being succeeded by smiles and love. Underfed, ragged children with the marks of abuse, and furrow lined mother's faces are disappearing and in their place we see healthy well nourished happy children and the roses reappearing on mothers cheeks. But while we rejoice we must also watch and pray "for there is yet much land to be taken." for while the open saloon with its train of sorrows has passed the moonshiner and bootlegger, those insidious foes of humanity, are with us in increasing numbers, and it behooves us as God's people to be ever alert, remembering that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

We exhort our people everywhere that they give every possible aid to so all officers of the law and other agencies endeavoring to stamp out this monster evil by the giving of testimony or in any way they can. The time has come to be "Instant in and out of season." "To cry aloud and spare not." And we deplore the fact that in many places the citizens and to called christians handicap the officers of the law and make enforcement of the law impossible by failing to give the evidence they possess.

Realizing that the woman vote will be the determining factor in the coming election, and that the forces of evil will rally to their support every woman of questionable character, we expect our good women to assume their obligation and cast their ballot.

We exhort our people everywhere to enqufre carefully into the record and platform of every candidate for public office and vote only for those who are openly and avowedly friends of prohibition.

East Bank High School Foot Ball team will play Edray District High School team at Marlinton on Saturday, October 2, at 2:30 p. m. Eastbank is near Charleston and has a team about equal to Marlinton, and the game promises to be a close and interesting one. Eastbank had about the same experience with the Charleston High last Saturday that the Marlinton team had with Wheeling on the same date.

The road above West Union leading to Laurel Creek is in a most wretched condition, owing to lack of proper drainage during a wet season and heavy hauling from the sawmills in that section. Something should be done to this road as it is the only outlet to the populous section at the head of Stony Creek and on Laurel Creek and Williams River. General upkeep of road in the Edray district has been neglected more than in any other section of the county during the past year or two. Unless something is done in the short time remaining before winter, deteriation and travel conditions will be worse than ever before.

You may hang up large illuminated signs around the hole in the ice, warning the public of imminent danger; but the young fellows would skate right up to the hole to see for themselves if it's all it's cracked up to be; and then we have the trouble and annoyance of fishing them out and standing them on their heads for the water to run out of them.—Walt Mason.

Tractor	$790.00

The Ford Motor Car Company makes this reduction in face of the fact that they have on hand immeeiate orders for 146,065 cars and tractors. The Company will be suffering the loss while using up the material bought at high prices. They are willing to make the sacrifice in order to bring back a going condition as quickly as possible and maintain the momentum of the buying power of the country. Henry Ford says that the war is over and it is time war prices were over. There is no sense nor wisdom in trying to maintain an artificial standard of value. For the best interest of all it is time a real practical effort was made to bring the business of the country and the life of the country down to regular pre war standards and quotations.

We are at pour command with regular Ford Efficiency in service and eagerness to fill your orders.

Thrift for the School Child

Knowledge is power and to gain knowledge many books must be studied-books on geography, history, grammar, arithmetic and the like. But knowledge without action is valueless,

Enthusiasm and determination are necessary. To give these to the school child another book is needed—a Bank Book. This encourages boys and girls to practise Thrift, and Thrift fires them with enterprise and ambition and sets them on a sure, straight path to success.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 30, 1920

FOR PRESIDENT FOR GOVERNOR

JAMES M. COX — ARTHUR B KOONTZ

Standing squarely for clean politics, the Democratic party in West Virginia does not propose to raise or attempt to raise a big fund of money for the campaign in this election.

There are, however, certain legitimate expenses, for publicity, organization and traveling expenses of speakers brought in from outside the state, which must be met.

Large subscriptions are not being sought, but it is the desire of the State Committee to secure donations of one to fifty dollars from as many Democratic voters as possible who agree that the cause this year demands his or her loyalty in that way.

The Mingo monument to the vanished Mingo town was unveiled last Saturday with imposing ceremonies in the presence of a large assembly. The monument is an artistic figure of an Indian chief set upon a pedestal. It is prominently located on a head land looking towards the setting sun.

It is about half a mile from the Confederate monument and it adds charm and interest to Mingo Flats which is naturally one of the beauty spots of the world.

Hon. S. H. Wood. the old residenter, was the active force behind the movement. The good people of Randolph had furnished a great feast for the occasion and all were well fed. Addresses were made by Hon. H. G. Kump, Hon. Arthur B. Koontz, Judge W. S. O'Brien, Capt. W. H. Cobb, Hon. Roy Waugh, and Andrew Price, the last named being us, having been invited to attend and testify as to what had occurred some hundreds of years prior.

It was agreed that it was a historical meeting, and the crowd was asked to indicate its love for the study of history, and one person held up his hand but for all that the audience listened intently, drawing near on the sod to the great well of truth as it issued from the grand stand.

Liars are said to be divided into three portions for comparison, as liars, damned liars, and historians, and for that reason a good text to indicate the spirit of the address would be a part of a verse of scripture which being slightly altered from the ancient Hebrew was to the effect: "Ananias stand fourth," and that we were perfectly willing to enact the part of Ananias, if Lawyer Kump, Captain Cobb, and Judge O'Brien, would stand first, second and third, respectively.

And in order to keep the record straight it should be stated that according to the passage in the well beloved McGuffey; "I come to bury Caesar and not to praise him," for we belong to the school which holds fast to the belief that a good Indian is a dead Indian.

There has been some criticism as to the propriety of the descendants of the pioneers honoring the memory of a cruel and a treacherous foe, but as we read the scroll of ancient events, there never was a time when the mountaineers were not perfectly happy and willing to bury the Mingo and bury him deep. And the importance of this enduring monument is emphasized by the fact that already doubters have arisen who are asserting that the head of the valley was not peopled by a tribe of Indians who have wandered from this place through the wilderness to the west, keeping their tribal identity until they found their present place of abode in the Indian Territory. And while we of the present day do not know it all, we do know more about the first inhabitants of the valley than those who will come after us, and it is fitting that we do know what the pioneers might have done in a day that is dead, and fix the fact beyond dispute.

Authentic history reaches back into the seventeenth century and it is crystalized from the time that the white people became firmly established on the Atlantic seaboard. From that time the Indians were forced back into the mountains and the white people were assigned to the country lying between the mountains and the ocean. The Indian tribes became a confederacy under the name of the Iroquois or the Five Nations, and the division of the territory was so complete and endured for so many generations, that it was believed to be a permanent thing, and like our constitution which has not as yet lasted as long as the partition of lands, it must have seemed to the slow generations of those former times, that the division of territory was forever.

When it was first made, the settlers on the seacoast had a vague idea of the rich mountain country in which we now live, and believed that they were too rugged to explore. One of the favorite fallacies of those days was that the snow never melted in the summer time on these hills.

Up until comparatively modern times, the most authentic accounts of the mountains and the lands west of them were the reports of the Jesuits who went there as missionaries to the Indians.

When the Iroquois had become firmly established as a nation, the land drained by the Ohio river from the great lakes to the Ohio, was held by a powerful tribe of Indians known as the Eries but they are constantly referred to as the Cat Nation, because their tribal sign was that of the panther. This is the tribe of whom it was reported by a priestly voyaguer, that he floated down one of the rivers in the State of Ohio without ever being out of sight of a corn field.

Up to the year 1653, the Iroquois had a treaty of peace with this nation which was renewed at stated times with imposing ceremonies. That year, thirty ambassadors appeared at the council lodge of the Iroquois for the purpose of continuing the treaty. When they had arrived, and before the meeting, a dispute arrose, and one of the ambassadors killed an Iroquois chief. Whereupon the Iroquois arose and killed all but five of the visitors, and war broke out between the nations, and lasted for three years.

The end of the war came in 1656, at which time 1800 Iroquois appeared before a fort in the Cat Nation and demanded that it surrender to save carnage, for the invading chief told them that it was useless to resist for the Master of Life fought for them. The Eries replied that they depended upon their arms and acknowledged no other power. In this fort there were an army of 4000 warriors and the women and children of the tribe. Reading between the lines, the superiority of the attacking force must have consisted in a cannon and gunpower for the fort was taken and the Iroquois entered the fort and the carnage was so great among them that blood was knee deep in places.

It is reasonable to suppose that the great fort that was taken at that time was the one still preserved by the State of Ohio, known as Fort Ancient, in Warren County. It is a headland about three hundred feet high overlooking the Miami river fenced in by a wall varying in height from 6 feet to 19 feet and enclosing a boundary of one hundred acres of land. This fort is well preserved but was abandoned prior to exploration and it is pretty certain that it marked the spot where the Cat Nation was conquered, for only such a fort could have contained the fifteen or twenty thousand Indians present at the time of the great battle.

The Eries surviving were absorbed into the Iroquois nation, and as the Senecas of that nation occupied the western border they naturally became the tribe of the conquered people, and their numbers were so great that the towns of the Senecas increased from four to thirty. And this frontier work of guarding and amalgamating with a conquered people naturally resulted in the Senecas becoming the military department and power of the military department and power of the Iroquois nation.

Prior to this time the Ohio River was named the Black Mingo River, and the Indians living on the waters of that river, with the intolerance of race, were called Mingoes, meaning a stealthy treacherous people, by these living to the east of them. This racial feeling is like that which prompts us to call Italians, Dagoes, and Austrians, Bohunks, which to say the least are words of little esteem.

And so the Iroquois council found a question of foreign affairs before it. In considering it, they referred to it as their mingo problems. A part of the policy was to mix the native stock with the mingo element and form a line of villages reaching from the St. Lawrence river south to Georgia, policing the whole line of the Endless Mountains In council, if a statesman arose to bring up the subject of the faraway village on the head of the Tygarts Valley River, he would probably say; "I want to take up the question of supplies for one of our mingo towns," just as a congressman might say today: "Here is a matter about our colonial possessions." In the Iroquois council we can almist hear a chief say to the English ambassador stationed at the Capital of the Five Nations: "Yes, we of the old original stock respect the contracts we have made with the English, but our widely scattered mingo settlements are of mixed blood and we can never be sure that they understand the bond that is between us. And then they are apt to be influenced by strange tribes like the Delewares and Shawnees."

It is interesting to trace the origin of the word Mingo. It first meant chief or greatest. It became the name of the great river. Then it was used as a word to denote the inhabitants of the country drained by that river. Then to distinguish the foreign from the native blood of the Iroquois. Then to designate the towns which were located in faraway parts of their possessions. And finally by the pioneer white men to mean a particularly deadly tribe of Indian outlaws who having moved to the far bank of the Ohio harried this country for more than twenty years during the days of the first settlements west of the Alleghany. The English tongue in spite of the fact that it is fixed and made definite by the art of printing, is constantly changing the meaning of its words. For example a few generations ago the word villain meant a tenant, and the word miser meant a sick person. Both are in universal use today with the meaning wholly changed, and the old meaning all but lost.

The Batts and Fallam expedition got as far as the Big Kanawha in 1671, and reported the signs of a Indian town near the falls where the fields were grown up with weeds, small prickly locusts and thistles. That reference to second growth locusts tells its own tale to a man of these mountains. It fixes the date the site was abandoned as fifteen years before the end of the great war.

It is fairly certain that from 1656, to 1756, an even hundred years that the Five Nations, that is the Iroquois, maintained a fighting town or garrison on this part of the great Seneca Trail, which extended the whole length of the Appalachian Mountains. There is a trace of an old fort in the old field that gives the name to the Old Field Fork of Elk, fifteen miles east of Mingo Flats. There is a possibility of that being the town for a time. But in 1754, David Tygart wrote a letter from this valley saying that he would have to leave on account of the proximity of an Indian Village. And he did get safely away, but the Files family on the creek of that name at Beverly, did not get away and they were all killed by these Indians that same year, and their bleached bones found and interred in 1772, eighteen years after.

We know that the Iroquois tried to help Braddock in 1755, and that they were driven away from his army by that martinet. We know that tribe moved away from this place in 1756, and that they went just beyond the jurisdiction of the Iroquois. There can be little doubt that they had a hand in the massacre of the army under Braddock, and that they left or were driven out by order of the Iroquois council in 1756. The killing of the Files family in 1754 shows that they were being corrupted by the deadly Shawnee and were getting out of hand.

From 1766, to the present day their history is definite. In 1766, they were found at Mingo Bottom, six miles above Wheeling, which was the only Indian settlement immediately upon the Ohio river between Pittsburgh and Louisville They told the early explorers that they had been there for ten years and that they moved down from the head of the Ohio ten years before. The Ohio has two heads, the river forking at Pittsburgh. But the Tygarts Valley River and the Monongahela form by far the longest fork. The water does not divide evenly at Pittsburgh. The southern fork is the longer by at least fifty miles. But the clinching fact that this is the uttermost fountain of the Ohio where they lived is that they were near the Shawnees and the Delewares. That is true of Mingo Flats and it could not be true of the headwaters of the Alleghany River, the north fork, for the Shawnees were southern Indians forced north by the Cherokees. The Shawnees were split by the mountains, one part going to the east and settling in the Valley of Virginia and the other in southern Ohio, so that the road between the two Shawnee places ran by or through Mingo Flats, and the Delewares, originally from Deleware river were allied with the Shawnees in the French and Indian war of the seventeen fifties.

There will never be a better time than now to fix the facts in history. Here is the chart of the Mingo Indians, so called because of the handiwork shown in the signs of the atrocities they committed on the pioneer settlement of our ancestors:

In 1755, at Mingo Flats, Randolph County, West Virginia. In 1766, at Mingo Bottom, now Steubenville, Ohio, numbering 60 families, making a total of about 300 persons. In 1800 they lived on their own lands on the head of the Sandusky and the head of the Scioto Rivers. In 1831, they numbered 251. This is the year that they sold their lands in Ohio, and moved to lands on the Neosho River in the State of Kansas, where they lived until 1867, when they moved to the Indian Territory, where they now live. In 1885 the number of the tribe was 239, but in 1905 they numbered 366. The tribe seems to have just about held its own all these years, and it seems a matter of regret that an effort was not made to have a representative of the tribe present on this occasion.

After the tribe left here the most notable conflict with them in this neighborhood occurred in 1780. Thomas Lackey saw Indian tracks at Valley Head, and thought he heard a voice saying, "Let him alone and he will go and bring more," which is a clear case of telepathy. He warned the settlers at Fort Hadden, but the next day a party under Jacob Warwick, returning to the Greenbrier settlements were fired upon by Indians in ambush, and three men killed: John McLain, James Ralston, and John Nelson. James Crouch was wounded but escaped. Thus passed the names of McLain, Ralston, and Nelson from this valley, but Crouch has many descendants. A similar preservation of a name occurred in Pocahontas County the same campaign. Two men, Hill and Baker, went to the river to wash. The Indians fired on them and killed Baker, and his name faded away, but Hill escaped and his name is one of the most common of family names in that county.

We are here to dedicate a monument to the memory of a bitter foe, and to preserve an historical truth by writing it upon tablets of stone. And every effort that is made to preserve the memory of those heroic times is to be applauded and encouraged. And no less important is the duty that each and everyone of us owe to the lives of the departed of our families and friends to mark the last resting place.

Many years ago there lived in Scotland a man by the name of Robert Patterson who had reached the age of eighty-six years at the date of his death. The last forty years of his life were spent on traveling from churchyard to churchyard restoring with his chisel, the tablets marking the graves of the Hill-men or Cameronians, who had been persecuted for their faith. As it is so beautifully put:

"In the dream of the night I was wafted away,
To the moorland of mist where the martyrs lay:
Where Cameron's sword and his bible are seen
Engraved on the stone where the heather grows green"

This remarkable man would accept nothing for his work and Sir Walter Scott named one of his immortal works for him by calling it by the name that had been given Robert Patterson, to-wit: "Old Mortality." Yet when it occurred to Sir Walter Scott to search out the place where Robert Patterson lay buried in order to place a modest monument there, he could not discover the place though the most exhaustive and diligent search was made. What a comment upon the lack of appreciation of those Old Mortality labored among.

And in this connection, mention should be made of the fact that under the laws of this land that burial expenses are made the first charge upon the estate of a decedent, and these are to be paid even before debts due the nation or taxes and levies. And it is not too much to say that burial expenses ought to include the cost of a monument in proportion to the size of the estate accumulated, and that if we could imagine a descendant objecting to this tribute to the life and memory of the departed, that courts would so hold.

"Our lives are like the prints which feet,
Have left on Tampa's desert strand:
Soon as the rising tide shall beat,
All trace will vanish from the sand."

Notice

In The Matter of the Road Improvement Bonds for Greenbank Magisterial District, Pocahontas County, West Virginia.

At a regular meeting of the county court of Pocahontas county, West Virginia, held on the 4th day of June 1920, an order was entered authorizing a vote to be taken by the citizens of said magisterial district for the issuance and sale of two hundred and sixty thousand ($260,000 00) dollars of bonds of said magisterial district known as "Road Improvement Bonds."

By virtue of said order entered on the said 4th day of June, 1920, a proclamation was issued on June 4, 1920, for holding said election in said magisterial district, for the purpose of either ratifying or rejecting said order, and in said proclamation set the 10th day of July, 1920, as the date for the election to be held in said magisterial district for said purpose.

The returns of said election held on that date show that five hundred and sixty three (563) votes were cast for ratification and three hundred and nine (309) votes were cast against ratification so that more than three-fifths (3-5) of the voters voting at said election voted in favor of the ratification of said order.

The County Court of said Pocahontas County has caused to be transmitted to me a duly certified copy of all the orders, proclamations, notices, advertisements, affidavits and records of all its proceedings connected with or pertaining to said bond issue. I have examined the same and it is my opinion that said bond issue is regular and all the proceedings in compliance with the statute. I therefore approve the validity of said bonds, as provided by chapter 57 Acts of the Legislatue 1917.

Yum! Yum!

Imagine all the good things that this range will give you. Its wonderful oven bakes like a charm. Its scientific Hot Blast Combustion means that all the burnable fuel gases are consumed. This gives you one-third to one-half fuel saving on the range fuel bill. Also means cooking on all six lids. Its malleable iron construction and its rust and acid proof lining gives you the RANGE EVERLASTING.

Its design is of the latest and most artistic. It is the only make of range that will give you perfect cooking and baking year after year and will pay for itself in fuel saved.

THE ELECTION

The election that was held on Tuesday throughout the United States was a one sided affair. It has already been termed an election held by the Republicans. The Democrats expect to hold one in the future.

For awhile we could not figure out what was the matter with our Democratic party but as the returns came in, it gradually dawned on us that we had been greatly outnumbered.

In pawing over the statistics it reminded us of an old gambling term about a deck of cards: All faced but one!

Our chieftain Cox was a mighty restless man and he played all around Mr. Harding and all that Mr. Harding did was to wait until election day and take his revenge.

It is hard to see how the Democrats took four out of the seven county offices, with Harding carrying the county by a big majority. It shows some discrimination.

Judge Snarp comes into his third term as judge with a large increased majority. While we were tied up with the nominee of our unfortunate party, it is but the absolute truth to say that if we have to have a Republican judge, we would choose Judge Sharp.

We are glad that the election is over and we are gl d that the old party beat us if we had to be beaten, for we have as much use for a radical as aa we have for a rattle snake.

Report of Boyer Siding school for first month, Mrs. Hamilton, principal: Those present every day Chester and Lennie Nottingham, Ronald Levy, Frank Moore; Ina Greathouse, Grace, Bertha and Lynda Plyler, Effie, Fannie and Mary Moore. Mary Levy, Hazel, Vergie and Verlie Nottingham. Primary Room Mary Beard, teacher.—Harry Malcomb, Glenn Moore, Ralph and Russell Nottingham, Remus Neighbors, Claude Halterman, Edna, Roy and Myrtle Lee, Everett and Thelma Ray, Evelyn and Zona Lambert, Mildred Carpenter, Clara and Audrey Nottingham, Lottie Haltermrn.

The ice cream supper given at Mt. Zion, M. E. Church, South. on Droop Mountain last Saturday night was reported a success and an enjoyable time for all. More than $108.00 was realized for the benefit of the church.

The road amendment carried in Pocahontas county by over 700 majority.

PEACE

By Anna L. Price

Peace seems to me a heavenly word,
The very sound is sweet;
An echo strain from the language,
Of Heaven's golden street.

"Peace," any little child can spell,
And "war" is no long word;
But in the lead of warriors,
The whole wide world was stirred.

And a score of fighting nations
Still persecute the dove
Till she spreads her snowy pinions
To find a rest above.

Jesus is called the Prince of peace,
And His glory we shall see,
And the paths of perfect righteousness,
In the Kingdom yet to be.

I leave my peace with you, He said,
While yet he walked earth's road;
And it passeth understanding,
To possess the peace of God.

'Twas the old Hebrews' salutation
This same sweet peaceful word;
And peace be unto you my friends,"
Was the greeting of our Lord.

Engrave it deeply, thine own peace,
Breathe on our spirits now,
Not as the world is wont to give,
But as Thou givest, THOU!

Rev. J. M. Walker announced last Sunday, to the congregation of the Presbyterian church that he had decided to accept a call to the Steel Creek church, of Charlotte, North Carolina. A congregational meeting is called for next Sunday to act upon his resignation. This announcement was received with great regret by his congregation and the people generally. Mr. Walker has served six years faithfully and well and the work has prospered under his care. He has a hold on the people of the community that few men have ever had, and they hate to give him up. The church to which he is called is one of the biggest and most influential in the whole Assembly, and will give him a wide field of influence.

A called meeting of the Greenbrier Presbytery will be held at Ronceverte on Tuesday November 9, for the purpose of acting upon the resignation of Rev. J. M. Walker, of the Marlinton church, and dismiss him to Mecklinburg Presbytery; to act upon the call of Rev. J. W. Row to the Hinton church, and to consider certain Home Mission work.

STATE NEWS

Fairmont.—The Dunbar school of this city are serving hot noon lunches for children.

Sistersville.—Joe Campbell, shaking hickory nuts from a tree, fell 30 feet and broke his shoulder blade.

Ripley.—The good roads bond issue carried in the Ripley district of Jackson county by a vote 750 to 18.

Keyser.—John Maine, 75 years old, cleaner, was killed in the B. & O. yards when he stepped in front of a yard engine to avoid a backing wrecking train.

New Martinsville.—The first hunting fatality occurred near here when Thomas Bennett died of wounds received when his gun was accidentally discharged.

Fairmont.—A cabbage head said to weigh 21 pounds and nearly as large as an old-fashioned beer keg was presented the editor of a local newspaper this week.

Martinsburg.—The remains of Belle Boyd, famous woman confederate spy, will be brought here from Wisconsin soon at the request of a son, an overseas veteran.

St. Marys.—Henry Fritz raised a stalk of corn 14 feet high. This stalk contained two ears of corn, one of which is attached at a height of seven feet and nine inches.

Wheeling.—Heavy posts, surrounded by light steel rails, have been set along the Fulton Hill road to prevent autoists from skidding over the dangerous embankment.

Morgantown.—North Willy street, that part of Cheat highway which runs through this city, will be improved without closing the thoroughfare, city engineers announced.

Wheeling.—Mrs. Lillie Sanders died following a gunshot wound inflicted by John Fowler, a former sweetheart. Tom Weitzel, also shot by Fowler, will recover. Fowler was arrested.

Bluefield.—W. F. Thompson, 45, Davy merchant, was killed by a freight train which struck his automobile near Davy. He was killed instantly. His widow and two children survive.

Morgantown.—Morgantown is enjoying a building boom. A $20,000 addition of concrete, steel and brick to an automobile service station is one of the operations now under way here.

Clarksburg.—Examinations for applications and students in ministerial courses of study were held here by the faculty of education of the West Virginia Methodist Protestant conference.

Miss Pearl Carter is attending the annual meeting of the State Teachers Association at Clarksburg.

Mrs. Evaline Johnson, 88, Mrs. R. E. Overholt, 82, Mrs. J. T. Lockridge, 85, and Mrs. Wm. T. Price, 84, cast their first votes in Marlinton on Tuesday.

Bluefield.—R. L. Griffin, an employe of the Appalachain Street Railway Company, and Miss Lena May Leffel, of Tazewell, were married on a street car just over the Virginia line, near here.

Martinsville.—Palmer T. Keesecker, Jr., of Hedgeville, son of P. T. Keesecker, a former superintendent of the country schools until the next general election, taking the place of C. W. Crowell, resigned.

Martinsburg.—Lloyd Duff, of Clarksburg, was found guilty in federal court here of transporting liquor from Morgantown to Clarksburg, and fined $500 and costs. Where Duff obtained the liquor in Morgantown is yet a mystery.

Morgantown.—Following a luncheon of ten of the leading citizens interested in the organization of the New Morgantown Kiwanis Club at the Madeira Hotel, permanent officers were elected and the organization perfected. Many citizens have enrolled in the new clubs and a healthy rivalry for the Rotarians is promised.

Morgantown.—Is the street on private property or is the property encroaching on the street? This is the question troubling councilmen in connection with complaints from the residents of Jones street. It is understood that there should be a 40-foot street at this point, but instead there is hardly room for a wagon to get through and the telephone poles are in the middle of the street.

A big flock of wild geese flew over Marlinton last Friday.

BARN BURNED

On last Sunday night the large barn, granery and other outbuildings of J. H. Buzzard, near Huntersville, burned down, entailing a loss of eight or ten thousand dollars. There was no insurance.

About eleven o'clock the barn was discovered in flames. It appeared that the fire had started in the big hay mow, and nothing could be done with the means at hand to stop it. It spread to a large grain house nearby, and the residence was saved with difficulty. A horse was burned to death in the stable. Among the items destroyed was a lot of hay, 1500 bushels of corn, a tractor, a mill and a great deal of other valuable machinery.

The Law Of Progress

is as unchangeable as the famous laws of the Medes and the Persians.

The individual who spends more than he earns—or, as if far too often the case, spends all before he earns—travels in a hopeless circle. He cannot advance, and "he who does not advance, recedes."

The person who saves BEFORE he spends inevitably registers progress. Why not put the principle to the test?

WE SHOULD HAVE GYMNASIUM

Look out for locomotive Gym! A Gym!

The biggest joke of the season is people that don't care for athletics.

We want a gym!—We're going to have a gym or bust!!

Why do you object to athletics? Why, a gym is for you and for me—for exercise, for amusement, for physical culture—Oh for so many reasons!

A gym is to keep the boys away from pool rooms, drug stores, and picture shows. The Gym is as much to you mothers and fathers as it is to the E. D. H. S.

It helps the girls and boys to get more interested in school work and stay in off of the street so much.

Oh can't you hear our plea? Please! We must have a Gym!

A Student of Freshman Class.

The Girls' Basket Ball team of E. D. H. S. will play the basket ball team of the Ronceverte High School on next Saturday at 2:30.

How we would enjoy the game! But no, such sport is not for us for we have no gymnasium to practice and work in.

Why have we none? Is it because you citizens of Marlinton take so little interest in our welfare that you will not furnish our school with one? Surely not, we hope, for you have been kind enough to help us with other things, so please spare a small sum to help build a gym.

The equipment of a modern up-to-date high school must include among other things, a gymnasium. Now the girls have no athletics at all. Is that good management? The women have at last won a place of recognition for themselves in politics, and the girls of E. D. H. S. should have a chance to make a name for themselves in athletics. And let us not forget a gymnasium would be used equally by the boys and girls.

Another side of the question is the example of the work in other schools. In Greenbank High school the enrollment is little more than half that of ours, yet the people of that community have seen the need of a gym and have furnished one to the school. If Greenbank High school can have a gym, surely, we of Marlinton can have one.

Boost the Gymnasium.

TRAVEL NOTES

On July 29, 1920, I arrived at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, at the North Station. Having some time to wait for my son, Alex Gordon, I took an electrical train and went for sixty mile ride in the country. I saw some pretty farms and beautiful country homes, but the oddest sight to me was the level country as far as the eye could see.

On my return I was taken in a taxi to Alex's home, 2851, Idaho Road, Fairview, Camden, New Jersey. In this part of town, the residences are all of brick, with fine streets and walks. Collingswood joins Fairview on the east.

I went for a walk with my daughter-in-law, Alma. We sat to rest at a church built if stone. We passed home after home, each one seemingly more beautiful than the other. Finally we came to the one at the end of the street, and it fairly took my breath away. Words fail me when I attempt to describe it. The front yard was about five acres, a velvety lawn, beautiful trees of odd shapes and sizes, and the most wonderful flowers. The beauty of the place will always linger in my memory.

To a mountain man, the modern home is a wonder of convenience; hot and cold water, electric light, gas, and a radiator in every room. Cooking done with gas. All you have to do is to turn on the fuel, low or high as you desire, and strike a match. Furnace in the basement. No stoves and no dirt, and the house temperate all over, or wherever desired. Porcelain tubs and sinks and everything to hand. Alex also had a good garden, with plenty of corn, beans and tomatoes.

Alma and I took in a lot of motion picture shows, and I certainly did enjoy them. On August 24th, we took a trip on a steamboat called the Wilmington, two hours and a half each way; stopped at Pennsgrove, Chester, and Wilmington, Delaware. An airplane looped the loop around the boat. It was but a few feet from me. Our return trip was by moonlight.

Later my son and his wife took me to Trenton, the capital of New Jersey. Words almost fail me when I attempt to describe Cadwaler Park. It consists of 250 acres of the most beautiful grounds and flowers. There is a zoo here, with animals and birds and things from all over the world. The monkeys did some tricks as though they knew I was watching them. And the parrots of the gaudiest colors. The one that took my eye was old rose and light gray.

I was also at Palmayra, Riverton, Burlington and Riverside. At the later place I saw the Keystone watchcase factory, the biggest of its kind in the world. These towns are all in New Jersey! To go to Philadelphia one crosses the Pennsylvania Railroad Ferry. The fare is 3c, and it takes about 5 minutes to cross.

Glouchester, N. J. is a very pretty place. You can sit on a bench and see the largest boats go by. I was one of a party at the launching of a big boat. It was five hundred and seventy feet long, weight 13,000 tons. A very pretty girl, carrying a large boquet of flowers, and a bottle of champagne in a silk crochet bag, christened the boat. As I was standing but a foot away when the girl smashed the bottle on the boat, I had a good smell of the liquor. I also saw the great Hog Island ship yards, among the largest in the world, which was built by the United Stetes during the war.

On August 30, I went to Claysville, Pennsylvania, to visit my oldest son; John Will Gordon. I took the train at Philadelphia, and changed cars at Pittsburgh. John Will lives nine miles out in the country, and he met me at Claysville. Had a fine visit but did not get to see out much of the country during the month I stayed there.

October 5, I arrived at Durbin at the home of my granddaughter, Mrs. Kenna Rexrode. Then a few days later John Williams took me over to his home in Highland county. For eleven years I lived five miles from his home. It was good to get back and view the old surroundings, though they have changed much since I left there in 1882 to move to Pocahontas county.

Returning by mail auto, I will spend about tendays with my daughter Mrs. W. W Sutton, at Hosterman, and then home in time to vote. I have not missed an election in many a day.

I had splendid good health, never missed a meal, and was treated fine by everyone I met with.

Mr. W. Godon,

Seebert, W. Va.

Mrs. A. N. Cocks, a sister of Mrs. F. M. Sydnor, died at her home at Desputania, Va., on Monday night. Burial at old Blandford cemetery, at Petersburg on Wednesday afternoon.

YOUR TURKEYS

Nothing looks better to you than to see a flock of beautiful turkeys roaming the fields, and as you view them you invariably begin to plan and look forward to the actual dollars and cents you anticipate from this source. But just how, when and where to market to reap the most are the utmost questions in your mind today.

MR. FARMER and MERCHANT allow us to state without successful contradiction, here is where the name of Farnk Hellerick & Co inevitably comes to your attention. In our 40 years experience we have made thousands of regular and substantial customers, who annually ship us their poultry. These people know that we ars "fair and square" and above all capable of securing the right prices. Other farm products may be a little off owing to re-adjustment period but we wish to inform you the future poultry out-look is good with us.

Write us in regard to your poultry and we will be only glad to serve you.

MRS. GEORGE W. MALCOM

Mrs. Susan E. C. Malcom died in the Marlinton Hospital on October 13, 1920, after an illness of four weeks of typhoid fever, aged 52 years, four months and two days.

Mrs. Malcom was the daughter of Abraham and Mildred M. Shinaberry and was married early in life to George W. Malcom. When sixteen years of age Mrs. Malcom made a confession of her faith in Christ, and united with the M. E. Church, and the remainder of her life she lived a devoted christian, always ready to lead or assist in any good work.

Surviving her are three sons, Elmer and Orvill of Cass, and Edgar of Huntersville, her aged mother and nine brothers and sisters—Andrew and Charles, and Mrs. P. H. Lowe of Cloverlick; Mrs. S. M. Dickison, Mrs. P. Riley, Davis and Ira, of Virginia; Mrs. Charles Cooper of Oregon, and Marion, of Denver, Colorado.

Her body was laid to rest in the family burial ground near Poage Lane. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. P. Rutledge.

The writer joins in sorrow, knowing she is no longer with us, but we can only wait for the days when dreams come true, for it is written, in my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. John 14: 2.

Why do we mourn for dying friends,
 Or shake at death's alarm?
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends,
 To call them to his arms.

Are we not tending upward too,
 As fast as time could move?
Nor should we wish the hours more slow,
 For God's call is love.

At the recent meeting of the Presbyterian Synod of West Virginia at Elkins, Lewisburg was chosen as the next place of meeting of Synod. Rev. J. L. Lineweaver of Beckley, was elected moderator. Rev. J. E. Flow, who performed the duties of stated clerk during the sickness and since the death of Rev. J. M. Sloan, was elected to that office.

In this paper is advertised the sale of A. M. Shrader at Cloverlick, on Monday, November 15. Mr. Shrader has recently sold his home place to W. H. Barkley.

Timber For Sale

About 35 acres of nice young thrifty spruce timber, very tall trees, in size 18 inches and under, estimated to cut 1000 to 1200 cords of pulp. This pulp brings a good price on cars at Bartow, a distance of 12 miles, mostly down grade on a good road. Also some good hardwood adjoining, with nice set for portable mill. This spruce should be held as an investment. 12 miles east of Bartow, on Staunton and Parkersburg turnpike. Will sell at a bargain if sold soon.

Apply to owner, J. P. HISE.

The Law Of Progress

is as unchangeable as the famous laws of the Medes and the Persians.

The individual who spends more than he earns—or, as if far too often the case, spends all before he earns—travels in a hopeless circle. He cannot advance, and "he who does not advance, recedes."

The person who saves BEFORE he spends inevitably registers progress. Why not put the principle to the test?

JUST A WORD FROM IRA IRVINE

To The People of Pocahontas County:

Friday, November 5th, 1920.

I, the writer, desire to present a statement, which is as follows.

It seems that the time is drawing near when I am to begin the work of county surveyor, and before beginning I want to be better understood than I have been. And I will say all I have to say without boasting, for I have nothing to boast about.

The cause of this statement being made is by a statement in the Marlinton Journal dated Thursday the 4th, that "Ira Irvine is just tickled to death because he beat Frank Baxter for county surveyor." It is not my nature to be tickled over things of vital nature, and while I feel very much appreciation to the people for giving me the office, it is far from the condition of my heart to be tickled over the success of defeating my opponent. I tell you from the full depth of my feeling that to even defeat an enemy does not cause me to be tickled, and when I think back to the days gone by when I worked for the father and a brother of Mr. Frank Baxter, and carried one end of a chain with Mr. Baxter himself, and further, when I recall that they treated me honestly and kindly, my feeling toward Mr. Baxter is more like still water than it is a babbling stream.

I have made comic remarks when I should not, have smiled after listening to vulgar talk when I should have frowned, but if I were ticklish like a show-clown I certainly would not be suitable for the office of county surveyor. But I feel that the Editor of the Journal did a good deed in causing me to do this writing.

I kept my hands clean through the campaign, and I hope Mr. Baxter will think as well of me as I thought of him when he defeated me four years ago. I felt fully as well toward him then as I do now. I know now how it seems to be defeated and how it seems to be elected. When I was defeated I felt free, and since I was elected I feel a heavy weight upon my shoulders. Then the responsibility was placed on Mr. Baxter, and now it has been placed on me. The office of county surveyor has been looked upon as a small office, but it is confronted by a full share of difficulty. But as the office has been given to me I highly appreciate it. I even appreciate it more than I would the office of President of our country. I appreciate the help the Journal gave me; I appreciate the clean hands of the Editor of The Times through the campaign; I appreciate the honesty of my opponent through the campaign, and I appreciate the excellent help of the voters. I have been thinking back to the time when I was Democrat and came over to the Republican party, and when I think of many Democrats who have reached over and helped me it causes me to feel a desire to be with them.

A number of words direct to those to whom they shall appeal.

I have made many mistakes, and if there is any surveyor who has done much surveying and not made any mistakes his record is excellent. But I promise you that my desire shall be to do the work right. I have thought back over many years of my life and I feel very thankful to all who have helped to bring me up out of the gloom of dark years, and I hope to be of service in return.

When Solomon was becoming king he desired wisdom from God, because he needed wisdom in the ruling of a great nation. I lack wisdom, and for what I lack I shall depend on God. I want you to be with us, and when we assemble at the Judgment Bar I hope to grasp your hand with more pleasure than any hand-grasp has afforded us since our last election day.

Your humble servant,
Ira H. Irvine.

COUNTY SABBATH SCHOOL VISITATION

The Sabbath School Visitation is being entered into by the County Officers with more than ordinary zeal and interest and the work accomplished and results obtained will greatly assist the workers as well as the schools during the coming year.

About half of the schools have been reported by about half of the County Officers, so those of you who have not reported any activity will please do your part in the work assigned and report accordingly.

A little later we will have some interesting statistics to report, and it is our desire to have this report as complete as possible.

HUNTERSVILLE CHARGE

Methodist Church,

Rev. Elmer C. Sloane, Pastor

Sunday, Nov. 28th. The Pastor will preach at Mountain Grove at 11: a. m. and at the school house on Little Back Creek at 7:00 p. m. Every one welcome. Come. "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits?" At least give Him your time on His Day, spent in study, meditation and prayer.

H. W. Rhea was a visitor at this office on Saturday morning. He is moving from Linwood to Cloverlick, where he expects to work on the big sawmill. He reports a big sheep killing bear raiding the flocks of the Linwood community. A. C. Barlow and Elmer Poage are known to have lost sheep, and it is supposed that other sheep have been killed on the range. A hunt was organized in the snow last week, but the bear was not routed out. This is supposed to be the same bear that has been killing speep for the past three years. He is too smart to be caught in a trap, having had some experience. A man named Roberts trapped him once, catching him by one toe. The bear dragged the trap a hundred yards or so, ond jumped over a big log with it. The trap hung on the log, and the weight of ths bear bulled his toe off and he escaped. This old bear never returns to a kill, getting a fresh sheep whenever he is hungry, and he is a very expensive proposition.

Taxes in the county this year per hundred dollars assessed valuation, are as follows: $2.27 in Greenbank and Levels Districts, Edray District $1.95; Marlinton Sub-District, including town taxes, $2 61. Considering the fact that West Virginia has a "true and actual value" assessment system, this is going some in taxation.

FORMER POCAHONTAS GIRL WINS HONORS AT UNIVERSITY.

The Atheneaum of November 9th, the students' organ of the West Virginia University, under the caption "Cast for The Romancers" says that in a rcent try-out which was held to select a heroine for Edmund Rostand's one act play to be rendered under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. November 22, in the high school auditorium at Morgantown, Miss Veta Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Williams, former residents of Marlinton, was selected as the heroine for the play. The success of the play is assured as it has the backing of many of the campus organizations and is being coached by Miss Marjorie Steadman, instructor in dramatic art in the University.

Miss Williams was elected as one of the two female characters in the Parkersburg High School 1920 class play by competitive tryout, and played the principal role therein to the credit of herself and friends.

The selection as the only girl for the play from the large number in University is an honor to Miss Williams and her many friends in Pocahontas and elsewhere.

DR. WHEELER NOT AT HOSPITAL

Dr. B. B. Wheeler desires to announce to his friends that he is no longer connected with the C. & O. Hospital at Clifton Forge. He still maintains his residence in Clifton Forge at 63 Alleghany Street. Dr. Wheeler was formerly at McKendree Hospital, and while there he operated upon and treated many patients from Pocahontas county. In speaking of him a prominent physician of the county said that few men of his profession had done more for the poor than Dr. Wheeler.

LOST AN ARM

In walking along beside the track of the C. & O. Ry. at Ronceverte Saturday afternoon. when a train was moving toward him, John Peters, son of Capt. John Peters, got his feet tangled in a wire hoop and fell across the rail. The engine shoved his body from the track but his right arm was caught under the wheels and so badly mangled it had to be amputated near the shoulder. It was an unfortunrte accident resulting no doubt in much pain to the injuried man but we are told he is doing well —Greenbrier Independent.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

"The Ford Touring Car"

Here is the greatest motor car in the world. Great because there is more of it in use than of any other car in the world. Great because that in our demand for a million and a quarter Ford cars this year fully 50% of that demand is for the Touring Car. Surely every Ford touring car is a car of great service. You see it where ever you go, day or night, rain or shine, summer or winter—the ever faithful Ford Touring Car is delivering service and satisfaction, pleasure and economy, in a larger measure than falls to the lot of any other one piece of mechauism in the world.

We can now deliver Ford cars to you with reasonable promptness. Leave your orders without delay, if you would be wise. The prudent man carries his umbrella when it is dry, because any fool can carry one when it rains!

Never forget that right hand to every Ford Touring Car is that ever-dependable and universal "Ford After-Service." Here we are, with the genuine made Ford parts, Ford mechanics and Ford equipment, to give service to Ford cars instantly, so that your car is never out of commission.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25. 1920

Thomas R. Marshall, Vice President of the United States, remarked the other day that he was preparing to descend into the obscurity from which no vice president ever emerged. Aint he the nifty user of Attic salt? The cheap wit of the paragrapher has degraded the office of vice president, but it remained for Mr. Marshall to laugh at the scorners and to remind us that no Vice President of the United States has ever been an obscure man. He is one of the best liked men since the days of Mark Twain. And he has had a long and a distinguished career. There is no sham about Marshall visible to the naked eye, but there is sham about those posers who being afflicted with ambition pretend that they would not be vice president.

Before the election, Mr. Marshall was in Greenbrier County to make a speech and while there gathered about him a group of interested men to hear his conversation. Mr. Marshall acted like a fellow citizen and showed that the frank and fearless American still existed. He is the kind of man who if he meets with triumph or disaster, he treats those two imposters just the same.

He told the boys that every time Bryan talked in his sleep that he suffered financial loss. And a man told us that Marshall had remarked in a casual manner that every time that the country had amended the constitution that they had worsted it. And that is the subject of this sermon.

When the constitution was adopted it was a perfect document and each part was consistent with every other part. But in the heated discussions which arose in every state when it was submitted to the people, demagogues arose and demanded that it be adopted only with the tacit understanding that reservations and interpretations be immediately provided for, and the bedevilled proponents agreed to the proposition to get the thick-witted, loud mouthed partisans to hush. At the first Congress which met in 1789, therefore, the first ten amendments were proposed and in the course of the next two years were adopted by ten of the states. There is no evidence that Connecticut, Georgia, and Massachusetts ever adopted them. They were meant to guard state rights and to prevent encroachments by Congress, and the result has been just the reverse. They are used every day to give the federal courts the power to review the construction that state courts and legislatures put upon the common, ordinary rights that they were meant to keep the federal government from interfering with. For instance under them the federal courts have the right and power to pass upon what is an unreasonable search and seizure, something that otherwise would be definitely settled and determined by the state courts.

Except for the undermining tendency of the amendments as to state rights, we have no criticism to make of any of the amendments. They are all wise and just as abstract propositions for the control of human conduct. But their tendency is to centralize the government and to impair the sovereignty of the state. A way has been found to deprive the minority of rights they enjoyed under the law by the votes of the majority. The precedent has been set and it is only a matter of time until some Socialist will propose an amendment to the constitution to socialize the property of the citizens of the United States.

It behooves every thinking man to be on his guard against incorporating any purely statutory matter into the constitution. And the bigger and more unwieldy the nation becomes the greater the danger. And the infusion of foreign blood through the wide open doors to emigrants adds to the danger.

There is a close connection these days between booze and automobiles. When ever a neighborhood wakes up these fine mornings to find certain of its free running citizens studying reeling and writhing, the first thought is to look for the automobile that brought the poison into the community, though there is little use of that for it is over the hills and far away.

With the universal use of cars, moonshine can be carried great distances in a single night and they pass like ships in the night.

There is a tale going the rounds to the effect that in one of the largest towns in this part of the State that about midnight a strange car was being driven through the main street and that it collided with a telephone pole and upset and bottles of moonshine were scattered all over the street As late as it was it was but a few minutes until a large crowd had collected around the wreck and the story goes that they all helped themselves. The car was badly broken up, and the owners of the car and the crowd had very little conversation. The strangers worked hard to get the car in shape to travel again and the populace did not interfere with them. The engine would not un and presently the strangers went pushing the car away and were seen no more. The next morning there was the sign of the broken bottles and some other wreckage but from that day to this no one has any idea where the car came from, who was driving it, or where it is now. It vanished.

On another occasion a man was driving a car along a lonely mountain road when he heard a man shouting on the mountainside and he stopped the car, and wanted to know what was the matter. The voice replied and said did he want to buy any liquor? The man in the road requested the voice to come on down and say who it was but after that all was silence and that was all there was to the voice of one crying in the wilderness.

At every term of court there is evidence of moonshine manufacture that puts the old time whiskey to the blush. It is as clear as spring water and as strong as aqua fortis When they open a bottle for the jury to inspect the pungent odor fills the court house and makes its presence known.

Moonshine so near and yet so far,
And not a drop for me;
And there was moaning at the bar,
And stimulated memory.

As near as we can guess, the automobile has given the liquor trade a new lease on life. If none of the stuff is used within a hundred miles of the still, it is hard to detect the site of the factory. Undoubtedly more moonshine is here in the summer months when the automobiles can make long and mysterious trips than in the winter. And the authorities are up against a practise that makes the old fashioned jug trade look small We believe that the trade will gradually die down, and we are not sure but what it ought to be given time. That is that the crime of dealing in spirits should be taken up as a part of the day's work, the same as any other crime, and dealt with in the same manner. We are not at all sure that making a speciality of the detection of the crime does any good. Just handle it like any other offense without fear or favor and wait for a better day. It should be less of a game of wits between the officers and the moonshiners, with plenty of applause on both sides. It might be more effective to treat it like other crimes, with the cold, effective disapproval of the law.

"How is the lumber market?" this was asked a lumber dealer on his return from the large cities.

"There aint any—nothing but history," was the reply.

Honesty is the best policy, was an old saying when Benjamin Franklin was alive, and he carried the word. Within the last few days, magnates have gone about with lanterns looking for honest men to reward them, and picked on Judge Landis, of Chicago, to rehabilitate base-ball, giving him a salary of $42,500.00 a year, with a seven year contract, to look after baseball in his spare time, and take some of the curse off of it. Judge Landis is the judge who fined the Standard Oil Company $29,000,000.00. True it did not stick, but by the time the Standard Oil Company got through paying its lawyers it was punished very severely. Being fond of baseball and knowing the difference between a fly and a foul, the judge has been engaged as a great archangel of baseball and will draw a salary beyond the dreams of the average.

The other instance is that of Governor Cornwell, who on the completion of his term of office on the 4th of March next, takes up his duties as director of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway Company. He will be the only citizen of West Virginia on that board and it is an honor well deserved. The B. & O. is the patron saint of West Virginia, and had more to do with the creation of West Virginia as a separate state than any other one element. It is the sole cause of what is known as the Eastern Panhandle, where by the way, Cornwell has his home,

Willard, the President of the B. & O., is an exceptionally highgrade man, and deserves to be ranked with Lovett, Ford, Edison, Gary and other highgrade business men of America. To be associated with Willard is no no small part of the honor conferred.

We are glad to see Cornwell get this berth, and it would have been pretty slow practicing law in Hampshire County after serving as war governor of West Virginia with such signal success.

Speaking about Cornstalk, it becomes our duty to volunteer a brief for the slayers of that distinguished old torturer, having weighed the evidence and disagreed with the conclusions of certain historians in regard to that event.

After the battle of Point Pleasant a fort was maintained there as startegic point against the powerful Indian tribes located in Ohio. In 1777, we see under the handwriting of Jacob Kennison, he volunteered for ten months service and marched directly from the Little Levels to Point Pleasant where he became a member of Captain Matthew Arbuckle's company. This was the month of March The war was on with England and that country was inciting the Indian tribes to war upon the settlers. The hostilities had already broken out in the Kentucky region and the Virginia settlements moved into their stockade and waited with certainty for the savages to descend upon them. Jacob Kennison was a member of the single company which held the fort at the Point during the entire summer, and there was no question but what he was there when Cornstalk was killed, but no member of the garrison had anything to do with the killing of Cornstalk. On the other hand they attempted to save his life.

Early in the spring, Cornstalk and a younger chief called Redhawk, came to the fort to talk over the state of affairs with the commandant. Cornstalk told him that he was restraining the Shawnees with great difficulty, and that it was only a matter of a short time before the Indians would commence war upon the colonies. Capt. Arbuckle then detained the two Indians as hostages and sent word to the Governor of Virginia of his action. The government of Virginia then raised some companies in Augusta and Botetourt and sent them to the Point under Col. Skillern. Jacob Kennison says that about seven hundred men arrived there under this commander.

They found the garrison on short rations. They were there but a short time when Cornstalk's son, Ellinipsico, came into camp to see what had become of his father. This Indian made his appearance as follows: He came to the opposite bank of the river and hallooed, and Cornstalk recognized him, and had him come over.

On the very next day two men Gilmore and Hamilton, of Capt. John Hall's company of Rockbridge County crossed the river to hunt deer, at the place that Ellinipsico had emerged from the forest, and they were waylaid and fired upon by the Indians, and Gilmore was killed.

Who can doubt but what they were fired upon by the savages that Ellinipsico had brought with him to hunt up his father who had been detained at the fort for some weeks? There is no manner of doubt but that Ellinipsico had brought with him a war party not knowing that the one company garrison had been reinforced by a small army under Skillern. The necessity of hunting for the purpose of supplying the army took the men into the woods and it is possible that they stumbled on the encampment of Indians who considered that they were forced to kill them to keep the word from the fort that a force of Indians was surrounding the fort. If such was the case the man that they killed roused memories that were fatal to the house of Corstalk. For Gilmore was a survivor of the Gilmore family who were massacred on Kerr's Creek in Rockbridge County by Cornstalk on October 10, 1759, eighteen years before. Capt. John Hall in whose command Gilmore marched, was a near relation of those Gilmore's. When Hamilton appeared with the news of Gilmore's death, Capt. Hall and a party of men crossed the river immediately and brought the scalped body back to camp with them.

They were frontiersmen and used to reading sign. They must have known that these Indians were Shawnees under Cornstalk, and they must have recollected that Cornstalk had killed the Gilmore's in 1759; that Cornstalk had led the party that massacred the settlers at Muddy Creek, and at the Clendennin farm, in 1763, in the Big Levels of Greenbrier; and that he was the warrior in command of the battle at Point Pleasant in 1774.

The summary vengeance that these Rockbridge men, determined upon in the woods is what might have been expected from the stern men of the times, and if they had not acted so swiftly there is no doubt but that chiefs would have been accused and tried by the military authorities.

Col. Stuart has left a writing to the effect that he stood on the bank of the river with Captain Arbuckle, and that he had observed to Arbuckle as he saw them carry the scalped body of the slain soldier down the bank and place it in the canoe and start to pass the river that they would be for killing the hostages, and that he and Arbuckle met them on the bank and endeavored to dissuade them, and were themselves threatened with instant death. That Captain Hall was the leader, and that he and his men cocked their guns and made Stuart and Arbuckle stand aside.

Cornstalk met the infuriated soldiers at the door of his cabin and fell with seven bullets through his body. Ellinipsico was killed by being shot as he sat. And Redhawk went up the chimney but was discovered and killed.

Before the men landed Ellinipsico was accused of having come with the Indians who had killed Gilmore and he denied this, and on that issue rests the innocence or guilt of the three Indian chiefs.

Who can belive that Cornstalk, the chief of all the Shawnees, and Ellinipsico, his son, were in ignorance of the existence of the band of Indians who slew Gilmore? It is not reasonable that Ellinipsico was telling the truth when he said that he had come alone to rescue his father.

It is significant that no action was taken against the soldiers who killed the chiefs. Patrick Henry was governor of Virginia, and he demanded that they be brought to trial, but not even the influence of his high office could lay a hand upon one of the men who had been maddeded by the circumstances and brought retribution to the treacherous savages.

Within a few days, Gen. Hand, a trained officer, arrived and took up the matter in council with the officers of the army, and though he was the commanding general, and the offence was so recent, not even his great influence could detain the men who killed the chiefs for an instant. These well known facts indicate that the actions of the avengers of the Gilmores were justified in the minds of upwards of a thousand Virginians who were in the best position to judge of the facts and circumstances.

This case is like many other cases which have been distorted by history. And in many instances, the acts of the brave men of the Revolution are easy to defend.

Cornstalk was a vessel of wrath and he was cut off and he perished and the score against him was a long one.

MCLAUGHLIN HOME BURNED

The two-story brick house owned by Rev. H. W. McLaughlin, located on the Clifton Farm and occupied at the time by Edgar H. McLaughlin and family, was destroyed by fire Tuesday morning with practically all of Edgar's household and kitchen furniture—a serious disaster for him. This was the old McClung home, long a landmark in this part of the county and its destruction is a severe loss. The property was insured in the Farmer's Home Fire Insurance Company for $2,000 which will by no means cover the loss.

The fire broke out in the attic from a cause unknown.—Greenbrier Independent.

MY FRIENDS IN THE MOUNTAINS

ELIZABETH THORNTON

Being an Account of Three Month's Mission Work by an A. T. S. Girl in the Virginia Mountains.

Entirely surrounded and cut off by high, wooden ridges, these people of the mountains live in a beautiful fertile valley in the western section of one of our fairest Southern States. They are apparently content with their lot, yet upon closer study and more prolonged acquaintance, one discovers a certain restlessness—an unexpressed, nameless longing which they cannot themselves divine. We began our work among them early in the summer, and during the three months of our stay conducted two Sunday schools, prayer meeting, a Christian Endeavor Society, and a day school. At Mountain Grove, our nearest post-office, stands a Presbyterian church building in which, so far as we were able to find out, no Sunday school or other organized form of service had been held for nearly four years. That fact again brings home the challenge, "The need to-day is not so much of money, but of men."

The territory just adjoining Mountain Grove, known as Little Back Creek, was really the center of our activities. There we made our home with one of the families—and may I add that our mountain home was ideal in every respect. There we taught daily in a tiny one-room school house which served as a church as well, and there we made the acquaintance of the five in the picture, Ethel the pretty little black-haired girl, and her two brothers sitting just to her left, had not been in school at all until this summer. There had been no school in that place for two years, and no Sunday school. Small wonder then that the children had "done fergot all they ever knowed." The evidence of lack of training was appalling, but the bright minds, active, health bodies, and the eager unfailing interest, were a constant challenge to give them the best that was in us.

From the weaver of carpets and coverlets who had long since passed her allotted threescore years and ten, to nine-year-old Bill, the weaver of dreams, each person in the valley was a centre of our active interests and our prayers. During a meeting conducted by Rev. William E. Hudson, of Staunton, Va., many confessed Christ, among them being four heads of families. These Christians, young in faith, are now sadly in need of a leader, and as yet no teacher has been secured for the school this winter. There is no Presbyterian preacher on the circuit—where is their chance?

To return to the weaver of carpets, she is altogether delightful. Her record for the past twenty years, in weaving, is eleven hundred and fifty yards of the most perfect and most beautiful work I have ever seen. How we did love to hear her narrate the ever day events of her life, her words did so strongly testify to her serene constant trust in her Lord. She always made me think of the last chapter of Margaret Sangster's book, "Winsome Womanhood," for with such sweet patience and peaceful contentment was she "waiting for the angels."

To come to Bill—well, he was just Bill—alive to his finger tips, quick laughing eyes, bubbling with the energy and fun of youth. I well remember my first question to him and how he answered. "Bill," I asked, "in what State do you live?" "Little Back Creek," he answered, with prompt decision. Thus Bill described his State and that of many others in a far better, clearer way, than any language of mine could picture it to you. There are countless others in the mountains, bright, interesting boys and girls with wonderful possibilities. Yet life to most of them is just an ignorant, blotted page, as they live their lives apart from the busy world, following the ways and customs of their fathers. The older generation, too, realize the need, for in their own appealing way they have told me, "You have no right to leave our children to grow up like this without a teacher."

Friends, there is One who stands eady to be their teacher, to meet heir needs. His gospel alone is indispensable and adequate. It is through our lips that he wishes to speak to them, through our lives that he wishes to lift them to him. He has never failed, yet sometimes do we not fail him?—The Missionary Survey.

The Law Of Progress

is as unchangeable as the famous laws of the Medes and the Persians.

The individual who spends more than he earns—or, as if far too often the case, spends all before he earns—travels in a hopeless circle. He cannot advance, and "he who does not advance, recedes."

The person who saves BEFORE he spends inevitably registers progress. Why not put the principle to the test?

HILLSBORO

We are having very cold weather, but have had some fine fall and winter weather up to this time.

Charles LaRue is slowly recovering from an attack of typhoid fever.

Mrs. Wallace Beard has been very ill but is improving.

Clyde Grimes moved to our town last week from Lobelia. We are always glad to have some one move to our town.

Earl Beard is home from the University.

Earl Carlisle was called home on account of his sister being ill, who is in the Marlinton Hospital.

Howard Spencer has been confined to his room for a few days with measles. We hope he will soon be out again.

W. J. Fowler is laying the foundation for his new house.

HILLSBORO HIGH SCHOOL

English IV Class

Friday evening, Nov. 12th the Greenbank High School basket ball team was here. Even though the weather was unfavorable a goodly sized crowd saw the game. We won by the close score of 12 to 10. The game was a hard fought one from start to finish as ever player of both teams did good work.

Saturday night, November 13 our team played the Durbin team on our floor. We were again victorious.

Friday night, after the game with Greenbank, the first social of the year was given by the high school in honor of the visiting team. The occasion was a very enjoyable one to all present. We may expect some of our visitors back again whether we play basket ball again this season or not.

Chapel services were conducted Monday, Nov. 15, by Rev. J. C. Johnson of the Presbyterian church. He gave a very interesting talk on, "The Value of Friendship."

Dr. Light, a visiting minister from Marlinton conducted Chapel services Monday. He told three Bible stories in a most interesting style. Dr. Light is here helping to conduct the revival at the Methodist church.

The Normal Training class will begin observation work in the grades this week.

The Shakespeare and Browning Literary Societies gave their second programs of the year Friday afternoon. The work is going well.

The grades for the second month are out. We are not telling about all of them. We hope to make them more nearly approach the limit of 100 in the very near future.

Thanksgiving vacation will begin Wednesday evening and last until Monday. Some students and teachers expect to spend the time hunting.

Mr. Rouzer of the State Vocational Agriculte board, visited the school Monday.

The Marlinton Electric Company have accepted the agency for the Buic automobile.

THANKSGIVING OFFERING APPEAL BY DAVIS CHILD SHELTER

The above society was organized in 1896 for the care and training of the orphan and homeless children of all West Virginia.

Shortly after organization the late Hon. H. G. Davis, the great friend of West Virginia orphans, gave the Society a home for the unfortunate little ones, which is located in Charleston, W. Va., supplementing this generous gift by the yet more helpful donation of $100 per month since 1896. To this first building Mr. Davis has added a two-story building, thus greatly increasing our capacity for caring for orphan children.

Into this Home, named Davis Child Shelter in honor of its generous donor we have gathered 1009 homeless little ones in whose behalf we make this earnest appeal for Thanksgiving Offering. We need to accumulate a surplus fund for winter supplies, and to carry the Child Rescue Work far into the new year. We would like to give an extended account of what the rescue of these 1009 homeless orphans means to the State. society and especially to themselves, but space will not allow. We appeal to every patriotic citizen to send a liberal Thanksgiving offering to the undersigned.

DWIGHT NOTTINGHAM

On last Wednesday the body of Dwight Nottingham was buried at Seebert, the funeral being conducted from the Seebert Methodist church.

The young man was the son of Mrs. J. E. Hite and her husband, the late Emmett Nottingham. His age was twenty years, and he died at Akron, Ohio, on November 13, from a pistol wound inflicted by his own hand on November 10, while mentally unbalanced. Before his death, he regained his mind, and could give no reason for his rash act. Not being able to recall anything about it.

No young man had more to live for than Dwight Nottingham. Being refused permission to volunteer in the late war on account of his youth, he went into the railroad work and advanced so rapidly that he was promoted to the important position of locomotive engineer before his twentieth birthday. He literally worked day and night at his job and at his studies, and accomplished in a few months what usually takes as many years. The result was a breakdown. Following a night of study, on Tuesday November 9, he went out on an extremely hard run, and came back that night utterly exhausted. Hardly had he gotten to bed when he was called out to take an engine on another hard run. His friends noticed that he acted in a peculiar manner, but his run was made in safety as his was the second engine in a double header. Soon after returning to his room, a shot was heard, and young Nottingham was found with a bullet hole in his left breast.

Dwight's mother, Mrs. J. E. Hite, was notified and she was with her son for two days before he died. The last day he was perfectly rational, deplored the act and witnessed a happy profession of his faith.

Dwight Nottingham was to have been married shortly and had saved enougn money to buy a fine home.

Mrs. Alice B. Welton, of Piedmont agent for the State Board of Children'sGuardians for the district composed of the counties of Pocahontas, Randolph, Tucker and Grant, was here last week to investigate the conditions of a family which had been reported as in bad circumstances. Mrs. Welton also has to do with the finding of homes for children who are taken to the State home for children at Elkins. This home can take care of only 60 children, and of necessity it is but a clearing house where poor children can be cared for until proper homes can be found for them. Any one desiring to adopt a child is asked to communicate with Mrs Welton, at Piedmont. She would also like to be notified of any case of neglected children, orphans with no one to care for them, children in unfit homes. whose parents cannot or will not bring them up properly.

The State Board of Children's Guardians succeeds the State Humane Society by a recent act of the legislature, and is doing a good systematic work for the neglected children of the State, although much hampered by an insufficient appropriation.

THE POCAHONTAS TIMES

Entered at the Postoffice at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 22 1920

When the New York legislature assembled the other day, the Speaker of the House called the six members who had been elected on the Socialist ticket from districts in New York City, where the foreign element is strong, and told them they were suspected of not being true to the government of the state and nation, and that they should not sit as members until their state of mind had been investigated. A resolution was put and carried with but two dissenting votes, and the Socialists were forcibly ejected from the floor of the house. Thereupon the clouds began to lower upon that House. The New York World threw its usual fit and declared that the legislature had committed a capitol crime against representative government, and that there could be never more any laying of heads upon pillows in peace and security in this country. Charles Evans Hughes and W. H. Taft and hosts of other authorities declared that the legislature had done a hellish thing, and for a moment the country was all but swept off its feet. We know that we were that way, but like a good many other law suits, what appears at the first glance to be plain, upon study and investigation, appears to be just the opposite of what was the first impression.

The case is very similar to those that were so common in the days of reconstruction after the Civil War when all of our kin were disqualified from holding office because they could not take the test oath, that they had not given aid or comfort to the Confederacy. The older men in this couty remember when a Captain in in the Confederate Army took this oath and was promptly indicted and convicted of perjury. The proceeding in New York is based on the same general grounds that the Socialist party gave aid and comfort to Germany. Every one will remember what keen anxiety was felt at the time that we entered the war over the question of whether we would hang together or fall apart. It meant the world and all to us. At that time the Socialists tried to stampede the country and bring confusion to nation. They succeeded in disrupting their own party, many good Americaes leaving it, and repudiating its doctrines in a a public way. To say the least, the loyalty of the Socialists was under suspicion, and this would justify the legislature in ordering an inquiry. And it is not to be wondered at that the rule of procedure in the Berger case was followed. That is, of inquiring into the fitness of the members accused, with vacant seats from the districts they represented.

There does not seem to be any menace to our form of representative government in this proceeding. Just the reverse. The terms of the members were purposely made short so that the people could control the body by frequent elections, and such questions as they are now considering is one of the things that they were elected for. If the course does not please the majority then they will suffer at the next election. We have only two real safeguards in our government—the supreme power of the people at the polls, and the freedom of their representatives under the law while in office.

There is going to be a big trial over the Socialist members and much smoke will arise therefrom.

Under the cover of this smoke, the Senate of the United States will make a stragetic retreat from its position and make peace with Germany. Being of a suspicious nature, we are half way of the opinion that the excitement in New York was created for some such purpose, for the holding up of the peace treaty had just about turned the whole country against one of its great branches of the government.

Young Theodore Roosevelt is a member of the New York legislature and the assertion has been freely made that he is the father of the thought to haze the Socialists. They profess to see a touch of the fine Roosevelt hand in the matter.

With our fatal propensity of rushing into print, we sent the World a letter which that paper printed and which we are vain enough to reproduce in this issue. We do not claim to have cleared the muddy waters any. We read the World diligently. But it is the greatest kicker of them all. It fights prohibition, the Democratic city government, the alien and sedition laws, and a lot of things that we country people hold most dear. It has got down to the place where we are together on but two things, the peace treaty, and Wilson, and it is getting sort of weak on Wilson.

No clear skies are to be expected until after the election, which the American Legion is going to hold on election day in November. The Republicans are like the church that knows it has got religion but fears backsliding, and the Democrats are like the one that hopes it is elected but cannot be sure.

What is to be, will be, and as George B. McClellan said: It is not given to our weak intellects to understand the steps of Providence as they occur; we comprehend them only as we look back upon them in the far-distant past.

The letter from a surveyor of Augusta County about trees is appreciated. The Matthew Edmiston who marked that tree in 1743, came to Augusta County, by the Pennsylvania route in 1740, and is the ancestor of the Edmiston clan of West Virginia. He had a large family. His son, James Edmiston was born in Augusta County in 1746. He married Jane Smith who came over from Ireland. One of their children was Andrew Edmiston, born in 1777, the famous pioneer who settled in the Levels of this county. This Andrew Edmiston was the strongest man in the county in his time and was the champion of of the county for many years. He was the father of Judge Matthew Edmiston, who was born in Pocahontas County, in 1814, but who was for most of his life a resident of Lewis County. He was the father of Hon. Andrew Edmiston of Lewis County. Judge Edminston was a member of the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia at the date of his death. A fine portrait hangs in the Supreme Court building at Charleston. It shows that he was a very distinguished looking man.

We think we know what the tree of knowledge was that was called for in the old survey referred to in the letter of Mr. Collins. The line ran to a tree of knowledge and a beech, that is, to a birch and a beech. At the time of the survey it was considered that knowledge could not be imparted in schools without a certain amount of corporal punishment, and for some reason, the birch was the name of the instrument that it was laid on with. At that time Washington Irving was the high light in American literature. In his Sketch Book, he speaks of boys, having six weeks emancipation from the abhorred thraldrom of book, birch, and pedagogue.

Irving also has the following in the Legend of Sleepy Hollow: The school house stood in a rather lonely but pleasant situation, just at the foot of a wooded hill, with a brook running close by, and a formidable birch tree growing at one end of it. From hence the low murmur of the pupil's voices conning over their lessons, might be heard on a drowsy summer's day, like the hum of a bee hive, interrupted now and then by the authoritive voice of the master, in the tone of menace or command; or peradventure, by the appalling sound of the birch, as he urged some tardy loiterer along the flowery path of knowledge. Truth to say, he was a conscientious man, and ever bore in mind the golden maxim, "Spare the rod and spoil the child."

So we do not think it far fetched to say that the surveyor had a little dry humor in his make up and left it to be puzzled over.

Common consent makes the tree of knowledge that Adam and Eve ate the fruit of an apple, but this could hardly be an apple tree. In India, there is a tree call the tree of knowledge, which is said to be the tree that grew in the Garden of Eden. The sap is poisonous. This is from a book.

We figure out that the birch is the tree of knowledge. The meaning of the word when it is used as a verb: To birch, is to chastise, to flog. Scott says in Rob Roy: Why not go to Westminster or Eton at once, man, and take to Lilly's Grammar and Accidence, and to the birch, too, if you like it?

To send a school-boy to Birchin Lane, was to send him to be whipped. Birchin Lane was the name of a street in London.

Thomas Hood, who wrote the Song of a Shirt, flourished from 1799 to 1845, and at the time of the survey was a popular author. He uses the exact expression in The Irish School master, where he says: That sour tree of knowledge—now a birch.

So let us imagine that the surveyor was a reader of Scott, Hood, and Irving, and when he found a birch growing in the wilderness, left evidence of of his erudition by inserting in the record the fanciful name of the tree of knowledge.

Mr. Collins theory that the annulations of a tree is the oldest weather record is eminently sound. It is the only record that we have of whether a certain year centuries ago had a wet or dry summer. The tree will disclose it by the extent of its growth.

There is nothing like a tree for a monument. The American Forestry Association is advocating memorial trees. Nothing is likely to endure so long. The common custom of marking healthy hardwood trees in land surveys makes use of the most convenient and the most lasting object known to man, and in addition it leaves an everlasting record of the year that the mark was made. Block the tree and count the rings and if the issue hangs on the age of the survey, the year is given with a certainty that cannot be ignored. Nothing but nature can build a book like that, adding a page each year, and one page only. There can be no falsehood in that record. No plea of nul tiel record is ever advanced to overcome that evidence.

There is an interesting point of law that has been discussed around firesides a thousand times, and one which we have never heard answered positively by a lawyer. And that is whether a corner or line tree can be legally cut and destroyed. There is no exception in the statute. It says that if any one break down, injure, deface, or destroy any tree marked for the purpose of designating the boundaries of land, he shall be liable to indictment, fine and imprisonment. The question that has puzzled the land owners is whether if all the landowners interested in the tree agree can they legally market the tree? It is a sort of a relative to the hopelessness of the situation that is expressed in the eastern proverb, of, if the man and the woman agree, what can the Caliph do?

Our guess is that the meaning of the statute is that the tree is not to be destroyed even by agreement of the owners. Sometimes lands of strangers, some distance away are to be located by a standing corner on a tract several tracts removed from the survey in question, and it is like triangulation, no telling how far the net work of surveys is affected.

Woodman spare that tree, touch not a single bough, it is not what it used to be, it is a corner now.

One of the counties, Fayette, we think, in early days, took as one corner the house of a certain man on the run, the object being to include him in the new county. The call was to a corner on that run so as to include this cabin. The man moved up the creek three times building a new cabin each time, and every time he moved he carried the county line with him. Stone monuments are expensive. They would never be built. They would not last as long as a tree any way. A stake at a corner has come to mean a point at which no stake was ever driven. It is the most shadowy of all monuments. The running stream is recognized to be a changable thing and in law it carries the line with it when ever it changes its course. With the meanderings of the run, has a meaning that the run not only winds when the language was used, but that i may change its course later.

The tree is the most stable and reliable of all land marks.

The West Virginia University voted on the peace treaty as follows: Ratification without amendment, 228; opposed to ratification in any form, 140; in favor of ratification with Lodge reservations, 101; for ratification on compromise reservations, 154. This vote showed about the same division as colleges generally throughout the land.

The main anxiety on the part of the managers of the Republican party is to so conduct the national convention, that it will give the American Legion no chance to take the studs.

Herbert Hoover is looked upon as good candidate for either the Democratic or the Republican nomination. There is food for thought in such a political condition.

To the Editor of The World:

When the New York legislature sloughed off its Socialist members it acted well within its powers and perhaps within its rights, just as the Boston Tea Party did. The most reprehensible thing about it is that it made the old fogies swear. There are two ways of doing things in America. One is the bold way and the other is the inert way. You and I, perhaps, might justify the curse that the poet put on this country:

"His easy unswept hearth he lends,
From Labrador to Guadeloupe;
Till, elbowed out by sloven friends,
He camps, in sufferance, on the stoop."

Personally I am like old Senator Lindsay's hired man whose word was when he was asked to take a drink, that he was never no hand to argue. But as the Socialists have been hunting a fight so long, I am glad that they have got one at last. There are two grand examples of countries where Socialists predominate—Germany and Russia, and as peaceful and no account as I am, I hope there is a fight or two in the old man yet, to stamp out the spirit which makes a mock of our constitution.

Of late I have been studying the law called praemunire, the old English law making it an offense to introduce a foreign power within the realm in dimunition of the authority of the government. It is probably an obsolete statute, but it was a wise one and it worked very well, and did not have to be invoked very often, even in the days when a certain class of Englishmen obeyed the laws of England under protest, and gave full force and effect papal decrees. The warning seems to have been sufficient and the time came when it was not needed.

One of the penalties was to make the offender ineligible for jury service and this is on the theory that he was not fit to associate with the other gentlemen on the jury, and that the others should not be compelled to sit with him.

The legislature may have the right, that is the members, to say with whom they will associate in the performance of their duties, and there may be no limit to this right under the broad blue sky, for it seems to me that the theory of our form of government makes this power in them supreme. They certainly could refuse to sit with a leper, though mentally endowed with virtues as infinite as man may undergo.

To me, the right to own a humble home is one of the most sacred blessings vouched for by the law, and I have no patience with those tinctured with Commonism, "those who are willing to put in a penny and draw out a shilling."

And if this is the iron heel, make the most of it.

Commissioners' Sale of Valuable Land

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, entered in the chancery cause of P. H. McNulty's Administrator, vs P. H. McNulty's Heirs and others, the undersigned special commissioners, on Monday, February 9, 1920, at 1 o'clock p. m., at the front door of the court house of Pocahontas County, will proceed to sell at public auction to the highest bidder a certain tract of land near Lobelia in the Little Levels District of said county, being the farm of which the late P. H. McNulty died seized. Said tract contains 320 acres and is all under fence. It lies six miles from Hillsboro, Has on it a good dwelling house, two barns, and a silo, and is a well balanced farm.

Terms of sale: One third cash in hand, the residue in two equal installments due in six and twelve months respectively, with interest, the purchases executing notes with good personal security, the title to be retained as security too.

T. S. McNeel,
Andrew Price,
Special Commissioners.

I, G. W. Sharp, Clerk of the Circuit court of said county do certify that the above named special commissioners have executed bond as required by said decree.

G. W. Sharp, Clerk.

THE SOLDIER
(Our Side of It)

We'er not ashamed of the uniform, and if you are a friend,
You will not say against it any word that will offend.
It has covered honored bodies, and by heroes has been worn
Since the day of the Republic, when the Stars and Stripes were born.

Uniforms have many patterns, some are khaki, some are blue,
And the men who choose to wear them, are of many patterns too.
Some are sons of wealthy parents,
some are college graduates,
Some have manly virtures, some are reprobates.
We have many skilled mechanics,
men of letter and of brain
Who have loyally served their country, and a credit they have gained.
No indeed; they are not all angels,
blackguards, yes, we have afew,
But when they came into the service,
they were all civilians too.

Men of all kinds when they are drinking, misbehave, act rough and swear,
Drunken soldiers or civilians are disgusting anywhere.
Grant us then your kind forgiveness,
we'll appreciate more,
Than a lot of noise and cheering,
when we are leaving for war.

We have sat with you in public, and have smelled your whisky breath,
Heard remarks insane and silly,
nearly boring us to death,
Though we offered no objections,
when in theatres we have met.
Still you think you should exclude us,
when attended by our set.

If you meet us out in public, on the streets or anywhere,
We don't merit sneering glances, nor a patronizing stare,
For we have an honored calling as our garments plainly show,
You may be a thief or a parson, how on earth are we to know?

I don't care what your profession, occupation, what you do
When you are looking at a soldier, and he is looking back at you.
Who is there to judge between you,
as we stand there man to man?
Only one, "The Great Almighty," name another if you can.

Drop your proud and haughty bearing and your egotistic pride,
Get acquainted with the soldier, and the heart and soul inside.
Test and try to analyze him, criticize him through and through
And you will likely find him, just as good a man as you.

PRICES IN 1845

In the Lexington. (Va.) Gazette's 75-year ago column we find the following statement of prevailing price in the Lexington market in the month of November, 1845, and have no doubt that about the same prices prevailed in Lewisburg at that time: Flour, $3.50 a barrel; buckwheat flour $2.00 a hundred weight; corn 50c a bushel; Irish potatoes 50c a bushel; sweet potatoes, 75c a bushel; turnips 30c a bushel; apples 50c a bushel; pumpkins 6c to 8c, according to size; chickens 8 to 12 1-2c, according to size and fatness; turkeys 25 to 35c; eggs 8c a dozen; butter 12c a pound: North River fish 25c to 35c a string. Squirrels, rabbits, partridges, coons and opossums in abundance, are to be found through out Rockbridge, but none in the market.—Greenbrier Independent.

The Federal Government has caused to be made Victory Medals for all men who served their country in the Great War. The distribution of these rewards of gallantry have been greatly retarded because of the inaccessibility of many of the ex-service men. Colonel Woodson, in charge of the recruiting station for this district, stationed at Huntington, has appealed to me to aid in bringing this matter to the attention of the men who are entitled to the medals. That can be done only through the cooperation of the newspapers. Will you not urge upon your local city and county officials to stimulate the men to file their applications through the nearest Army Recruiting officer.

This should be a matter of local pride.

Very sincerely yours,
Jno. J. Cornwall, Governor.

A TRIBUTE OF RESPECT

These lines are written in loving respect to the memory of Mrs. Mary Serene Loveridge Clark, of Loveridge, W. Va., who on October 20, 1920 at Kellam Hospital, Richmond, Va., arrived at the terminus of a long earthly life of 84 years nearly completed and entered into life eternal. The bliss of which we are ignorant she testified during her illness of it being well with her soul. She had been a member of the Presbyterian church for many years.

The writer isn't well enough informed of her life to give the details in full but knows of her early home being in the state of Connecticut and her education was received in some of her home institutions of learning, and she bore all through her life the impress of refinement and culture and when we looked on her quiet face in her casket we observed that impress was yet there.

She was the widow of Henry N. Clark, who died in 1902, and was the mother of nine children, of which only four survive her: Rev. R. H. Clark of Kincaid, W. Va., R. C. and Peter of Loveridge and Ryce of New Haven, Conn. One son, Sheldon, died in early manhood and one son and her three daughters died in infancy and early childhood. We were comforted by the knowledge that although Mrs. Clark had no daughter of her own to care for her during her illness, that some other mothers girls gave to her affectionate care.

Her body was brought from Richmond, Va., and on Friday a number of relatives and friends gathered at the Presbyterian church at Hillsboro where her funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. C. Johnson, and her earthly remains were taken from thence to the family graveyard on the old Clark estate and there laid to rest by the side of her husband and other loved ones.

The writer feels in the departure of this lady that her earthly friends number one less but is comforted by knowing that there is one more tie on the "other side" and one more that is safely housed from the storms and turmoils of this earthly life.

There are many others than her own family and relatives that are touched and bereaved by her going home but we should be consoled by believing that it is well with her.

May God's comforting grace abound to all the bereaved ones.

S. V. M.

To The People of West Virginia:

All history makes it clear that no nation need expect either a high degree of personal efficiency or general happiness without a good system of public schools. From the first education has been regarded as the bulwark of our own democracy. But at the present moment school systems everywhere are in distress and thoughtful men are alarmed over the situation. In our own state several hundred schools are without teachers and some rural schools have been closed two or even three years in succession. Our school authorities have lowered standards in order to increase the supply of teachers, but in vain. Citizens are making frantic appeals for teachers but none are obtainable. We are not alone in our trouble. Other states are no better off. The problem is not one that teachers and school officers alone may solve. It has grown beyond their reach. Accordingly, I am responding to the request of the United States Commissioner of Education, Doctor P. P. Claxton, approved by the conference of school superintendents recently held in Parkersburg, and designating December 5-11 as a special "school week" for West Virginia, and I here by call upon all good citizens who believe in education and have the welfare of the state at heart to respond to the call for cooperation in this effort to put the facts before the people and to devise some means of remedying the present conditions which in some sections of the state are intolerable.

I would respectfully request that all mininster of the state preach on education on Sunday, December 5th. That other religious organizations, Young Men's and Women's Christian Associations, Young Men's and Women's Hebrew Associations, Knights of Columbus and Young People's Associations in the churches should devote their meetings on this day to discussions of the value of education and urge upon young people the importance of their taking advantage of all possible opportunities for increase of knowledge and the perfecting of their training.

That during the week all women's clubs, parent-teacher associations, chambers of commerce, boards of trade, Kiwanis and Rotary clubs and other important organizations, labor unions, farmers unions and all patriotic and civic societies devote one meeting to a discussion of the needs of education in their State and local communities, holding special meetings for this purpose, if necessary. That moving-picture houses put on the screens that week facts and figures in regard to the importance of education and the conditions and needs of the schools. That in the university, colleges and normal schools the convocation hours of the week be devoted to a discussion of education in general and of their own particular needs.

That all elementary and high school teachers devote one period during each day of the week to this subject, telling the children about education in their local communities and in State and Nation, how the schools are supported and how money is spent for them, their economic, social and civic value and other facts of interest.

That all schools and debating societies holding meetings during the week take for their subject of debate some topic relating to education in local community, city, county or State.

To the end that there may be a revival of interest in education, an improvement in conditions and a sufficient number of competent teachers to supply our public schools.

John J. Cornwell,
Governor

Judge Sharp had a special term of circuit court on Monday.

A List of Real Estate

WALLACE G. BURNER

On last Thursday morning, December 9, Wallace G. Burner was found dead in his bed at his home five miles from Durbin. He was a bachelor and lived by himself, and it was thought that he had died on Tuesday night before. His home was about half a mile from the homes of his brothers. He had been last seen alive on Tuesday afternoon. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause of death and from appearances his end had been most peaceful, probably dying in his sleep. Had he lived until January 11 next, he would have been 64 years old. Burial at the Goodsell cemetery at Bartow, the services being conducted by Rev. J. C. Spindler of the Methodist Church South, of which the deceased had been a member for many years.

Mr. Burner was a good citizen and a useful, likable man. He was the son of the late Lafayette Burner and his wife Nancy Ann Wooddell. Of his father's family his brothers James S., Urbanus, and J. L., E. F., E. B., L. M., and L. A. Burner; his sisters, Mrs. Sallie McLaughlin, and Mrs. Ida Curry of Cass; Mrs. Nannie Wilfong, of Buckhannon; Mrs. Mattie Kincaid, of Marlinton, Mrs. Mary Kincaid and Mrs. Annie Merchaneu, of Durbin. and Mrs. Lottie Brown, of Arbovale.

KILLED IN THE WOODS

Oliver Gregory was hit by a falling limb last Monday, December 13, while working in the Elk woods for the West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. and was so badly hurt that he died the next morning. Hs skull was crushed and he was knocked over a cliff by the force of the blow. Dr. Cox attended him and he was brought to the Marlinton Hospital where an operation was performed, but he was too greatly injured to recover. The body of the young man was prepared for burial by undertaker Z. S. Smith, and shipped to his home on Elk River in Webster County.

Oliver Gregory was about 23 years old, and had worked in the Elk woods a number of years. His home was in Webster county, near Addison.

Editor of Pocahontas Times:

I notice in your columns of December 9th an article headed "Compensation of County Officers," which contained the following: "We heard an ex-sheriff of one of the big counties in the coal district say that the last year he served as sheriff, it paid that office about $100,000."

There are a great many good things in the County Salary Bill, but if the newspapers are not very careful, they will mislead a great many people in regard to the amount of salary and commission that County officers under the old rule received.

The last year of the old rule in this County was the largest pay any sheriff or county official in this State ever received and that gross amount was $43.365, including all fees for the jail, service of papers, salary and commission. The law required that the sheriff turn 15 per cent of that amount into the County fund, and all of the sheriff's help had to be paid out of what was left, which was a very nice salary for the sheriff providing he did not employ too much help. During the present adminis tion there has been more than twice the number of employees, at very handsome salaries, in the sheriff's office than under the old rule, and I refer you to any business people of of this County as to which administration gave the better service to the people.

The County officers throughout the State are now complaining that their salaries should be increased at the coming session of the Legislature. In a great many instances they, no doubt, are entitled to increases, but if the Legislature is not careful it will increase the ones that have no responsibility and give them equal pay with the sheriffs and other officers that are entitled to good salaries—especially in counties like this one.

At present there is a difference of only $200 between the salaries of the Circuit and County Clerks and the Sheriff in this County, and I am sure that you will agree with me that there is a greater difference in the responsibility of the two offices.

The Prosecuting Attorney in this County now has one assistant and is insisting that the members of the Legislature recommd to the next session of that Body that he be given one or two more assistants at a very good salary.

Yours very truly,
Bonner H. Hill.

P. S. Present salary:

Sheriff	$5,000.00
County & Circuit clerks,	4800.00
Prosecuting Attorney,	4500.00
Assistant Pros. Atty.	3000.00

MARLINTON METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. J. H Light, D. D., Pastor.
Sunday School at 9:45

A White Christmas, will be the subject of the pastor's morning sermon. What will you do with Jesus? is the subject for the evening sermon. The Christmas lesson is the subject for the Sunday School. Let there be a full attendance. The Sunday School is preparing for a service appropriate to the season to be held some evening during the holiday week.

To whom it may concern :

Take notice that I will on Friday the 24th day of December, 1920, apply to his Excellency John J. Cornwell. Governor of the State of West Virginia. to be pardoned from serving a sentence of 60 days in the jail of Pocahontas and the payment of a fine of $100.00 imposed upon me by the circuit court of Pocahontas county, West Virginia at its October Term 1920.

SPICE RUN

The health of the community is good although we have had lots of rain.

Spice Run sawmill has been running the past few days.

Our church work is progressing very nicely under our able pastor, Rev. Orr, and J. M. Brocious, Sunday school superintendent.

Chas A. Biggs has returned from a business trip to eastern cities.

Our school is making a fine showing. Our teachels, Prof. Hayes and Miss Gladys Collinson are giving our children the best of attention and the patrons of the school are pleased that we were able to secure the services of such able teachers.

Prof. Vance, of Hillsboro High school, made a fine speech here Dec. 11th in behalf of better education.

Roy W. Phelan spent the week end at Bartow, the guest of Mr. Collins.

Charles S. James, of Fontana, N. C., has accepted a position as mill foreman at this place. He was at Thornwood with the Thorny Creek Lumber Co. for several years.

Russell Turpin, our hustling agent, has decided to go into the wool growing. He has a fine flock of Marino sheep. Also the pure bred O. I. C. hogs.

Robert LaRue, our good natured store manager and produce buyer, has some real bargains in shoes. Bob is some hustler and has a good line.

We are going to have a big entertainment and Christmas tree here Christmas eve. It is under the skilful and willing hands of Mrs. C. A. Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Brocious and Mrs. P. G. Johnston.

Wm. Ball, who has been in Youngs town. Pennsylvania, the past three months, has returned.

J. H. Phelan has purchased a fine riding horse from Lee Clark of Hillsboro.

Our new manager for the boarding house, Miss Cora Perry, has made a wonderful improvement by painting and renovating the entire house.

Geo Ruby, of Durben, is sawing on one of the Spice Run Co's. mills on Rush Run.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Gadd have moved to Gauley Bridge where Mr. Gadd has accepted a position.

REV. ELMER C. SLOANE

Rev. Elmer C. Sloane, pastor of the Huntersville charge of the Methodist Church, South, died suddenly last Friday December 10, 1920, and was buried from the Huntersville church Sunday afternoon. the services being conducted by Rev. J. H. Light, D. D

Mr. Sloane had been unable to fill his pulpit for several Sundays past, but had so far recovered as to announce services for last Sunday. He was out Friday afternoon and on his return to his home at Minnehaha Springs was seized by a fatal illness about five o'clock and died before aid could reach him.

Mr. Sloane had been in the ministerial supply work of the Baltimore Conference for a number of years, and was in his second year on Huntersville charge. He was a faithful pastor and an earnest and effective preacher of the Gospel. He was greatly loved by the people whom he served as attested by the great throng that attended his burial services. His little daughter Virginia, is the only near relative, so far as is known to survive him.

CARD TO VOTERS

Your unsolicited endorsement I need not say was highly gratifying. I only wish to say that should you honor me by making me your choice I pledge my best energies and liberally of my time in furtherance of your best interests. I should try for reasonable not foolish economies and feel that you can reasonably expect profit from past mistakes.

Sincerely,
J. W. MILLIGAN.

From the Christian Observer we learn that O. E. McKeever has been ordained and installed a ruling elder of the Highlawn Presbyterian churoh of Huntington. This church is preparing to build a $50,000 building the coming year. A large Sunday School building has just been completed.

The little four months old child of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Swearenger, of Neola, died on Monday, December 13, 1920, after an illness of some weeks. The little body was buried at Millboro. This is the second child these parents have lost by death in the last year or two.

Miss Edith Holesapple and Lawrence Kennison, sophomores of the Edray District High School, went to Ronceverte on Wednesday to engage in a debating contest with representatives of the sophomore class of the Ronceverte High School.

HARRY GRIMES KILLS WIFE

Then Commits Suicide at Raywood

Harry Grimes, aged 32, a member of one of the oldest families in Pocahontas shot and killed his wife at Raywood last Saturday and then in turn killed himself.

The wife was a slip of a girl between sixteen and seventeen and came from Waynesville, in the mountains of North Carolina. She had been there last summer but came to Pocahontas and went to housekeeping in the woods back of Dunmore where the husband was working as a woodsman. The couple disagreed mainly on the ground of neglect and failure to support the wife. Mrs. Grimes seems to have left her husband and came to Raywood Saturday to the home of Hidy Sprouse, and and said that she wanted to work for someone until she could get money enough to pay for a ticket to North Carolina.

Shortly after Grimes came to Raywood on the hunt of his wife. He seemed to be somewhat under the influence of liquor and he told a man that he was either going to bring his wife home or he would kill himself.

About supper time he appeared in the houee of Sprouse and told his wife to get her suitcase and come with him. This she refused to do. He repeated the command three times and she refused three times. He then drew a revolver and shot her three times from which wounds she died within two hours.

Grimes left the house and no more was seen of him until two in the morning when John Will Carpenter found his dead body in the back yard of the premises where the woman had been shot. A bullet hole from temple to temple indicated the manner of his exit.

The public made up a purse and sent the young woman's body home and the body of Grimes was interred at Mt. Zion church.

Grimes was well connected but he has been a pretty rough citizen himself at times.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

At a meeting of the American Legion, held in Marlinton Saturday, the following officers were elected for the year 1921:

Post Commander, F. C. Allen, of Marlinton.
Post Adjutant, Charles C. Clendennin of Marlinton.
Post Vice Commander, J. M. Ward of Cass.
Historian, Clark Young, of Edray.
Sgt. at Arms, Fred Barlow.
Chaplain, Neff Morrison.

All members are notified that the annual dues amounting to $2.00 are due Jan. 1, 1921. Ex-service men are invited to join and send in their membership fees promptly the first of the year, and so get all the issues of the Legion Weekly.

Field Service Clerk Stewart, of Bluefield, was in Marlinton Tuesday at the invitation of the Post, and took the applications of seventeen service men for the Victory Medal. Those who have not already applied or received this medal may obtain the same by bringing or sending their Discharge papers to the Adjutant of this Post and applying for the same. This is a very handsome and desirable token, decorated with battle clasps as shown on official discharge, and can only be obtained by application through official channels. Headquarters for Pocahontas Post will be established as soon as suitable room can be secured.

Out of 123 high schools of the first class in the State, Pocahontas county has three of them. They are the district high schools of Greenbank, Edray and Little Levels. According to the population of our county, compared with the rest of the State. this is three times our quota. No other county in the State has as many high schools per capita as Pocahontas.

Rev. Dougal McDougal Monroe, of Greenbank, will preach at the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning and night.

The pulpit committee has decided to recommend to the congregation of the Presbyterian church that a call be extended to Rev. Wm. Morrison, of Princeton Seminary. It is recalled that the late Dr. John C. Barr, who was a prominent minister of Charleston, for a life time was called from Princeton Seminary to Pocahontas County about seventy years ago.

Earl Lester, 14 years old, near Marlinton, was accidentally shot in the back about two months ago by a companion, while hunting rabbits. The wound gave no trouble until recently, when it began to discharge pieces of clothing, and an operation may be necessary on account of the fistula which has developed.

W. H. Evans is advertising an auction sale of his personal property at Watoga on Friday, December 24. He is preparing to move to Wilson, Pennsylvania, where his five sons are employed. Years ago Mr. Evans lived on the farm that is now Marlinton, working for the late Andrew McLaughlin. He cleared a field on Bucks Mountain that carries his name to this day. For twenty-three years he lived in Fayette county, digging coal. He moved to Watoga about ten years ago.

Jailor Eskridge took Ed. Snyder to Durbin Monday to meet a guard from the penitentiary, who took Snyder to Moundsville to begin serving a sentence given him last June in the Circuit Court of Pocahontas for shooting up the Glen White Mine in Raleigh ccunty. The case was tried here on a change of venue. The Supreme Court refused Snyder a new trial.

Page Sutton, of Hosterman, is in town on business.

Squire Marshall is at the county seat on business.

Sheriff Eskridge passed through town enroute to the Ohio River.

O. J. Collins, of Centralia, is at home with his family this week.

Dr. G. F. Hull is on a bear hunt.

Our community was shocked to hear of the death of Wallace Burner, a well known citizen, last Thursday morning.

Mrs. J. F. Folk will soon have a millinery sale.

Mrs. Guy Mann is in charge of the Durbin Hotel.

Revs. Spindler and Johnson are holding a protracted meeting at Thornwood with good success.

Hiram Kisner and his son Lonnie were at Cass on business last week.

Hickman & Ralston have just finished up a contract of 27 car loads of pulp wood at the old Burner plant on the Western Maryland railroad.

We had a fine scare Saturday night about eight o'clock when the fire alarm was given. On investigation it was found that the jail was on fire and when opened one man was found in the jail and one man who had been put in was gone. A bed was on fire but no great damage was done.

ONOTO

The roads are very muddy and difficult to travel, but indications are good for a little cooler weather.

A very noticeable thing in this immediate community is our good neighbors, and that is a very valuable asset.

A good neighbor is one who bids you the time of day, calls to ask what he can do when you are sick, and actually does things for you at that particular time. We have them here. They keep their chickens and pigs at home, never carouse around after ten o'clock at night. They call you Tom if you happen to be a Tom, and feel free to enter your house by the kitchen door if that is the more convenient way. When their wives bake and have unusually good luck the best loaf goes to their neighbor, it exprseses their friendship, and love for their neighbor, after a few days the loaf returns in the form of an apple pie hot from the oven, or a bowl of dumplings cooked in the home made blackberry wine left from the boiling of a nice piece of beef or pork. So the country life is linked up with many blessings of this character, and kind, it is a pleasure to live in the free balmy air, among this kind and class of human beings.

Frank Baxter butchered three fine hogs Monday of this week.

Mitchel Barlow of Webster County is sojourning among friends and relatives in this vicinity.

Our school at Pine Grove opened Monday with Glenn Barlow as teacher. We are glad to have a school here, and wish for Mr. Barlow a very successful term.

Singing at Hamlin Chapel Sunday night in connection with the Young Peoples meeting was well attended, and a very successful sing.

The little child of Mrs. Florence Beverage is very sick threatened with pneumonia.

Mrs. Neal Beverage and little daughter, Thelma are spending the winter with Mrs. Arnett McNeill.

The local schools will be closed from December 23 to January 3rd for the Christmas holidays.

The third number of the Lecture Course,—"The Virginia Girls," will appear in the High School Auditorium, December 22nd.

Auctsoneer Gum reports a very successful sale of J. A. Cleek's property cn Knapps Creek Wednesday.

"A Singing Orchestra"—"The Virginia Girls," in the High School on Wednesday evening, December 22nd. Will you hear them?

VOL. XXXVIIII NO 15 — MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA; DECEMBER 23, 1920 — $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

THE DEATH OF S. S. VARNER

Ends his Life in a Fit of Melancholia

S. S. Varner, one of the prominent citizens of this county killed himself at his home at Riverside, a suburb of Marlinton, Monday, the 20th. He recently purchased from Miss May O. Moore, the residence and land known as the Cunningham Place. On Monday, Mrs. Varner came to the stores here to do some shopping. She left home at 2 p. m. and returned about four o'clock. She found the lifeless body of her husband hanging from the rafters in the mow of the barn. The body was cold showing that life had been extinct for sometime.

It was apparent that he had taken a small rope, doubled it, and tied the loose ends to a rafter. With the loop end a noose had been made. A barrel was there with a board on top of it and he had jumped from the barrel and accomplished the act of self destruction.

Mr. Varner was about seventy years old. He had spent practically all of his long and useful life on a fine bluegrass farm near Linwood. Recently he sold it for a sum that made him independently wealthy and moved to this place. He has never been like himself since he changed his mode of life. He was too old to be moved from his accustomed surroundings. About a month ago he married for the second time. Recently he has been under the care of a physician, though there was no apprehension on the part of anyone that his mind had given away.

He leaves surviving him, his widow, who was Miss Bertha Boswell, and one daughter, Mrs. Myrtle Coyner.

It is a sad ending for our old friend and mars the life history of a splendid man, but we came to the conclusion long ago that a person who destroys himself is not mentally responsible at the time.

"Beware of desperate steps. The darkest day, Live till tomorrow, will have passed away."

FEDERAL LAND BANK

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors, of The Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, a cumulative dividend of 6 per cent, payable January 1st, on stock of record June 30, 1920, was declared. About 6,000 farmers, who are borrowing stockholders in in the District comprising the states of Peunsylvania, Maryland, Deleware Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, will participate in this dividend.

In view of the fact that this Bank has been in existence for only a short time operating on a small margin of profit, it is exceedingly gratifying to the friends of the Federal Land Bank that the farmers, who are the borrowers and stockholders, are now participating in the earnings of the institution.

The Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, through the Pocahontas County National Farm Loan Association, has loaned $200,000 to farmers of Pocahontas County. Each borrower has stock in this Association equal to 5 per cent of his loan, and will receive a dividend of 6 per cent on his stock in said Association.

Our hope for the country has been renewed. Last Monday the high school shut down for half day on account of the building being uncomfortably cool. In the market place we were accosted by two big strapping fine fellows, who said they had a half day to loaf, and how they hated it. They are of the best of Pocahontas stock, and the sons of men who could buy us out several times. We suggested that there was a pile of wood at our house that we would like to have split up for a consideration. "Get an axe and lead us to it!" and the deal was closed. Never have we paid out money more cheerfully, and never have we received better value The Country is safe.

The Methodist Church has under consideration the building of a new church. At a meeting of the officers on Tuesday night, it was decided to secure plans and specifications and estimates on a brick structure, the auditorium to have a seating capacity of 425.

MYSTERY OF THE JEWEL HANDLED KNIFE

Mildred Yeager and Geraldine Haupt

(Fifth Installment)

In bewilderment MacDonald tuined to Eloise, "My dear. I am almost ready to give up the search for the producer of the mysterious bird-note and the murderer of your father, but first let us make a thorough survey of the lawn, perhaps we can find a clue out there which can throw some light on the mystery. You call Joseph while I run up to my room. I will be with you in a moment."

MacDonald hurried to his room, picked up his revolver and returned to the library door where he was joined by Eloise and Joseph, the latter appearing to be greatly excited about something. The three then proceeded to the lawn where they searched under and around every shrub and hedge.

When they were about ready to give up in despair MacDonald, who had gone several yards from the others, happened upon a fresh print of a man's shoe in the soft ground at the side of the gravel path under the library window. With a new ray of hope they began their search anew.

Suddenly Eloise cried, "Oh! What is this?"

As MacDonald rushed to her side she pointed to a bright object lying in the forks of a small tree near the library window. Upon examination they found the object to be a small whistle and MacDonald said, "Ah, the source of the bird-note!"

Eloise and Joseph looked frightened when MacDonald took the whistle and after blowing it they were more so, especially Joseph.

"I will go at once and call up the Burns Detective Agency and have them put a detective on the case immediately, exclaimed MacDonald.

In a few minute he was back to the lawn, and the detective, Belvin Maynard was there too.

"What all has happened?" asked Maynard.

MacDonald told in a brief way all that he knew concerning the mystery. All this time Joseph was in a very nervous condition, but very alert to all that was being done and said.

After examining the whistle and making a brief survey of the exterior of the house Maynard said, "May I see the papers you spoke of a while ago?"

"Yes, follow me into the library," answered MacDonald.

DUNMORE ROAD

Approved by State as Project No. 1122

Since none of the bonds in Greenbank District to date have been sold, perhaps some of the voters would be interested to know the cost of the construction of this road and how it has been financed.

State appropriation on 4 1-4 miles, grading and draining	$14,000 00
Greenbauk Class A levy	11,000 00
Total funds available	$25,000 00

Cost of grading and draining 3 1-2 miles and all bills against this road is as follows.

Surveying	$ 402 00
Freight and express bills	193 18
Labor and teams on grading and draining	10,056 36
Cost of drains	500 00
Cost of fuse, caps & dynamite	379 58
Cost of steel, lumber, cement, sand, labor, nails, etc. on 5 concrete culverts	1 345 51
Cost of plows, scrapers, picks, shovels, tools & dynamite	697 05
Use of District truck on this work	300 00
Total expenditures	$13,573 68
State paid Dec. 2nd on work done to Dec. 1st.	$8,975.13
State owes on work done since December 1st	1,872 37

The actual cost the yardage so far excavated has been 60 cents per cubic yard. State paid its pro rata share of 50 per cent at the rate of $1.10 per cubic yard, this being the estimated cost by the state.

Due to weather conditions construction on this road has been suspended until next spring.

It may be noted in the above expenditures scrapers, plows, picks, shovels, tools and lumber that are charged against this road are in good condition and is an asset to the district in future road construction as more than enough dynamite to finish this road.

The Country Doctor

In Memory of Dr. J. B. Lockridge

There's a gathering at the village that has never been outdone,
Since the soldiers took their muskets to the war of 'sixty-one;
And a lot of lumber-wagons near the church upon the hill,
And a crowd of country people, Sunday-dressed and very still

Now each window is pre-empted by a dozen heads or more,
Now the spacious pews are crowded from the pulpit to the door;
For the coverlet of blackness on his portly figure spread,
Lies the grim old country doctor, in a massive oaken bed.
Lies the fierce old country doctor,
Lies the kind old country doctor,
Whom the populace considered with a mingled love and dread.

When so many pined in sickness, he had stood so strongly by,
Half the people felt a notion that the doctor couldn't die;
They must slowly learn the lesson how to live from day to day,
And have somehow lost their bearings—now this landmark is away

Maybe half the congregation, now of great or little worth,
Found this watcher waiting for them, when they came upon the earth;
This undecorated soldier, of a hard, unequal strife,
Fought in many stubborn battles with the foe that sought their life.

In the night-time or the daytime, he would rally brave and well,
Though the summer lark was fifing, or the frozen lances fell;
Knowing if they won the battle, they would praise their Make'rs name.
'Twas the brave old virtuous doctor,
'Twas the good old faulty doctor,
'Twas the faithful country doctor—fighting stoutly all the same.

But perhaps it still is better that his busy life is done,
He has seen old views and patients disapearing, one by one;
He has learned that Death is master both of Science and of Art;
He has done his duty fairly, and has acted out his part,
And the strong old country doctor,
And the weak old country doctor,
Is entitled to a futlough for his brain and for his heart.

EDUCATIONAL JOTTINGS

BY COUNTY SUPT. G. D. MCNEIL

"School Week" resulted in the holding of fifteen meetings in the county. Most of these meetings were attended by a number of representative citizens, and there appeared to be sentiment everywhere that something must be done immediately by way of improving our schools.

Legislators are supposed to represent their constituents. If these constituents do not let their will be known, then the representative in Congress or Legislature may not vote as the people desire him to vote. At the meetings held in this County, it seemed to be agreed that the Smith Towner Bill should be passed by Congress, that a production tax should be placed upon coal, oil and gas in West Virginia; that we should have a distributable school fund, and that the salary of capable teachers should be increased and the incompetent teacher eliminated. It will be worth while if the citizens of the different neighborhoods will advise their congressmen, State Senators and Delegate as to their desires in these matters. A few personal letters will serve as additional reminder that the citizens of West Virginia are not satisfied with a 37 per cent school system.

Two members of the Sophomore class of the Marlinton high school arived Wednesday and at chapel period debated with two members of Greenbrier high school Sophomore class on the question: "Resolved that the welfare of the United States demands that immigration be prohibited for an indefinite period." Edith Holesapple and Lawrence Kennison of Marlinton were on the affirmative and Izetta Hanson and Clinton McCrary of Ronceverte were on the negative side. Each of the speakers showed that much preparation had had been given to the subject and good points were given on both sides. The meeting was a sucress and we hope durin the year to meet debaters from Marlinton and other high Among the visitors at the school for the debate were; Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Jackson, Rev. W. C. Sponaugle, Mrs. Geo. E. Fuller, and Miss Mary Gilhooley with the eighth grade from the graded school,—West Virginia News.

MRS. EVALINE JOHNSON, DEAD

Mrs. Evaline Johnson dier at her home near Marlinton on Tuesday morning, December 21, 1920, aged 88 years.

A year or more ago she suffered a stroke of paralysis, and she had been in declining health ever since, though being able to be about some. On last Wednesday she was paralized again.

Mrs. Johnson was one of the oldest and best known residents of Pocahontas County. She was the oldest child of the late Squire John Waugh of Indian Draft, and his wife, Martha Moore Waugh. Of her father's family, but two remain, Mrs Anna Potts of Elkins, and John Waugh, of Marlinton.

Mrs. Johnson was thrice married. Her first husband, Washington McNeil, died during the Civil War leaving a number of small and helpless children to be cared for by the mother. The children who survive their mother are Mrs. Clarissa Duncan of Buckeye, Mrs. Thomas Houchin of Hosterman, and Mrs. Salie Oden, of Hamilton, Ohio; J. B. McNeil, near Marlinton. Another son, Rev. J. W. McNeil preceded his mother to the grave about a month ago. Her grandchildren and great grand children are numbered by the score.

Her second husband was the late John Moore, of Marlinton, and her third marriage was to the late Ewing Johnson, who died about a year ago.

Mrs. Johnson was buried at Mt. View cemetery on Wednesday afternoon, the services being conducted from her home.

For many years Mrs. Johnson had been a professing christian, a consistent member of the Methodist church. She lived a useful, helpful life, and was every ready and willing to help in times of trouble and distress. Before laid aside by the infirmities of age, she was a regular and welcome visitor at the homes of her many friends.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Manerva Friel, a life long resident of the Jacox, neighborhood. passed out of this earthly life into life eternal at the Hospital for insane at Weston, W. Va. on Nov. 8th, 1920, in her 65th yea. Her body was sent back to be interred in the family graveyard with so many friends. Interment took place on November 12th after funeral services by her pastor, Rev. W. H. Henderson at Hills Chapel church.

Mrs. Friel leaves one daughter, Mrs. Virgie Hall and a wide circle of relatives and friends to mourn her going but they are comforted by the knowledge that she was a quiet, humble christian woman and believe that she is afar better off delivered from the ailments of mortal flesh and the many trials of this earthly life.

Her husband, Israel Friel, preceded her in death near eight years, but when ties are broken here they are so ofter renewed "Over There" and we feel comforted by knowing that we may find this friend in a land where the inhabitants never say they are sick or troubled. S. V. M.

Mrs. L. O. Simmons of Marlinton, W. Va., has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Tomblin, of ChaffinStreet. The Richmond deaf were delighted with her visit and hope that she will return soon. During her stay in Richmond Mrs. Simmons was hostess at a delightful party given on November 26th at the home of her sister, Mrs. Tomblin. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Rosenbloom, Mr. and Mrs. Hatcher, Mr. and Mrs. Philips, Mrs. Tucker, Miss Dosha Wickline, Miss Roberta Newman, Mr. Frank Creasy, Mr. Gail Wilson, Mr. Carlisle Scott. —The Virginia Guide.

SLATYFORK

Mrs. Rella Yeager is gettiug along nicely with her school. This is a very large school owing to the fact that there has been several families moved into this neighborhood this fall.

The pie supper Saturday night for the suffering in the far east was largely attended and over $140.00 was taken in. L. D. Sharp and others gave talks on the benefit of our education.

The Sunday School will give an entainment and have a Christmas tree at the school house on Xmas eve.

We think if the officers would visit over in this part they would sure catch some moonshiners, as you can so oft times see men under the influence of whiskey or some other intoxicating drinks. There is no doubt but what it is manufactured not far away, and there will be plenty of it we fear during holidays, and the officers should see that this curse is blotted out of our country, and the citizens should no longer be quiet but should rise up in arms and say that this work must stop.

S. D. Hannah is very ill at this writing and Dr. Cox thinks perhaps he may have to be taken to the hospital to be operated on.

There has been a lot of sheep stolen from this section and driven off and we see from an advertisement that there was some cattle stolen from Dr. Hannah on the head of Clover Creek. Now no doubt but what some one is just making a business of driving off stock, and we believe they are driven off at night as some sheep have been lost out along the trail towards Cloverlick that belongs to L. D. Sharp.

The measles have about died down in this section—only a few cases that we know of at this time.

There is lots of work going on near this town. There are several lumber camps and men are being paid big wages. Some contractors are making from $10 to $15 per day, so we understand.

We think the foreign element should not be allowed to be dumped into our country by the millions and we should have a protective tariff, Wool being shipped in here without a tariff will ruin the sheep industry. Some foreign conntries have offered a a buyer in this state one million lbs. of wool at 15c per pound on seaboard, and is said to be as good quality of wool as ours.

I say to the farmers, hold your wool Don't take no such prices as prices will not always stay down so low that you cant afford to shear your sheep.

DURBIN

A. G. Hardbarger is moving back to our town.

W. W. Marshall and Ed Simmons are building a garage.

M. C. Kavanaugh butchered two hogs that weighed 1040 pounds.

J. B. Nottingham was in town last week consulting a physician.

Robert Eads and Vida McLaughlin are expected home this week from Alderson school.

Mrs. C. P. Kerr was visiting Mrs. Allen Ash at Burner last week.

Some of our young ladies are contemplating going to Elkins Xmas.

John Flenner is loading dye wood.

R. L. Shifflett and Albert Ash of Burner, were here on business.

S. T. Ruckman is here from Crabbottom.

Dr. C. B. Collins is able to be at his office again.

SPICE RUN

The health of the community, in general, has been very good the past week.

Fob Johnston of this place was in Marlinton on business Saturday.

Monk Small, the trapper and fur trader reports that the fur business like all other business is dull.

The mill continues to run a day now and then. We hope that it will soon start to run regularly.

Chas. A. Briggs and J. H. Phelan are spending the week-end in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Charlie Callison and Lee Loudermilk have recently completed the additional to Mr. Smalls house.

Henry Brosius, who is a student in the Hillsboro High School, is home for the holidays. Mr. Brosius is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Brosius, formerly of Brookville, Pa.

At a congregational meeting of the Presbyterian Church on Tuesday night, a call was given to Rev. W. C. Robinson, of Princeton Seminary. This young minister has the highest recommendations, and it is hoped he can see his way clear to accept the pastorate of this church. He also has under consideration a call to a large church at Getteysburg, Penna.

A meeting of the members of the Pocahontas Farm Bureau is called to meet at Marlinton next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to make arrangements to secure the services of a County Agent.

Numerous complaints are being made to the office of the Prosecuting Attorney about the use of ferrets in hunting rabbits. It is a violation of the law, the gtme law devoting a special section to the subject.

COUNTY COURT

County Court was in special session on Tuesday with Dr. U. H. Hannah and W. H. Barlow present.

An order was entered fixing a special term of the court on the first Tuesday of each month at 10 a. m.

Officers qualified as follows:

Justices—A. E. Smith, C. J. McCarty, John Perry, C. P. Kerr and J. B. Sutton.

County Court—E. H. Williams,

Sheriff—B. B. Beard, bond, $40,000.00. Deputies, C. C. Clendenen, T. A. Bruffey and Elmer Moore.

Assessor—G. A. C. Auldridge, bond $6,000. Deputy, G. M. Sharp.

County Surveyor—Ira H. Irvine, bond $1,000.

Circuit Clerk—D. C. Adkison.

E. L. Fenton qualified as notary public.

J. H. Lindsey was over from Linwood on Tuesday. He had a timber cutting contract with the West Virginia Spruce Lumber Company the past year, and laid up something for a rainy day. On his way over he came across Thorny Flat to Stony Bottom, and had to break the way through the deep snow, being the first man across since the storm.

W. W. Galford was down from Dunmore on Tuesday. He has lost a number of cattle the last season in the Alleghany range. This is a common complaint among stockmen this year. He got trace of one three year old, however, finding a hide which filled the description of his steer, but the brand bad been cut off. He feels so kindly towards the man who skinned his steer that he will give him the hide if he will call, being willing to let the hide go with the rest.

The railroad has about completed a big turntable near the light plant.

J. L. Baxter, the Ford dealer, unloaded a lot of Ford cars last Saturday.

The Methodist Sunday School will have a Chrismas entertainment on next Wednesday night.

The Christmas service at the Presbyterian Church will be a vesper service by the Suneay School and Christian Endeavor at 4:30 Sunday afternoon.

THE RURAL TEACHER

Editor Times:

There seems to be at the present time a general unrest among the teachers. I think if I may be allowed the privilege, I shall endeavor to give a few points on the situation.

First. It takes time, money and training for the teacher just the same as for the doctor. Your child is physically unbalanced and you send for your physician. He diagnosis the case, gives you the remedy and leaves you to care for the child, and charges you from $3.00 to $10.00 for maybe fifteen minutes of his time. This leaves him time to make at least twelve more visits to others in the same length of time that the public calls the teacher's day, not counting the time that either are on the road. This day therefore averages the Doctor from $36.09 to $120 per day.

Your child is mentally unbalanced, you, sometimes, give it the necessary books and send it to the teacher. Now she cannot assign it the lesson and send it back home to get this lesson and leave it to you to see that it does, but she must keep it right with her and have it get the lesson herself. It is left to the teacher to take that child, usually multiplied by from 30 to 50, and rear it as it were her own child. She has to know every child's temperment, his desires, his failings or short comings. She must deal with all their faults. She is legislative, Executive, and Judicial in her powers. For this service the teacher must be satisfied with from $3.50 to $5.00 per day. If the teacher's day was only from 9 a. m. till 4 p. m. as is often considered, it might be different but very often she must sit up till eleven oclock at night preparing the next days program, very often having probably declined an invitation in order be alone to study and ponder over Johnny's case and solve the question asto what to do in some other case. Probably the next eve when she goes to her boarding place she finds one of her patrons there ready to give her instructions as to where she must let Johnny sit, even though he is hard of hearing and has defective eyesight, and has been sitting near the front.

I had the pleasure recently to hear two well informed men talking on this subject. One said, "I think these high salraied teachers should get a little more of the teacher spirit and be satisfied with their present wages and find a little payment in the joy of their work, and be willing to follow after the Master Teacher." This sounds all right but patrons, "teacher spirit" wont buy bread; it wont pay train and car fare to the meetings, granges, reading circles, round tables and institutes that teachers are supposed to attend. It wont buy shoes at from $9.00 to $15 per pair.

2nd. Very often as is the case with the rural teacher, she is hired by a board of education or trustees to teach a school that she is a complete stranger to. Often when she goes to this new place she can hardly find a place to board. When she does find a place where they "hum-haw" and say "If you can't get board anywhere else we'll try to take you" she "feels elected" and, of course, on Sunday eve goes to this place to find a room containing a bed, one chair, usually discarded from the dining room or family sitting room, a little mirror about 18X20 inches, and no stove. If she says anything about a stove she is told that on account of there being no stove pipe hole in there it would be impossible to have a stove. Maybe after being installed in her new home for a month or so, she is quietly informed that she will have to room with one of the children or with "the girls" since Grandmother or aunt Jane So-and-so is coming to spend the remainder of the winter. Of course before this time the teacher has signed a contract for from six to nine months. She must either labor under these conditions or be a "slacker" or more nearly a "deserter" In the face of all these conditions the teacher is expected to be the wisest, richest, most stylishly dressed person in the community. She is expected to be at the head of every organization for community welfare work and, of course, is expected to contribute unstintedly to every charitable institution known.

Is there any wender that we quit the profession and look for work elsewhere.

A Rural Teacher.

MY CAREER AS A SOLDIER

A Dream Story

Written by W. A. M., a Greenbank High School Student.

Some people said I was too dumb to join the army, some said I would do more harm than good, but I just laughed at their foolish ideas and gathering up my old shotgun I started off to Marlinton to enlist.

At Marlinton the Doctors pronounced me physically fit for service, with the exception of a weak spot on my brain. However they said I might make a good cook, so I was loaded onto a train and shipped to Camp Lee.

Arriving at Camp Lee, I walked up to an Officer and told him I wanted to get to France as soon as possible, so I could get a crack at one of those Germans. The Officer punched me in the ribs with his pistol and told me to get back with my crowd or he'd give me a pass to the Guard House. I would like to have found out more about the Guard House, but I deemed it unwise to ask any more questions then.

Things went along smoothly for a few days, and then I remembered having left my gun at Marlinton. I informed the Captain of my Company that I was going after my gun, but he only laughed at me and told me I wouldn't need it, for he allowed I wouldn't take time to use it if the Germans were to get after me. This made me rather sore, so I politely told him what I thought of him. Two hours later I was in the Guard House on a three week vacation. After getting out of the Guard-house I had fully made up my mind to spend my vacations elsewhere.

One day our Lieutenant took us out for a drill. This was my first experience in that line, so when the "Lewie" called, "Stand at attention!" I turned around and saluted him, saying, "Stand at, where did you say?" Well, that dumb Lewie had me on the woodpile for a week.

After my previous visit to the woodpile I was a little more careful as to my manner of acting. At the end of three months I had received all the training necessary, and was taken to Newport News to await the sailing of my ship. When we were settled down on the ship my squad was given charge of the gun which was used as a protection against submarines. On the fifth day after we sailed from port I noticed a small island off to the left from which a stream of water was flying high into the air. I turned to one of my comrades and said, "See that geyser out there Bill?"

"That's no geyser, you fool," he said, "That's a whale spouting water". A couple days later I was on guard watching for submarines, when I suddenly beheld a long object sticking out of the water, and then as it arose a little higher I saw it's back. Just then a large object came hurling through the water and struck the ship with a loud explosion. I rushed to the Captain of the ship and cried out, "Say, Cap., a blooming whale is throwing stones at the ship" A few minutes later it was reported that a torpedo had struck the ship a glancing blow, but did no harm. I wondered where the torpedo came from, for I was sure their was nothing but an innocent whale within five miles of us. The Captain ordered me below to shovel coal as punishment for my carlessness. I was filled with terror over the prospects of going below to shovel coal, for I had visions of people wailing and gnashing their teeth. When I was allowed to go back on deck three days later, I had discovered that it was not the place the preacher tells about when he tries to convert some wicked soul.

After landing in France we were immediately taken to a camp one hundred and sixty miles back of the battle lines. The next day I was put on guard, and pretty soon a rough looking man came along. I commanded him to halt but he only said, "Parley voo franzy?" I immediately marched the man off to headquarters and turned him over to an Officer as a German, and I was threatened with the Guard-house for bringing in a peaceful Frenchman as a German spy. Nothing was done to me, however, so I decided the life of a soldier wasn't so bad after all.

"Look here" my Captain said one day, "I want you to go over there and guard that Street. If any one comes along hallow halt!, three times distinctly, and if they dont stop, bring them to me." I consented and took my stand beside the street. Presently an Officer came along and I yelled, "Halt three times distinctly!" The man only looked my way and kept on going. I rushed after him and told him to come with me. He asked me what I wanted, and when I told him my intentions he shoved a pistol up to my ear and said, "Now, you wop, come with me to the guard-house." And I did.

One cloudy night while I was on guard, I heard the distant boom of cannon, or what I thought was cannon. I rushed to my Captain and told him to prepare for a retreat, for I heard the Germans coming. The Captain mumbled a few cuss-words and went to the door.

"That's thunder!" he angrily cried "I'll settle with you to-morrow!"

I spent my first night in the trenches, thinking every sound I heard was the approach of the enemy. Early the next morning my company was ordered to take a Machine-gun nest, which was located in a small ravine. We were within a couple hundred yards of the German trenches, crawling on our hands and knees, when the Germans suddenly started firing at us. Instantly every one of my comrades dropped flat on his stomach to wait till the firing would cease. Thinking all my men had been killed, I looked fearfully about me a moment and then started for the rear.

"Come back here, you coward!" someone shouted.

Thinking it was only the ghost of a dead comrade calling I replied as I ran, "Just as soon as this dreadful war is over I will."

After my previous escape from the Germans I went to another sector, and I was determined to act with more bravery the next time. My chance came when one dark night several other men and I were detailed to bury some dead soldiers out on No Man's Land. I had dragged about a dozen dead men to an old excavated trench, and there yet remained one to be brought in. I stole up to the corpse, yanked it by the leg, and commenced dragging it to it's grave. "What the name of common sense are ye doing," the corpse yelled as it gave me a vicious kick.

"Lawd save me," I gasped as I struck out for the rear at a fearful rate of speed. Never before had a man made such speed with his legs as I did then. Nothing could stop me; I flew over the ground as one with wings, never turning out of my course for obstructions, clearing trenches at a single bound, leaping over shell holes, smashing thru barbed wire entanglements, and never stopping till I was back at my first station, one-hundred and sixty miles back of the battle lines.

The next morning I told my story to an Officer, and he informed me that I had only yanked a sleeping soldier by the leg, but he said I had deserted my comrades, and I would have to die at sunrise the next morning. I begged the Officer to spare the life of one who had been such a faithful soldier, but he heeded not my plea.

As the sun peeped up over the hills of Sunny France a few hours later I stood blindfolded against a brick wall, while twelve guns were leveled at my heart. There came a deafening roar and then—"Get up sleepy-head," my mother yelled, as she stamped her foot upon the floor a second time. "Your breakfast will be cold if you don't hurry."

THEY LET THE CAT OUT OF THE BAG

"Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds," is the legend carved across the front of the Central Postoffice of New York. The postoffice employees are debating the wisdom of recalling the stonecutter and instructing him to insert "nor cats."

A cat was discovered at the Cunard piers where the eight-day Manchester steamers dock. Hank Brocco, a longshoreman, made the discovery. Hank did not know it was a cat. Neither did anyone else. For when Hank saw a mailbag [one of a thousand] move and then wriggle and then kick, he hollered; "Fire! Murder! Police! Throw it in the water! Throw it in the water!"

F. Hendrickson, manager of the Hendrickson Express Company, which hauls mails from the docks, kept cool.

"No, we won't throw it in the water," he said. "Maybe it is a bomb. Maybe it is a baby tied up in there. Maybe we are all drunk. All I know is, that's a bag of bonded mail. It's sealed, and nobody has a right to open it except he is a postoffice employe Get the truck, boys, and we'll rush this to the office!"

Rush it they did. At the postoffice white-lipped girls took refuge behind wire gratings and clapped trembling fingers over their ears while the chief mail clerk broke the official seals.

Interest lagged as soon as the cat was out of the bag. A cat is by no means a novelty in the postoffice. There are at least fifty of them there—and always have been. In the old days when the central office was down town $5 a month was supplied by the Government for their sustenance.

This one looked hungry. It was a gray maltese, scarcely out of the kitten stage.

"Give it milk, boys," instructed the Superintendent of Mails.—New York World.

TURKEYS

Wanted For

Christmas and New Year

The time has come to dispose of your poultry on those two great markets. Your efforts of daily toil and expense are to be turned into money.

The FARMER or MERCHANT who has a shipment, the larger the better is very fortunate, for turkeys and all kinds of poultry are certainly commodities that have not declined in price. Thanksgiving prices which are always a criterion for the Christmas and New Ysar markets were the highest ever known. Our Shippers were highly please with their prompt returns, which 5hey made sure of realizing by using Frank Hellerick & Co. on their consignments.

Hellerick & Co. were certainly Philadelphia HEADQUARTERS for the Thanksgiving trade as we will most assuredly be for the Christmas and New Year markets.

We are located "in the heart" of a market for over 2,000,000 people. Do not be afraid of over-stocking us, our outlet is unlimited and our demauds are simply greater than we cau supply. In this great market Frank Hellerick & Co. stands ont "like the Light House on the share," efficiently equipped and ready for your shipment. We are bouud to have a wonderful market, and rest assured prices obtained by us will meet your highest expectations.

Ship dressed turkeys exclusively for the Christmas, arriving 20th to 23rd, ship all kinds of dressed poultry for New Year, arriving 27th to 30th. The latter is always an excellent market so do not hesitate to ship to it.

Ship to Philadelphia and to the Leading Poultry House.

The Law Of Progress

is as unchangeable as the famous laws of the Medes and the Persians.

The individual who spends more than he earns—or, as if far too often the case, spends all before he earns—travels in a hopeless circle. He cannot advance, and "he who does not advance, recedes."

The person who saves BEFORE he spends inevitably registers progress. Why not put the principle to the test?

J A. McLaughlin,
County Chairman.

Captain and Mrs. J. H. McClintic, of Charleston, were home for Christmas.

Paris D. Yeager and family spent Christmas with home folks in Marlinton.

S. T. Coyner, of Waynesboro, was called here last week by the death of S. S. Varner.

Charles Kincaid, of Hot Springs, was here last week to attend the funeral of S. S. Varner.

Mrs. E. C. Moore is again at home after five weeks at the Marlinton Hospital with apendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Yeager and little son, of Harmony Grove, Maryland, are home for the holidays.

Mrs. J. C. Beeler is convalescing at the home of her father, J. W. Grimes from a long spell of typhoid fever.

J. A. McLaughlin is at Stuarts Draft to be present at the wedding of his sister, Miss Edith McLaughlin and Homer Stephenson.

Mrs. Letcher Herold. near Frost, suffered a relapse of typhoid. She has been sick for ten weeks. Two of her children have also been sick.

C. W. Harouff has moved to Alex McNeel's farm. He tried the public works at Richwood and Cowen, but decided the farm was best after all.

Clarence Smith and his sisters, Misses Marie and Polly, and Hull Yeager went to the home of Zed Smith, Jr., on Jacksons River, Tuesday, to spend a few days.

Wm. McConaha, of Spruce, was a business visitor in Marlinton on Mon day. He is advertising for a dining room girl a dishwasher and a kitchen girl for his boarding house.

Lawrence Nottingham, who has been in the Marlinton Hospital the past month or more, being treated for an accidental gun shot wound in the arm, expects to go home this week. He has made a good recovery.

J. H. Buzzard, former sheriff and for several terms assessor of Pocahontas County, is still pretty closely confined to the house with an ulcer of the foot that has so far resisted treatment, including a course of radium administered in Baltimore.

F. R. Hill, who has been kept in for about two weeks with a severe infection of the arm, resulting from a small wound on the finger. is better. The whole arm was affected, and threatened a general blood poisoning.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Hively, Minnehaha Springs, December 21, a son, LeRoy Hively, Jr.

The Presbyterian Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society held a vesper Christmas service Sunday afternoon. An offering of $75 was made to the Davis Stuart Children's Home at Lewisburg.

The Woman's Club invited their men folks to the Christmas meeting of the Club, which was held at the home is Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Hench on Monday night. The gathering was composed of young people who enjoyed the evening greatly.

FRANK DILLEY, DEAD

Frank Dilley died at the home of C. F. Gay, in Marlinton, Thursday night, December 23, 1920, after a long illness. Had he lived until June, he would have been 72 years old. Burial on Sunday at the Sharp graveyard near Green Hill on Stony Creek, after services conducted at the home by Rev. J. H. Light. D. D.

Mr. Dilley was a good citizen and a member of the Methodist church. He was a most industrious man. A few years ago he suffered the loss of a leg by a horse falling on him.

Frank Dilley was a son of the late Josiah Dilley and his wife Sarah Friel Dilley. He was twice married, his first wife being Mary E. Sharp, and to them were born seven children; Mrs. C. F. Gay, Mrs. Dew Waugh and Mrs. Gertrude Etzler, Wallace and Sterling survive. and Jacob Dilley and Mrs. Henry Galford are dead. His last wife was Mrs. Rebecca Jordan who survives her husband.

J. A. McLaughlin, County Chairman, has set January 21, as drive day in the schools and communities and Sunday, January 23, as offering day in the churches and Sunday Schools for the relief of the three and a half million European Children who will starve if America does not come to their relief. The national chairman is Herbert Hoover, who is attempting through the organization to do for for these famine suffers what he did for the Children of Belgium during the war. The fraternal organizations of the county are also being appealed to. Mr. McLaughlin hopes to have a full and successful report by January 31st, and will publish it.

We understand that the farmers of the Linwood neighborhood have offered rewards approximating $100 for the killing of the big sheep eating bear which has been raiding the flocks of the Elk and Cheat country the past few years.

Fox hunters at Edray found the fresh track of a yearling bear on Elk Mountain last Friday. He was traveling west and passed through Mrs. Maggie Sharp's land. Hounds were shown the track, but not being bear dogs, they were not much interested.

Charley Young, of Buckeye, lost his fine Kentucky riding horse last Saturday. He fell on the ice with his rider and broke a front leg. Mr. Young got a bad fall but was not much hurt.

Mr. Malcom was a native of Highland county, but has lived at Greenbank a good many years, being engaged in the mercantile and undertaking business. His wife was a Miss Gragg, who with their two children, survive him.

Mr. Malcom was a member of the Methodist church and an active church worker. He took great interest in Sundav Schools and had served as president of his district association.

LINWOOD

We had a fine Christmas tree last Friday and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves.

Misses Eula and Beulah Galford were guests at the home of Thomas Smith on Christmas Day.

The Linwood Sunday school closed on December 26 on account of bad weather.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Richards of Cass, were visiting Mrs. Richard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Smith, during the holidays.

Mrs. Emma Brady and Henry Lindsey were visiting their sister, Mrs. Mattie Smith.

We fear our flourishing times have passed by.

Cook Books for Sale

The Presbyterian Ladies Aid Society announces that their Cook Books are now for sale. The price is $2.00 and the book may be secured by addressing, Mrs. Geo. W. Sharp, President of the Society at Marlinton. This is the second edition of the book and it has been revised and brought up to date. The speedy sale of the first edition and the numerous inquiries for more of the books is the best recommendation.

AMUSU THEATRE

Saturday, January 1st.

BETWEEN a cruel and powerful Sheik of Arabia and a daring American captain of the famous Black Horse Troop, a deadly feud arose for possession of Sari, the lovely, unveiled Virgin, beggar girl of the Stamboul streets. One she hated and dreaded—the other she almost loved. Then, one fateful day she entered, unseen, a Turkish mosque, forbidden to women under penalty os death. There she saw a sight that froze the blood in her veins—that changed her in a moment from a care-free girl to a woman. What was the dreadful act Sari saw in the sacred mosque; who committed it, and why? What became of the Sheik and the American as a consequence of what she saw? Those are tremendous moments in "The Virgin of Stambaul". Don't miss them.

VOL. XXXVIIII NO 17 | MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, JANUARY 6, 1921 | $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

DR. J. BEDFORD LOCKRIDGE

The following was written by Rev. Elmer C. Sloan, probably on the very day of his own death.

The hearts of all the former pastors who have served Huntersville charge within the last forty years will be made sad as mine was on learning of the death of Dr. J. Bedford Lockridge. He passed away suddenly in Ronceverte, W. Va., Wednesday morning, December 8th. He was on his way home from Fishersville, Va., where he had been to minister to a grand-daughter, who was seriously ill.

Dr. Lockridge had practiced medicine here for thirty years. He was a staunch Episcopalian, but what was more, he was a Christian gentleman. In our two years ministry here we have never heard him spoken of except in the highest and most affectionate terms. No pastor ever held the place in the hearts of his people that Dr. Lockridge had won for himself in the hearts of this people by his ministry of love to their bodies. Up and down the valley and over the rugged mountains this man of God went. No trip was too long, no day too stormy and no patient too poor for him to go to, and everywhere he carried a ray of sunshine. We shall never forget how tenderly he ministered to the darling of our home when her precious life was hanging in the balance. No man will be more missed in this county than he, for no man is so loved as he.

"He needs no wreath nor marble's sheen
To keep his blessed memory green.
But in our hearts that love 'twill hide
Till life's last eventide."

Of him the poet said truly,

"He lived in a house by the side of the road
Where the race of men went by and was a friend to man."
He walks the fields Elysian,
We shall meet him after a while.

ELMER C. SLOANE.

Minnehaha Springs, W. Va.

New 1921 government saving securities may be had from post offices and through banks. In all, five savings opportunities are offered. For instance, there are the $1 Treasury Savings Stamps and the $25 Treasury Savings Certificates. These are in addition to the regular savings securities which have been offered by the United States Treasury Department for several years. The 25 cent Thrift Stamp and the $5 War Saving Shamp and the $100 and $1000 Treasury Savings Certificates will be issued as before.

The $1 Treasury Savings Stamp and the 25 cent Thrift Stamp are not interest bearing. They are issued to help people save money in small amounts, and when enough of these stamps have been bought, they may be exchanged, in proper ratio, for $5 War Savings Stamps which bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent compounded quarterly if held until maturity.

During January of the new year the $5 stamp may be had for $4 12. It will increase in value 1 cent each month. The January price of the $25 Treasury Savings Certificates will be $20.60, the price increasing at the fixed rate of 5 cents a month. The $100 Treasury Savings Certificates may be bought during January for $82 40. Its monthly increase in value will be 20 cents.

It is the hope of the United States Treasury, the announcement from Washington says, that the 1921 savings securities will be bought by even more investors than took advantage of recent and current offerings. The $1 issue will be especially for school children, and it is hoped that it will be bought in large quantities by members of school savings societies, of which many thousands have been organized in this district.

This week William Gibson retires from the Sheriff's office and B. B. Beard goes in. Mr. Gibson has made the enviable record of never having lost a prisoner, nor had a jail delivery, never lost on a tax ticket nor was faked by a bad check, and of a consequence was probably the most unpopular sheriff that ever served Pocahontas County. But business is business, and they never made a goat of this sheriff.

BANK OF MARLINTON MEETING

The Bank of Marlinton held its annual meeting Monday, January 3rd. The Bank has had a profitable year making a net earning of twelve per cent and a fraction on its capitol stock of a hundred thousand dollars. A dividend of eight per cent was ordered paid to the stockholders.

The following board of directors and officers were elected: M. J. McNeel, President; M. L. Beard and F. R. Hunter, Vice Presidents; Hubert Echols, Cashier; T. S. McNeel, Secretary; Andrew Price, C. J. Richardson, J. H. Buzzard, R. S. Hickman, A. N. Barlow, H. M. Moore, Dr. U. H. Hannah, J. L. McNeel, Dr. H. W. McNeel, R. A. Hivick, S. P. Curry, Russel Hannah, Sherman Gibson, E. M. Arbogast, H. W. Beard, and J. W. Kennison, directors.

The bank has been conducted on a six per cent basis for a discount rate. During the year the bank passed the million dollar mark in resources.

LEWISBURG SEMINARY BURNS

Monday morning before daylight the main building of the Lewisburg Seminary was discovered to be on fire and resulted in the total destruction of the building. The building was a large three story brick with a basement. It was about a hundred feet square and very well built and furnished. In it were cooking departments, the dining room, the principal's office, and the sleeping rooms and parlors.

The building was erected after the destruction of a building on the same site in 1904. It was worth something over a hundred thousand dollars.

The fire was discovered when it broke forth from the top of the building. The cause is not known but an electric wire is suspected. There were very few persons in the building at the time, as most of the boarders and faculty were absent on the Christmas holidays and were expected on the morning trains the day of the fire.

There were probably not over a dozen persons in the building at the time. A girl student leaped from one of the rooms and sustained an injury, her wrist being broken and otherwise bruised.

The school is the property of the Greenbrier Presbytery which is a very old and famous institution. It was established in 1812, and is one hundred and eight years old. A great many of the women of West Virginia look back to the days of their schooling in this admirable school in the historical town of Lewisburg.

Some insurance was carried but we have not learned how much.

The school is now going on in Carnegie Hall, the young ladies being lodged in the homes of the town.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas in His instrutable wisdom it has pleased an all wise providence to remove from our Sunday School our co-worker and honored member, Dr. J. B. Lockridge, be it resolved by the members of the Union Sunday School of Minnehaha Springs, W. Va.

That we bow in humble submission to that dispensation of Providence which doeth all things well.

That in his death our Sunday School has lost a loyal scholar and the community a faithful physician.

That we tender our sincere sympathy to the bereaved wife and children, feeling assured that our loss is his eternal gain.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to the county papers, and a copy record in the secretary's book.

"His trials and his griefs are past,
A blessed end his at last:
He bore Christ's yoke and did his will
And though he died he liveth still.

"Then let us leave him to his rest,
And homeward turn, for he is blest
And we must well our souls prepare,
When death shall come, to meet him there."

Mrs. Cam McElwee,
Mrs. Preston Rexrode,
Mrs. Elmer Moore.

Among the Marlinton Masons attending the annual Masonic banquet at Cass Saturday night were C. C. Clendenen, H. L. Byers, C. E. Denison, S. N. Hench and J. A. Sydenstricker.

The Time For Thrift

Yesterday has gone never to return. To-morrow is not yet born.

Today--not tomorrow--is the time to start to practice Thrift, to spend less and make more, to save steadily and systematically.

Today--not tomorrow--is the time to open a Savings Account in this Institution.

With the wages of today lay the foundation of a successful tomorrow.

MYSTERY OF THE JEWEL HANDLED KNIFE

Seventh Installment
By Delphia Snedegar.

As Maynard and MacDonald stepped into the darkness not a thing could be seen or heard. Maynard still had that dreadful feeling and it became worse after they were out in the darkness.

Maynard braced up and said, "This has gone far enough, we must find out something tonight."

Just then they heard a loud slam in the house. MacDonald grabbed Lawrence by the arm and then ran toward the house. They thought they could go back through the secret door they had come out through, but this was impossible. The door could not be found any where. They ran around the house and entered the front door. Here they found Eloise in a nervous condition. She handed MacDonald a large double paper she had found on the floor and asked him what it was that had made such a loud noise.

Lawrence saw at once that it was some more of the Hindoo's writing. He looked quickly at MacDonald and shook his head as he didn't want Eloise to be frightened any more than she was.

Lawrence exclaimed. "Oh! we were just investigating, so don't be alarmed."

Lawrence realized that something must be done at once so he and MacDonald stepped into an adjoining room. Just then they heard a faint sound and then a rattle out in the yard. MacDonald said, "We must be very quiet and find out what this noise is." "Go," whispered Lawrence. So they started out in the darkness. "I will go around and hunt for the secret door and you go into the room and try to open it from the inside. We must catch the person that brought this paper here," demanded Lawrence impatiently.

Lawrence loaded his revolver and slipped out. He was soon around where the secret door was supposed to be. He held his revolver in one hand and began to hunt for the door with the other.

He mummered to himself, "We will get the old fox sure tonight."

He stopped and listened as he had not heaad a sound from MacDonald. As he could not hear a sound he called faintly, "are you looking for the door?" Just then he heard the loud slam of a door, and then another door. Lawrence ran around to the front door. Just as he started into the door the lights went out.

FEAST AT DALE ENTERPRISE

On Saturday morning, Dec. 18th, in obedience to the call, "Behold, I have prepared my dinner and all things are now ready;" the following persons met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Heatwole near Mt. Clinton to celebrate the Sixty-Sixth anniversary of D. F. Heatwole's birth; Benj. F. Beery and wife, Gessner Messick and wife, Perry G. Lineweaver and wife, Aldine J. Heatwole and wife, Simon Brunk and wife and daughter, Marie L. J. Heatwole, Benj B. Shifflet, Mrs. Charles R. Harman, Mrs. Elizabeth Gowl and daughter Millie, Mrs. Mary Gowl and daughter, Tiresse, all of west Rockingham; Elmer and Leonard Heatwole of Cutbank, Montana; Alvin Heatwole and little daughter, Beverly, of Palmyra, Pa., also D. R. Heatwole and wife at home.

Of the elderly persons who sat down to the feast that had been prepared for the occasion, it was observed that in point of age, the range was from fifty-six to seventy-six, with D. F. Heatwole, the guest of honor, falling midway between these extremes at sixty-six years

Aside from the very enjoyable period that was spent at the table, the day was occupied in the recall of reminiscences that carried the mind back to the rainbow days of youth, when the farmers of West Rockingham cut their wheat with grain cradles and every sheaf bound by hand; when wages were fifty cents per day working from sunrise to sunset, or twelve dollars per month with washing and mending thrown in and a horse to ride Sundays.

Recollections were also recalled of the Rev. Wm. T. Price, who, in the seventies and eighties was a most familiar figure in the social, literary and religious affairs of the community, and who is said to be yet living at Marlinton, W. Va., at the age of ninety years and past. His wife Mrs Anna L. Price is still kept fresh in the memory of many of the elderly people for the precious hymn she wrote which begins with the following stanza:

Above life's restless sea,
Dear Saviour lift my spirit up—
O, lift me up to Thee."

—Harrisonburg News.

L. O. Simmons, the beeman, reports his bees to be wintering fine in double walled hives, but the colonies in single wall hives to be in medium to bad shape. Heretofore he has wintered his bees in a small bee house, packing the hives away in leaves. This proved a satisfactory, but troublesome way. Last season he got a number of hives with double walls, and he finds them satisfactory in every particular. An air space is left all around the inside hive which is further protected by a heavy pasteboard covering. This makes the hive cool in summer and warm in winter.

HONOR ROLL: Minnehaha School for third month. E. Ernest White, Teacher—Eleanor Herold, Virginia Herold, Grace Rexrode, Nellie Sharp, Juanita Rexrode, Woodrow Herold, Carson Herold and George Gum.

STEPHENSON--McLAUGHLIN

"Ridge Cr st," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Solon H. Moore, Stuarts Draft, Virginia, Wednesday evening, December 29, 1920, at 7:30 o'clock was the scene of a beautiful wedding, when their sister Edith McLaughlin, became the bride of Mr. Lucian Homer Stephenson. Rev. H. W. McLaughlin, D. D., of New Providence Church, and cousin of the bride, and the Rev. H. M. Wilson, pastor, officiating ministers. The ceremony was witnessed only by relatives and close friends of the families, and was followed by a reception. The house which is so well adapted for such occasions, was simply but beautifully decorated with potted plants, cut flowers, and Christmas evergreens. The lower floor being lighted with pink shaded candles and a soft light from the open fire made a perfect setting for the beautiful scene. The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. S. H. Moore, and wore a gown of white georgette over crepe meteor, carrying a shower boquet of brides roses, her tulle veil caught with orange blossoms. Her only ornament a string of pearls, a gift from the groom. Miss Mary McClintic, of Marlinton, W. Va., was maid of honor and wore jade green tafeta with silver lace, carrying pink roses. The groom was attended by his brother Boyd Stephenson, Monterey, Va. Fred McLaughlin and G. H. Payne ushers. Mrs. J. McB McChesney of Fishersville, rendered the wedding music. Mrs. C. S. Roller, of Ft. Defiance, presided at the punch bowl. After a trip to the northern cities, Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson will be at Monterey.

Guests from a distance, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. McNeel, Miss Nancy McNeel, Hillsboro, W. Va.; Miss Mary McClintic, J. A. McLaughlin, Frank McLaughlin, Marlinton, W. Va., Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boyer, Woodstock; Maj. and Mrs. Chas. Roller, Ft. Defiance; Miss Elle George, Newport, and G. H. Payne, Monterey. M.

Dear Editor of the Times:

After reading the article of week before last by Rural Teacher, and the reply last week by Alleghany Joe, I cannot refrain from having something to say. I do not know the names of either writer but we are all friends.

I would like to ask our friend, Alleghany Joe, that if teaching is such a soft snap, why are so many schools without teachers in West Virginia? Why do we hold each year three uniform examinations, then have to issue emergency certificates in order to meet the situation, not counting the graduates from high school each year with the Teachers' Training Course completed and holding a first grade certificate ready to teach?

It seems to me that there should be two or three applicants for each job if it is the soft snap some think it is. Why do so many make preparation to teach and then teach a year or two and quit? I suppose they learn a few things by actual experience that the person who never taught hasn't learned.

Just a few days ago I talked with a young man who taught school two or three years and quit. He is working at camp on Elk River now. He said he could work all day in the woods and not be as tired when night came as he would in the school room from nine till four. He also said he could make as much in three months at camp as he could in six teaching school.

Another young man finished high school and taught one year and said he considered a person a fool who would teach school if he could find anything else to do.

Sometimes under certain circumstances I am inclined to think he did not miss the truth very far when he said it.

Rural Teacher gave a very good description of the situation as a general one. If teachers fully realize the great responsibility and obligation resting upon them, to their Maker, the patrons, and pupils, when they enter the school room—and I think most of them do—and work accordingly as they do not receive enough pay for the time spent in the school room. But the work does not stop at four o'clock. Teacher must plan their work days before school begins and keep planning and preparing, sitting up at night as long as their tired nerves will permit them, then up early in the morning and at the task again.

Rural teachers should have more pay than they get. Just think of going into a one room school with from thirty to forty pupils and frequently in all the grades and try to do a good part by all. They must have about thirty recitations a day. Of course they can't do the work as they would like to do it, but feeling responsibility resting on them they must make the best of the situation. Often the children are crowded together, new seats are needed and they cannot be gotten. Sometimes the teacher goes two or three miles through the snow and cold and on arriving at the school house does not always find a good fire and every thing pleasant and ready for work to move right off.

Teaching is a noble profession but a very poor trade at present. If the public doesn't get around and agitate the school question and inform our legislators as to what they need, our school conditions will not improve but may get worse.

Probably I had better quit for this time, but the half has not yet been told.

SPICE

We are having some very fine weather for the beginning of the new year.

Little Johnnie Bragg is ill with pneumonia.

Mrs. A. M. Dean is able to be out again after a light attack of pneumonia.

Mitchell Barrett has gone to Cheat to work.

Miss Carrie Brown, has returned from a Baltimore Hospital, and has taken up her school again at this place.

Miss Ethel Barrett returned home last week after spending several months with her brother, John Barrett, in Virginia.

Mrs. Emma Shue of Virginia, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. A. L. Kershner, recently.

Walter Foe, of Cass, spent Saturday and Sunday with his mother.

Mrs. Eula Hiner, of Cass, is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. T. Kershner.

The venerable John R. King, of Weston, was here last week to visit his kinsman, L. M. Waugh. Though nearly eighty years of age, Mr. King is still straight and enjoyed the five mile walk from Marlinton to Mr. Waugh's home and the fine winter morning on New Years. He was a Confederate soldier, a member of that fighting regiment, the 25th Virginia Infantry. Mr. King has devoted much of his time in late years to writing remininisences of the war and early days of the State.

Johnny Hayslet, a fifteen year old boy, lost an eye last Friday by the dynamite cap route. He and a number of half grown boys had gathered some dynamite caps and took them to the mouth of the creek to explode them. They built a fire and Johnny held one of the caps down with a stick. When it went off, the cap hit him in the eye, probably destroying the sight. On Saturday he was taken to an eye specialist at Charlottsvsile.

"Friends, the taxes are indeed very heavy, and if those laid on by the Government were the only ones we had to pay we might more easily discharge them; but we have many oteers and much more grievons to some of us. We are taxed twice as much by our idleness; three times as much by our pride and four times as much by our folly; and from these taxes the Commissioners cannot case or deliver us by allowing an abatement." —Benjamin Franklin.

Henry Cleek, an old time resident of Pocahontas, who lived on the farm that is now Marlinton nearly fifty years ago, spent last week with relatives and old time acquaineances. He is now living in Baltimore. Much of his life has been spent on the frontier, in the north west, the far west, Alaska and Panama. In Alaska he carried mail on dog sleds; in Panama he helped put the canal across, and dnring the war he did his bit in the shipyards.

SEEING DIXIE LAND FROM AUTO

EXTRACTS FROM NOTE BOOK BY D. L. BARLOW

FOREWORD

I desire to thank the friends who have written me so many kind words of appreciation of articles published over my name in THE TIMES last summer.

Since leaving your county we have visited six States and so many have requested me to give an account of my journey, I herewith send you the first installment.

I am today, January 8th located in a beautiful park which overlooks Tampa Bay. I find it impossible for one to collect his thoughts in this land of azure skies, blooming flowers, tropical fruits, bracing air and singing birds. This seems to be a place where you care for only three things, namely; rest, sleep and eat. So I know my reader will excuse the poorly composed articles which will follow. We have had some hardships, but in short,—

"This old world we are living in is mighty hard to beat—
We get a thorn with every rose, but ain't the roses sweet."

THE JOURNEY

During the summer of 1920 I had a glorious time seeing, talking with and visiting my friends who live among the hills of Pocahontas county and as I did not want to destroy my pleasant visit by bidding any of them "good bye," aimed to slip away without letting my people know I was going.

In Huntington we remained a few days with Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Peck, and will just say the Lord may have made better people than the Pecks but if he did he left them in Pocahontas. Not since my mother bid me good bye when I left nome for school in the fall of—no, I will not give the date—have I met any one so uneasy about my safety and welfare as was my sister Effie when I left her home at 12 o'clock noon, October 19th for the purpose touring Dixie Land and well she might have been had she witnessed some of the experiences of our trip.

At Ashland, Ky., we crossed the Ohio River and camped the first night with a Mr. Coldiron, twelve miles west of Portsmouth.

October 20, we drove west along the Ohio, crossed the river into Kentucky at Maysville and camped with a Virginian, T. F. Spencer, of Mays lick, Ky. Mr. Spencer is a prominent farmer.

October 21. We journeyed south by the way of Lexington and Richmond, Ky. This day's drive was through a beautiful country, and from the fine road one can see scores of magnificent homes, many of which were so elaborate and had such lovely groves, lawns and walks that we stopped to admire their beauty and architecture.

In the beautiful blue grass pasture the Kentucky short horn cattle and saddle horses appear to be at peace with the world.

The third night out we camped with R. C. Lovings, Berea, Ky. This man as his name indicates is full to the overflow of Kentucky hospitality.

On the morning of the 22nd we drove south. This was the most eventful day of all my travels. There was not a foot of good road after we left Berea on this day's drive, and I knew that if I wrote out my experience of today while all things were fresh in my mind I might use too many adverbs. So I omitted writing today's events until I arrived at Graysville, Tennessee, and while there October 30, I made the following notes in my book:

What Might Have Been a Serious Accident.

I am now sitting under an oak tree in an old field near Graysville, Tenn., Th day is cloudy and the air is bracing and the birds are singing as they do in Pocahontas in May.

I am 712 miles by road from Marlinton and in thinking about the road and incidents which have occurred, one event stands out very prominent. We were driving past some road construction work when we had a puncture and while changing inner tubes a large road truck came along going in the same direction in which we were headed. The road truck caught a telephone wire. The wire caught our car just above the top of bed and moved the car some distance. Just as the top was giving away and the wire began to clamp Mrs. Barlow and Goldie who were sitting on the back seat of the automobile, the wire broke. Had it not broken they could not have escaped with their lives, and I would have had to use two in one shoe polish on my hair the remainder of my days.

Gauley Mountain, Kentucky.

A second event of the 22nd was crossing of Gauley Mountain. I am of the opinion that but few people can accurately describe a road—that is picture it so that when one sees it he could honestly say, "It is as I expected." I hope that none of my readers will ever see the road from Berea, Ky., to London, Ky. I shall not attempt to speak of but one mountain on this drive. They call it Gauley. But the word "gauley" is too much of a Sunday school word to use when speaking of this mountain.

Just before we reached the grade we met a party from Deleware and the gentleman driving the car stopped and proceded to describe the mountain road. The ladies who were with him also began to give their ideas. Had they not all talked at once and could I have written short hand, I would have had a fair description. The man concluded his story by saying, 'I wish you good luck but I would not drive that mountain again for five dollars. Be sure your engine is cool before you start up the grade.

The ladies cantioned us carefully to unload and hold car from upsetting. As there was no way around we drove on. For about one mile we jumped the car from one rock to another. The road bed is made up of large solid rocks which in many places extend across road and to make good measure large rock weighing from one hundred to a thousand pounds are thrown in. I cannot now point you to a single creek bed in Pocahontas that would be a fair example of this road.

Then the mountain—I have not words to describe it. It appeared to me to be twice as steep as the Laurel Creek or Greasy Hill roads as sidling as it was steep. Added to this, it is full of big rocks upon which you must stay, because if you drop between the rocks your axle will in many places drag. If you drive too near the upper bank you might up set and if too close the lower side of road you might go over and land somewhere—II failed to look. We followed the advice of the Deleware ladies and in many places we had hold of the car that we might be ready in case it started to go over.

I am informed that many cars have to be cabled up this mountain. I knew that old "Sal" was a dandy but when she pulled this grade without a grunt or a puff I apologized to her for all the bad things I had said about her.

Daniel Boone's Trail.

Today we were supposed to have followed Daniel Booue's trail as he journeyed from the Carolinas to Kentucky, but the road must have been better when he went through with his gun and axe.

At Rockcassel river the ferry boat was out of commission. I went down the side of the river until I came to a riffle and there in the sand I imagined I could see Boone's foot print and knew if he crossed old "Sal" ought to ford it. So we plunged in and crossed all O. K.

After this terrible day's drive we camped with M. L. Jody, of London, Ky., He and his wife treated us so kind and gave us such a welcome that we soon forgot the past and turned our attention to the future.

At London we were advised to leave the Dixie Highway and go south by the way of Corbin, Ky., to Jelico, Tenn. So early Saturday morning, October 23, we bid farewell to our kind friend Mr. Jody and soon arrived at Corbin where in 1780 Dr. Thomas Walker guarded surveyors working in that county. Dr. Walker was said to be the first white man in Kentucky to use a short rifle gun. The usual gun used by the pioneers was long and cumbersome.

Corbin was once the dwelling place of William Whitley for whom the county was named. He came to Kentucky carrying an axe and a gun for the purpose of exploring, but liked the county so much, his wife followed him.

As the day was fearfully hot, we rested for some time at Jellico, Tenn. and late in the evening we started for Lafallette, Tenn. This was a beautiful drive through a gap in the Pine Mountain, or spur of the Cumberland Mountains. In many places the cut is so narrow that there is hardly room for the roadway, above which the sides rise to a height of hundreds of feet. There are also many short curves in this road which reminded me of what John Young told me about Capt. Lakin whose grey hound hung up in the turn on Greasy Hill. John said the Captain had to get a rail and skid the hind part of the dog around so he could make the turn.

We crossed many mountains this evening and in many places if one went over he would land hundreds of feet below.

At Lafallette we met real southern hospitality and camped with a Mr. Hollingsworth, an active partner in the Lafallette Retail and Wholesale Hardware Co. He lives about four miles south of the city and we spent a pleasant night at his place.

For the past few weeks the weather here has been extremely dry and water is scaree, so on Sunday morning we drove until we came to a fine mountain spring flowing beside the road. Here we stopped, washed and cleaned up for the Sabbath.

DURBIN

Our singing school closed Saturday night.

The sick in our community is better.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Bish have returned from Charlottesville, Va., where they had been to see their son Paul Bish.

Road examiners have located the road from Goodsell's Garage to Bartow and we are looking forward to a good road next summer.

Albert Ash, of Burner, was in town on business last week.

J. W. Gibson, of Thornwood, was here Saturday to get a Home Comfort stove an to attend to other business.

S. H. Hiner is having lumber hauled to town with the expectation of building in the spring.

Jake Hoover and Ed Sheets were business visitors here last week.

Joe Sharp, the heavy man, was at the Deglar hotel Saturday. Mr. Sharp has charge of the L. L. Burner farm on Cheat Mt., and we are always glad to see Joe.

Howard Burner, of Burner, was in town with a load of produce. We are always glad to see Howard come in with his wagon load of things to eat.

We got word here that Elkins wants the capitol building at Elkins. We will be glad if we can get it at Elkins, as the Durbin people have given up that we can't have the capitol in Pocahontas, so Elkins will do, but we hope to get to vote on the place."

Senator Arnold, of Upshur county, is president of the Senate, and John T. Harris, of Wood county, is clerk of the Senate. E. M. Keatley, of Kanawha county, is speaker of the House, and Stanley F. Hodges, of Pendleton, if clerk of the House.

MYSTERY OF THE JEWEL HANDLED KNIFE

Ninth Installment

By Clare Haupt and Raymond Gibson

Then Lawrence whispered to MacDonald, "I heard Eloise scream." They drew their revolvers and ran hastily up the flight of stairs and entered a narrow passage, when crash! Lawrence MacDonald's flashlight was shot out of his hand. But Maynard answered the fire instantly and a heavy thud was heard.

They crept forward slowly and soon came to the body of a dead man which they searched and found a knife and to their delight another flashlight. They examined the man closely and found that he was a Hindoo, but not the same one that MacDonald had seen on his first visit to the MacDonald homestead.

Maynard picked up the Hindoo's revolver and they were cautiously moving on when they heard several shots and Eloise scream again. They rushed forward and came to a door which they knocked down and to their astonishment found Eloise unconscious fastened to some kind of a Hindoo torturing post which would cause unbearable pain, and in one corner of the room lay Joseph, the servant, wounded seriously.

He said, "Several men dressed as Hindoos were torturing Eloise when I entered and they stated to leave saw me and began firing." He also said that he believed one of the men to be Mr. John Taylor.

By this time Eloise had regained consciosness and she said "that several Hindoos had captured and brought her to this room to torture her into a confession as to where some valuable papers were which belonged to her father and at the same time part of the papers nowin the Hindoo's possession, and would give valuable inormation especially to Mr. John Taylor who had been hes father's as well as her cousin's rival in business" She believed that one of the Hindoos was Mr. Taylor and that they had gone in search of the papers. She also told them where the papers were and as they opened the door in pursuit of the Hindoos, a light was flashed in Maynard's face.

ARBOVALE

We are having some winter, about zero, but the snow is not deep.

This is a good winter for cattle to eat their feed. Stock of all kinds is looking well.

J. A. Patterson has sold his farm to J. B. Orndorff. Mr. Patterson expects to go to Ohio to look for a farm. We are sorry to see good people leave our county.

Rev. Mr. Donley and wife returned from Ohio last Friday

Mr. Lee Ervin, Mrs. Arlie Vandevender and Mrs. Jesse Sheares spent last Thursday at the home of Mrs. J. W. Gillispie. Mrs. Vandevender expects to move to the North Fork Lumber Camp next week, where her husband is working.

The North Fork people are rushing their logs out: the trains are loaded down well as they come out.

The Hawaiian Quartet will be here on Tuesday, January 25th. Hear them in the high school at 8.00 p. m.

WHY THE EDITOR LEFT TOWN

Somebody sent the editor of the Poketown Gazette a few bottles of Home Brew. The same day he received for publication a wedding announcement and a notice of an auction sale. Here is the result: "Wm. Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at public auction at my farm one mile east of a beautiful cluster of roses at her breast and two white calves, before a background of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about seventy guests, including two milk cows, six mules and one bob sled. Rev. Jackson tied the nuptial knot with 200 feet of hay rope and the bridal couple left on one good John Deere gang plow for an extended trip with terms to suit purchasers. They will be at home to their friends with one good baby carriage and a few kitchen utensils after ten months from date of sale to responsible parties and some fifty chickens."—Andalusia Star.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, it has pleased God in his infinite wisdom, to remove from our Sunday School and community our beloved Superintendent, Wm. Malcolm. Therefore be it resolved by the members of the Arbovale Sunday School:

First. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who never makes a mistake; and whose tender care is ever over his children.

Second That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved wife and relatives and pray God's richest blessings may be upon them, and especially upon the two little fatherless children.

Third That in his death our Sunday School has lost a faithful Superintendent, our church a loyal helper and our community a beloved friend.

Fourth That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate and the County papers for publication.

Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past
The battle's fought, the race is won
And thou art crowned at last.

SEEING DIXIE LAND FROM AUTO

After dinner I started out to find the head of the spring. I walked up the road bnt a few hundred yards until I found it. There I also found a home and upon the porch a gentleman, reading and enjoying the ideal day. I spoke to him and after we had talked a few moments I told him I was looking for the head of the spring. He pointed to a large oak tree from under which it flowed and said, "I will go with you." After drinking of the water I asked if he cared if I moved up for the night. He gave me to understand that the spring, the home, the farm were mine for the night. This spring was near the top of Copper Ridge. The gentleman's name is A. A. LaRue, Powell Station, Tennessee.

This place is about twelve miles north of Knoxville and if the Dixie Highway is ever put in shape so that one can travel it, it seems to me the kind gentleman here holds the key to a nice little fortune

Monday morning October 25th we started for Knoxville at which city we arrived quite early. Knoxville was founded in 1791 by Gen. James White who served as a soldier during the Revolution and received his pay from North Carolina in a land grant located at this place.

For a time Knoxville was a government military post, barracks being erected for the accommodation of those in millitary service.

This is a city of over 100,000 population, named after Gen. Henry Knox a distinguished artillerist of the revolution and Secretary of War under Washington, and it is located on a hilly site of great beauty at the head stream of navigation on the Tennessee River and is surrounded by coal, iron, copper, zinc snd beautiful marble, which causes it to rank in commercia importance, with the first cities of the south

Knoxville has extensive wholesale interests, is the seat of the University of Tennessee, also the State asylum for the insane, and also for the deaf and dumb.

Another feature of interest is the National Cemetery where rest 3300 soldiers of the Civil War, during which war Knoxville was held by the Confederates until 1863, and in November of the same year they made, under General Longstreet a desperate and vain effort to regain it.

It is 137 miles from Knoxville to Chattanooga, and as we wished to make a good portion of this run today we did not tarry long here and were soon on our way!

Our first stop was at Kingston, second Dayton and we camped with Mrs. W. E. Keith of Graysonsville, which is over one hundred miles from Knoxville.

Mrs. Keith's husband was killed seventeen years ago at a railroad crossing just below her home. She has managed to keep her children together—all of whom have finished their education except the youngest who is now in school. Two of her daughters are drawing a good salary, one a teacher and the other a bookkeeper. Her father 89 years of age has been with her since the death of his wife which occurred ten years ago.

Tuesday morning we found it raining so heavy that we could not prepare breakfast. My wife asked me if I wished to eat a bite. I answered "No," for one of my father's rules was "Never eat anything before breakfast," and he was generally right. But after some persuasion I ate a light meal.

October 26—a rainy morning. As a rule campers are more or less contrary in wet weather. Dampness seems to affect the wiring of the snappy lobe of the brain and you may look for an explosion at any time but I am thankful that my people have made up thair minds to take the weather as it comes.

If I am comfortably situated I I never travel when it is raining, and as we were located here among such clever people we decided to stay over until next morning. The rain ceased early in the day and thus we had an opportunity to make a study of the surrounding country.

I am of the opinion that before the white man came the red man was in his glory in Tennessee. This was the home land of the Cherokees and we can surmise how happy they were as they hunted over these hills, valleys and plains. But alas, the pale face came and the Indian Chief Oconostota predicted truly in 1768, at the treaty of Sycamore Shoals that the white man would force the Indiins ever toward the west. They are gone.

The early white pioneers of this section wore vests "pants" and moccasins, leggins and shirts made of deer skins, their caps being made of coon skins. Leather thread was used in sewing leather garments.

Just north of Dixie Highway and across from our camp is Waldron's Ridge upon which an old gentleman here told me he had known single hunters to kill as many ss seven deer in one day's hunt. Back of these mountains is the Cumberland Range. There is but little game in these mountains now as the hills are dotted with homes and the people have become prosperous growing fruit and truck. Along the highway I see large fields of strawberries and the people find sale for all the truck and fruit they can grow. It is hauled to the cities in large trucks.

Wednesday, October 2?, we drove into and spent a few hours at Chattanooga which is located on the Tennessee River and is a city of some 100,000 inhabitants. It is an important railroad center and is surrounded by picturesque scenery. The Cumberland and several other valleys converge here.

Chattanooga was settled in 1838 and in the Civil War was considered of great importance as the gateway to three states—Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama. Consequently it was the scene of some of the fiercest contests of the war—notably those of Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain.

The first place of interest to us was Lookout Mountain. An electric line runs up this mountain, but we prepared to drive our car up the beautiful winding, steep, but well kept road. We found it five miles up to the top and from here I am told seven states can be seen. Upon this mountain we find a small city of 3000 inhabitants.

As we walked over the scenes of the battlefield, observing the monuments and plates which gave the position of the various commanders and told the story of the battle of November 1863, we thought of the grave questions facing the American people at that time. It was a time when the rulers of the old world looked on with undisguised pleasure for they thought they saw in the strange war the downfall of the American government. But hold on, we have not time to go into this war question Let us drive over to the cemetery where over 13,000 Civil war victims lie awaiting the judgment day.

As we walked through the cemetery we realized we were in the presence of sacred memories—memories which have touched with coals of fire the lips of great orators until their eloquence have blazed beneath over powering, inspiring, and great squls have burst forth in songs of praise.

"Rest on, embalmed and sainted dead,
Dear as the blood they gave:
No impious footstep there shall tread
The herbage of your grave."

I am trying to call to mind a verse or two of The Blue and Gray, but memory fails me. I can only say that there is now no malice in the New South and today as the southern maid goes through the southern cemetery her tears fall not only upon flowers which she has strewn upon the grass of her own dead but also upon the garlands she had placed upon the graves of northern soldiers who met their death in this sunny land. As I stand here I can imagine the cannons as they boomed from the battlefields of Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge and Chickamauga echoed back the words "Peace be still" and now God be thanked the angel of peace, joy, plenty and happiness hovers over our great country.

Marlinton, W. Va.

REV. WILLIAM T. PRICE, D.D.

Rev. Wm. T. Price died at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. F. R. Hunter, at Marlinton, W. Va., on Sunday, the 23rd day of January, 1921, of infirmities incident to old age. He was laid away in the Marlinton Cemetery and his last resting place is within a few steps of the place of his birth.

He was born at Marlins Bottom, now Marlinton, on the 19th day of July, 1830, and at the time of his death he was in his ninety-first year. He was the eldest child of the late James A. Price and Margaret D Price, and of a family of fourteen brothers and sisters but one survives him. That one is Mrs. Mary M. McLaughlin, of Maxwelton.

He was prepared for college at the Hillsboro Academy, and in 1850, he entered Washington College, with the late Rev. Dr. J. N. Craig, the two students being among the first students that were sent out to college from the county. The subject of this sketch was graduated from Washington College, now the Washington & Lee University, in 1854, receiving the degrees of A. M. and A. B. from that institution, and later was awarded the degree of doctor of divinity from that University. At Lexington during his school years he was thrown with Stonewall Jackson who at the same time was an instructor in the Virginia Military Institute and who was active in church work. Dr. Price received a gold medal at the time of his graduation as a first honor graduate. From college he went to the Union Theological Seminary completing his studies there in the year 1857, and that same year was licensed to preach as a minister of the Presbyterian Church. He was an ordained minister of the gospel for the period of sixty-three years.

At the outbreak of the war he served with the Confederate Army as a chaplain, going with the first company of soldiers who left Highland county on the historic expedition to Grafton which was the earliest campaign of the Civil War. He was later assigned as chaplain of Pickett's Brigade, and was acting as such at the time that that gallant force was decimated at Gettysburg.

With the exception of a short period in Little Rock, Arkansas, his ministerial work has been confined to churches in the mountain country near his birth place. For twelve years his work was that of a home missionary in Bath, Highland and Pendleton counties. Then for sixteen years he was pastor of Cooks Creek Church, in Rockingham County, Virginia. In 1885, at the age of fifty-five years he returned to the place of his birth and was pastor of the Huntersville and Marlinton churches until advancing age retired him from the active ministry.

In addition to his work as a minister he has been a voluminous writer contributing for more than fifty years to current periodicals. For several years he published a religious magazine which had a wide circulation. It was called The Virginian. He is the author of the History of Pocahontas County and other publications. It was at his suggestion that the Pocahontas Times was purchased twenty-eight years ago; since which time that paper has been published by him and his sons.

In 1865, he was married to Miss Anna Louise Randolph, daughter of Henry W. Randolph, of Richmond, Virginia. He was a man of thirty-five years of age when married, but fate dealt so kindly with him that the couple rounded out the golden period of fifty years more than five years ago. He is survived by his wife and six children, Dr. J. W Price, Andrew Price, Mrs. F. R. Hunter, Dr. Norman R. Price, and Calvin W. Price, of Marlinton, and Dr. Susan A. Price, of the Normal Institute, at Farmville, Virginia.

His last years were much comforted and soothed by the devotion and care of his daughter, Mrs. Hunter, with whom he made his home.

His has been a long and a useful life, and his influence has been for good. When his way of life had fallen into the sear, the yellow leaf, no man could ever claim a more perfect right to that which should accompany old age, as honor, love, obedience, and troops of friends.

His life recalls the passage from Milton:

So may'st thou live, till like ripe fruit thou drop
Into thy mother's lap, or be with ease
Gather'd not harshly plucked for death mature.

And no man ever had a better right to the blessing proclaimed in the first Psalm. It is his epitome:

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful.

But his delight is in the law of the Lord: and in his law doth he meditate day and night.

And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; and his leaf also shall not wither: and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.

When he laid himself down for the last time, death came with friendly care, and almost his last intelligible words were: How firm a foundation—

MYSTERY OF THE JEWEL HANDLED KNIFE

A man outside pushed Maynard babk into the room, Eloise cried out, and John Taylor came forward. He was wearing a Hindo robe and in his hand gleamed the jewel handled knife. "I have killed them all Eloise, he said slowly, "All the Hindus, at last you are safe."

Eloise's face became white as he spoke. "You are too late!" she said, her voice becoming fainter, "They have poisoned me—the papers—" she fell dead at his feet.

"I have destroyed the papers Eloise." John Taylor went on talking, looking down at the dead girl as though she could hear him. "Night and day since your father's death I have tried to prove this mystery. It was the jewel handled knife that gave me the clue

"Disguised as a Hundu I joinel the mysterious band of the Zooraines and learned all their secrets. They had declared death to you and all your house in order to secure and keep the papers.

"Members of the Zooraine band were on the grounds of your home night and day. By means of the whistle they signaled back and forth to each other. One night, Eloise, I stood under your window and sent out the mysterious call of the bird note, presumably in aid of the band that sought your life. I had made Joseph my accomplice to keep me informed of the affairs at your house while I tried to discover in the Hindu den the meaning of the papers that I might free you from danger forever."

He threw his hands up in despair, "Alas, too late!" he cried, and plunged the jewel handled kiife into his breast.

MacDonald came forward: "But the papers? What do they mean?" he said.

For answer the servant Joseph, took from a hole inside the hilt of the jewel handled knife a scrap of paper, and read these words:

"Whoever holds this jewel handled knife and the papers that belong to it knows all the mysteries of the Zooraine band

"John Taylor and the Hindus are dead, the papers are gone, the mystery can never be explained," said Maynard.

Mary Pickford, the universal favorite, will appear at the AMUSU theatre February 1st in her newest photoplay, "Heart O' the Hills," an adaption of the story by John Fox, Jr. This is considered one of the most interesting contributions to American fiction, it being written by one of our most celebrated authors The role which the star assumes could not be more adaptable if it was written with her in mind. She portrays the tempestuous feudist girl of the Blue Ridge mountains with remarkable depth and feeling and manages to extract a great deal of humor from the characterization. You will see a new Mary Pickford here—a Mary Pickford who depicts many varied roles. She avenges the death of her "Pap," becomes a Night Rider, a school girl, a society girl, and other characters.

As Mavis Hawn she takes the role of a girl whose father has been killed in a feud and whose mother is on the verge of re-marrying.

The picture is full of humor and pathos and offers a beautiful romance and it is dramatic to the core. The star is supported by an exceptionally clever group of players. Adv.

Hon. E. N. Moore, our representative in the Legislature, has been appointed on the following committees: elections, buildings, agriculture, and fish and game. The meeting of the legislature has been a tame affair except for the contest between Charleston and Clarksburg over uhe capitol. Charleston favored and Clarksburg opposed. The lower house adopted the resolution after an amendment had beeu attached prohibiting the committee from taking any action until the location of the capitol building had been definitely settled.

Mrs. Ellen McKee writes from Parkersburg, and says that her son, Moore McKee, is still in delicate health. They are comfortable in their new home and have many kind neighbors, but Marlinton will always be home to them. She misses being called "mother," as every one in Marlinton addressed her, and when they think about Pocahontas she and the Doctor both get homesick. Mrs. McKee asks to be remembered to and by her many friends. Her address is 725 Market Street, Parkersburg, W. Va.

J. A. McLaughlin, County Chairman of the European Childrens' Relief Fund, says that very liberal and satisfactory contributions are being reported from the churches, Sunday schools and fraternal organizations. So far the day schools have not reported as willingly as he had hoped they would, Mr. McLaughlin wants all contributions and reports to be in his hands by February 1st.

THE COAL BUSINESS

Editor Pocahontas Times—

Much has been said pro and con on the question of coal delivery along the Greenbrier Valley, and much criticism has been made of the prices that have been asked for coal.

I have made some investigation as to the coal shipments in our county, and have found the following state of facts: My investigation was occasioned upon my attempt to get my winter's coal during the month of October. I first tried our local dealers in Marlinton and the price asked me was $14 per ton, which was prohibitive. I then made an effort to have a car shipped me from the New River fields, which car was held up at Ronceverte and the excuse given was that it was an overweight car. However, the week following a car of the same capacity was delivered to the Marlinton Light & Water Plant through the local broker. The car that was held up at Ronceverte was ordered through the broker at Ronceverte at a cost of $8 per ton, which included the broker's commission, as he informed me.

I then made inquiry as to shipments from the Elkins and vicinity fields, and was told by C. J. Richardson that he had ordered a car from a mine in which he was interested in that field which was delivered to Durbin, but was refused delivery over the C. & O. Ry. from Durbin to Marlinton. This car he was compelled to dispose of in Durbin.

Then, on November 19, I wrote the Public Service Commission fully as to the critical coal condition that confronted the people on the Greenbrier Division of the C. & O. My purpose in taking the matter up with the Public Service Commission was due to the fact that I asertained that coal could be purchased at a resonable price at Elkins if delivery could be made to Marlinton. The Commission replied in part as follows: "The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company has no published rate on coal moving from Durbin over the Greenbrier Division, because it is unusual for coal to be shipped in that direction. However, we are advised by the general freight agent that if he he had known that the car of coal referred to (referring to the Richardson car) was at Durbin, it would have been moved, and they would have requested the Commission to authorize a rate for the particular movement."

Some days after this correspondence I was in Durbin and was advised that the Commission had sent a man there to arrange rates, with the effect that a race was fixed from those fields of $2 83 to Marlinton, where the rate had been $3.08 to Durbin only At that time I was advised by the citizens of Durbin that during this harrassing time they had ordered a car of coal from the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co. at Cass, which the C. & O. Ry. refused to deliver from Cass to Durbin.

After my fight in getting a rate from Durbin to Marlinton fixed and having supplied some coal to Marlinton people, I ordered a car for J. D. Payne at Seebert, the people as I was informed being out of coal at that place, on which car the railway company charged an additional rate from Marlinton to Seebert, a distance of ten miles, $101.00.

Recently I have been informed that an attempted prosecution would be made against those who have distributed coal in Marlinton without weighing each load, notwithstanding that the price charged was about one half what was asked by by those who would now attempt these prosecutions, and notwithstanding that the purchasers of this coal were highly elated that some one had come to their rescue and made it possible that they could keep their homes warm during the winter season.

I might call attention to the fact that it is a violation of the law also to sell coal by weight over scales that have not been tested by the Sealer of Weights and Measure within a year from such sale. I am advised that our local coal dealer's scales have not been tested for years, and they have been known to overweight as much as 400 lbs on a ton. I feel that this fight has been responsible for a reduction of the price of coal in Marlinton at the present time.

Very truly,
J. W. Yeager.

NEW COUNTY AGENT

W. C. Stokoe, the new County Agent arrived this week, and has entered on an important part of his work—that of meeting the people, with whom and for whom he will work.

Mr. Stokoe comes from New York State, having been Agent in the County of Cortland. He is a graduate of Cornell University. He is a man of family, having a wife and one child.

Cortland County, New York, is one of the best potato counties in the United States. Many farmers in that county make a specialty of producing certified seed potatoes. Pocahontas is naturally a great potato region, and is so recognized by the field men of the Department of Agriculture.

This writer feels that Pocahontas is fortunate in securing the services of an agent who is thoroughly familiar with raising and marketing potatoes.

Mr. Dee Crane, the potato expert of the University, is with Mr. Stokoe.

The funeral of the late Rev W. T. Price was held from the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening; burial in the Mt. View Cemetery. The arrangements were in compliance with his expressed wishes. The service was conducted by Rev. J. C. Johnson, assisted by Dr. J. H. Light, Dr. H. W. McLaughlin and Rev. Fred Gray.

A charter has been granted to the Marlinton Coal, Oil and Gas Company, Marlinton; chief works in Pocahontas county; carital stock $25,000; incoeporators: James Gibson, Edray, W. Va.; C. J. Richardson, Pearl Yeager, J. W. Yeager, P. R. Yeager, Marlinton, W. Va.—Charleston Gazette.

The first session of the new Council for Marlinton will be held Tuesday night, February 1st, at 7:30 p. m.

DURBIN

We are having a good revival meeting at the M. E. Church, South.

P. H Eades has been very poorly.

J. H. Flenner unloaded a car of hay last week.

N. B. Arbogast has been visiting Squire J. L. Hudson.

Price Grogg is teaching a fine school at Hoover school house.

Alex Reitz, of Nottingham, was in town Saturday on business.

F. K. Moore was a business caller in town last week.

Manan & Usay are having a big sale this week.

W. R. Ledi, of Hosterman, is moving to Arden, W. Va., this week.

R. C. Miller of Bartow, is a business visitor in town.

C. J. Richardsan, of Marlinton, was among his friends here last week.

J. S. and U W. Burner were in town last weed on business.

Mrs. Joe Coyle passed here last week on her way to Bower, W. Va.

BELMONT

We had a snow of one inch—the first and only snow this winter, but it has moderated to almost summer heat, being 66 degrees.

Stock is wintering well.

The Belmont graded school is progressing nicely with Miss Miller as principal ond Miss Blantain and Miss Bareback teachers of lower grades.

The farmers in this neighborhood are very busy with their farm work, and are plowing for future crops.

Miss Sammie Payne of Washington is visiting her mother and other relatives in Belmont.

Miss Agnes Harris, who has been very ill the past few weeks, is much improved at this time.

Mr. Nixon, who moved to Goshen, Va., recently, reports the snow 15 inches deep there. We are glad the snow has not reached Belmont.

SEEING DIXIE LAND FROM AUTO

South east of the city, but in the State of Georgia, is Chicamauga Park which embraces 5500 acres—all beautified with monuments, drive-ways etc. As we drove slowly through this battlefield looking upon the scenes where so many of the soldiers gave all, and all of whom gave much, my mind was upon the past. Was it possible that such a lovely, quiet place was once the scene of one of fiercest contests of the war. And as we crossed the graceful, winding Chicamauga whose grandeur and beauty no painter can portray, we had to exclaim with the poet, Robert Walker:

"Along thy sides wild cannon burst,
The Blue and Gray nearby have stood
Awaiting you to quench their thirst,
And give in turn red human blood—
Consigned by you to distant deep,
The bit'rest memory of war,
In thy vast bosom hiding sleep
A nation's deed and noble scar!
May Lethe's waves each attom flood,
Chicmauga! Chicamauga!

"Today your face is one grand smile,
Of prejudice there is none,
No malice holds, no foes beguile,
But greater duties to be done:
To feed the roots of growing crops,
To put the green in forest leaves,
To teach mankind where hatred stops
And raise instead Love's golden sheaves—
Flow thou forever, on and on—Chicamauga! Chicamauga!"

Late in the evening we left these battle scenes feeling that we had spent an eventful day, and stopped over night with Mr. Puryear, of La Fayette, Georgia. Here we again met real southern hospitality—the kind that you read about.

After we had struck camp I visited a farm home to procure eggs and milk. I walked up to the house and on the porch I found an American beauty—a southern gir.l I told her my business. She said, "We can furnish you milk, but as to eggs, we sold all we had today, but will have brothers go and look the nests again. They may find a few." I tried to tell her not to bother about them but it was no use. I had to have eggs even if the hens had to go back on duty. In a few moments the boys returned with ten eggs, and I had not gone far on my return to camp when I heard some one calling. A boy came running. He brought me a half gallon of fresh butter milk and he would not under porsuasion take one cent for it. The next morning as I passed the house on my way toward Rome, I stopped to leave the milk jar and the southern girl was anxious to to know if I found the eggs all O. K. "If not" she said, "you must have your money back."

The sun never shone upou a prettier morning than that of October 28th. It wass a little cooler than we expected to find this far south, but the sky was surely clear and bright

We soon made the run of about 45 miles to Rome, Georgia. Here we found a beautiful city of about 18,000 people. This town was chartered in 1847 and is picturesquely located at the confluence of the Etowah and Ostonaula rivers, which here unite forming the Coosa, and is the commercial center of the agricultural districts of these river valleys as well as a large peach and cotton market.

During the war of '61 to '65 the Confederates held this city until May 1864 when they had to give it up because of Gen. Sherman's march to the sea. Rome is an educational center of some note. Here we find the Berry Industrial School for couuty boys and girls of limited means. This school was founded by Miss Martha Berry whose splendid educational plans has been generously copied by others. Also Shorter College for young women and one of the leading institutions of the kind in the south is located here.

In Rome on a broad and well kept street I find a large and handsome shaft which is the first in the south erected to the memory of the women of the Confederacy.

Upon this monument I read the following inscription which seems to me to state the case to perfection: "She was obedient to the God she adored, and true to every vow she made to man. She was loyal to the country she loved so well and upon its altar she has laid husband, sire and son. The Rome she loved was graced with sincerity of life and devotion of heart. She reared her sons to unselfish chivalry and her daughters to spotless purity. Her children delight to give her honor and love to speak her praise."

I further read that the woman of the Confederacy was one, "Whose purity, whose fidelity, whose gentle genius in love and counsel kept the home sacred, the family a school of virtue, the state a court of honor, who made of war a season of heroism, and of peace a time of healing—the guardian of our tranquility and of our strength." Surely she was an angel of mercy.

Here we also walked through Myrtle Hill cemetery and in it we found the graves of many prominent people. Perhaps the one that attracts most attention at this time is that of Mrs. Ella Low Axon Wilson, first wife of Woodrow Wilson, now president of the United States.

Myrtle Hill also holds the dust of Mrs. Wilson's parents, Rev. S. E. Axon and wife. Mr. Axon was for seventeen years pastor of Rome Presbyterian Church, and while yet in the noon day of life was called to his reward.

Near noon we left Rome and after driving a few miles we ate dinner. After dinner while my folks rested I walked to a little rise in the road that I might see the surrounding country and while looking over the Georgia hills and valleys my mind naturally reverted to the Civil war history of our country. At one time as a teacher it was my business to read something of the causes of the war and of the battles fought on the fields over which I have walked the past few days, as well as the fields upon which I expected to walk the next few days. While here alone I want to know if the Histories we have read gave us facts; or are we in the habit of reading into them the things we do not like? All the histories I have read were written by northern authors, but in talking with people who lived during the dark days of the war I have been inclined to question some things. Any man who hears the story of Lincoln must admire him and it is just as true of Lee, Jackson, Longstreet, Bragg, Johnson, and others. These men thought they were right, and I believe it was Jefferson Davis who said "The impartial enlightened verdict of mankind will vindicate the rectitude of our conduct and He who knows the hearts of men, will judge the sincerity with which we have labored to preserve the government of our fathers in its spirit."

More than half a century has passed since the surrender at Appomattox and soldiers of the armies returned to their homes. One picked up his bussiness life where he had left it four years before. The others returned to a heap of ashes which was all that was left of a once happy home, but he did not complain, but built a new home and with it a new south far better and grander than the old ever could have been. There is no malice here now, but on the other hand the southern people possess real patriotism which clings to no river bank, worships no range of hills, climbs no mountain slope, but lifts its aspiring eye to a continent redeemed by common sacrifice and made sacred by the shedding of kindred blood.

As I look to the southeast and think of Atlanta which is some sixty miles away, there comes to my mind the name of a man who lived in that city and whose writing and orations did more to bring about our present age of national patriotism than any man living or dead. His name is Henry W. Grady and when he died in early manhood he was literally loving a nation into peace. I believe it was he who said in one of his orations, "This hour little needs the loyalty that is loyal to one section and yet holds the other in enduring suspicion and estrangement. Give us the broad and perfect loyalty that loves and trusts Georgia alike with Massachusetts. That knows no north, no south, no east, no west, but endears with equal love every foot of our soil, every section of our union."

We must go. Next stop Cartersville, noted the country over as the the home of Sam Jones, one of the world's greatest and most noted evangelists. Next we came to Kenesaw which was the boyhood home of Judge Landis, of Chicago.

At Marietta we found a National cemetery which contains about 11,000 graves, 3000 of which are of unknown dead. About ten miles west of this place Gen. Sherman was defeated by Gen. Johnson. This as I remember was Sherman's only reverse in his Atlanta campaign.

Here also occurred at the hands of a mob on the morning of August 17, 1915 the hanging of Lee M. Frank. When in the stationery business in the city of Huntington, W. Va., we had some dealings with Mr. Frank's company and I remember I was much interested in reading of the crime with which he was charged and his trial as well as the account of his hanging.

Lower Farm Implement Prices

The break has come. For sometime prices paid for your farm products have been low. It is but natural for you to want lower prices on the farm implements used in producing your crops.

Announcement is made by the Oliver Chilled Plow Works of a general price reduction in their lines that brings prices to the basis of 1918. They are the first to make this reduction and are taking the loss which the move brings, for there has been little reduction in labor or material, as their contribution in hastening a return to normal conditions.

This is your opportunity to secure new, up-to-date Oliver Quality implements that will help you produce a full crop, and get them at a price in line with the reduced prices on your farm products.

Charleston.—Plans to introduce Libbey-Owens sheet glass machines in Europe was announced at a meeting of the stockholders of the company in Toledo. The first plant, which will be located in Belgium, will be a duplicate of the first Libbey-Owens plant in Charleston, it was announced, the plant to be of 12 machine capacity. This insures competition on European soil with hand and cylinder methods of the old world, it was said. When the first plant is in operation in Europe, Libbey-Owens machines will be manufacturing glass not only in Charleston but in Japan, Canada and Torrance, Cal.

Clarksburg.—To find homes for girls now in the Industrial Home for Girls at Industrial, Harrison county, and to follow them up after they leave the state home so that they will not become the prey of designing men, is the purpose of the Woman's Club of Clarksburg, especially since a recent address made to the club by J. Walter Barnes, treasurer of the state board of control. Mr. Barnes urged the members of the club to co-operate in every way with Miss Jennie Sutton, the superintendent of the school. Miss Sutton reports that the average daily number of girls in the home during 1920 is 99 and that the per capita cost of maintaining these girls is $2.40.

Charleston.—The grand total cash balance, all funds, at end of December in the state treasury, amounted to $1,299,980.56, according to the monthly report of State Treasurer W. S. Johnson. The amount of the school fund invested was $989,160; of the workmen's compensation fund invested, $8,566,500. The grand total balance, including investments was $10,855,580.56. In the state fund, general revenue, the cash at the beginning of the month was $194,306.70 overdrawn; cash receipts during month were $518,070.11; total, $323,763.41; cash disbursements during month, $375,205.36; cash balance at end of month, $51,441.95 overdrawn.

Charleston.—Last year 47 West Virginia farmers entered a farm egg-laying contest. They were not the owners of "sure-enough" poultry farms, but just the owners of average farms where general farming is the rule. These farmers "demonstrated" to all poultry flock owners that there is money in raising chickens under the usual conditions and reasonable care. As interest on investment and returns for labor, these farms received $18,000 during the year, after paying for feed. When it is considered that these farms did not average 100 hens, the size of these returns becomes more impressive. Many general farms in the Mountain State do not make a cash return each year as large as did the poultry flocks alone.

ROYAL DRUG STORES
Marlinton, W. Va. Renick, W. Va.

Charleston.—Speeders are having a lot of trouble these days with the police department, for the police have started out to round them up, one and all. This is the result of orders from Mayor Hall and Chief Charmock of the police department, that a strict watch be kept for speeders and that the city ordinance against same be enforced to the letter. More than the usual arrest of these offenders have been made by the police during the past few days, and the orders of the mayor and chief of police have been issued to suppress this dangerous pastime.

Charleston.—Assistant City Clerk J. O. Summers has compiled the police income during the year from January 5, 1920, to January 3, 1921, and states that the total amount of cases in police court was 4,715, netted an income of $16,017.98, most of this resulting from fines and forfeitures. "Many business concerns are kicking at the success they had during the year just past," said Clerk Summers, "but we have no cause to kick over here. The visitors in our shrine have been mighty good to us, and we appreciate it. Here's hoping we have a bountiful year in 1921."

Parkersburg.—County Assessor E. E. Florence has returned from Charleston, where he attended the meeting of the West Virginia Assessors' Association, which was in session there, and which was addressed by State Tax Commissioner Hallanan, Judge Simms, Senator Blessing and other officials, and all the problems of the assessors were discussed. The tax commissioner advocates a number of changes in the line of the work and believes a reassessment of the real estate of the state should be made. He will call another meeting of the assessors to be held at some date in March, when the plans proposed will be worked out.

Wheeling.—Rumors to the effect that Wheeling will seek to land the state capitol are unfounded, according to officials of the Chamber of Commerce and local members of the legislature. While business men stand ready to donate a large sum of money to bring the capitol back here, they feel that geographical location practically precludes all possibility of Wheeling receiving favorable consideration, except from a few northern counties. Consequently, there will be no fight made when the legislature convenes. It is known that several members of the House, from Ohio and Marshall counties, are inclined to favor Parkersburg.

Moundsville.—One prisoner was killed, a tailor shop was set on fire, and the supply power for lights was disabled at the West Virginia penitentiary here by several prisoners who attempted to escape. The prisoner who was killed was on duty in the engine room. He was attacked by other convicts with knives, who entered the engine room and cut the belt of a gas engine. Warden Terrell announced that one prisoner, a man serving a life term, had escaped during the trouble. Henry Lucas, a prisoner from Kanawha county, is the dead man. Henry McCray, who was working with Lucas when the attack occurred, suffered several cuts, but will recover.

Charleston.—A writ of error and supersedeas was granted the defendant in the case of the state against Toney Stafford by the supreme court of appeals. Stafford had been indicted and convicted in Raleigh county for complicity in attempted murder, by helping to shoot up the Glen White coal mines at Glen White. Attorneys in the case are directed to appear before the supreme court of appeals for a complete rehearing of the case. Stafford, who had been sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary for the part he is alleged to have taken in the affair, petitioned the supreme court through his attorney, C. M. Ward, who presented 14 reasons why the case should be reheard.

VOL. XXXVIIII NO 22 — MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA; FEBRUARY 10, 1921 — $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

A SERMON

By Rev. B. F. Donley,

Text: Mathew 22: 21, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's.

Subject: "Christ as Citizen."

What is a Citizen?

In defining the word we would say a citizen. as opposed to a policeman or a soldier, losely and the way one is generally spoken of is an inhabitant of a country.

After we define the word in this way it is not so difficult for you to think of Jesus as a citizen, for he was an inhabitant of the country round about Jerusalem.

We can see that the kingdom of God is a Spiritual Commonwealth, embracing all who adopt certain principles and motives of life. The bonds which unite its members are likeness of character, kinship and spirit.

Very early in his ministry, however, we observe that Jesus intended the founding of a society or government, but not to compete with the government of and around Jerusalem, but to work in harmony with it, but it seemed to the Jews that he was very antagonistic. In the founding of this society he intended basing it upon the principles of the. Kingdom and that the members of this society should be held together, outwardly by the visible ties of fellowship, inwardly by the spiritual fellowship of the Father.

We can say that Christ's citizenship was of a two-fold character, that of a citizen of his own country and a citizen of the Kingdom of God.

Christ's Citizenship: 'It seems to me that we can recognize in the words of the text his recogition of citizenship: "Render therefore, unto Caesar the things that are Ceasar's."

Some seem to want to say and do say that Christ was not a citizen because he rebelled against Rome, he rebelled in his heart against, but by trying to teach them the principles of his society he had fond hopes of reclaiming and purifying them for his society and in that way he would make of them better citizens of Rome.

Today we have in our own country men and women who are radicals, yes, they are called citizens of the United State. The I. W. W. The Reds or Bolshevic, they have not only rebelled in their hearts but openly and yet we call them citizens and a good many of them are holding government positions and seemingly are supporters of our government but deep in their hearts they are not, they are not only traitors to our country but traitors to the church and christian religion.

If we were to visit China today we would find generally that the Chinese were Confuciasts, but if they want a good day or a lucky day for business, building a house or getting married he is a Taoist, but when it comes to sickness or death he is a Buddist.

This sort of a thing appears strange to us today who think that religion, morals and truth are almosl synomous, but wait a moment, do we not find these conditions existing around us every day. In business and social relations we find men worshiping the god of money, Mammou or Billikin the god of things that they are; these people who do this are believers in a naturalistic or scientific interpretation of life.

We might after being presented with the problems of citizenship regarding Christ there are three kinds: The scientific or Naturalists: The Romans were of this type and seems that there was but one realm of reality, that of the natural universe and that which they could not see and realize was out of this order.

We have this type of men in our country today. It seems that the contradictions are only seemingly and are questions of the mind and not national and that if the question of immediate happiness should present itself, which comes from the gratification of ones personal desires, rather than than the securing of the more remote happiness or the larger future good that would come from the present self denial; they would gratify the immediate happiness.

The Idealistic or the second class, and this country seems to be full of these, believes that every man has a purpose in life and plans for his work Some of them see back of the universe an intelligent purpose or ideal and that they are to reach it here on earth, but my purpose is not to discuss that ideal.

The Spiritualistic: Those of this type have two entirely distinct and independent orders of reality. The one is that we are born of nature and are governed by and live in a world with nature and the other is that we have kinship in the spiritual realm. We are surrounded by other human beings, all engaged in a struggle for existence, the physical advantage is measured by strength of body and cleverness of mind. This is only one side, the natural side, but there is another and a brighter, the Spiritual. Human beings have also kinship in spiritual realm. Just as the intelect is given us so that we may take advantage of sense preception, memory and reason, in struggle for existence, so the intuitive faculties are given to human beings to sense the immaterial and spiritual forces of love, friendship, faith. honor, and duty, that are all about us and to these human beings are susceptible. There is certainly something within us that responds or should respond to these forces that demand our allegiance that speaks of moral duty.

We have inner visions of something better than physical strength and mental cleverness. We feel that our highest interests are not with nature and that we have a moral right to rebel against it, and that life means more to us than mere natural existence.

Friends can we cast all this aside. Can we say because a person stands for these principles that he is not a citizen? That is just what we do when we say Christ is not a citizen.

I believe Christ was a citizen in his day and yes, of the highest type, altho he rebelled against Rome in his heart he tried to teach the true principles which would inspire to the highest ideals of citizenship.

He believed that the way to make a better world, was not by rebelling and one clan dominating anothor or one nation ruling over another, but by making them in heart better citizens and that to make them better citizens was to create within them a desire for pureness of life or in other words win them to his society and it would improve the world.

There seems to be a dispute as to the idea Jesus had in view in reference to this society which he founded. It was Jesus' idea in the first to found the church but he must first find people of receptive minds for his ideas and after the Jews rejected him he must turn to others.

The principle he put forth in this society would or should inspire one, or bring forth the highest that is within man. To become a member in this society one must first become interested in self, and self interest if it is true, naturally broadens out and you seek others. In this is where Jesus was ideally more than other citizens, because he tried to inspire them to true citizenship. His type of citizenship would stand out as prominent today as it did in his day because he stood for everything that was right. Some of his ideals seem to stand out so prominent and were so sudden that they were seemingly contradictions to the Jewish conceptions.

I believe that Jesus' conception was idealistic for three reasons: 1st. It appealed to self or caused one to become interested in self: 2nd. Caused one to become interested in others. 3rd. It caused or inspired us to become interested in the outside world and it became interested in us.

Can we see the ideal in this citizenship? Can we make this life, the life of Jesus appealing to the people?

We should appeal for that kind of citizenship, for today our society. our church, needs it, our nation needs it our community and our homes need it

It would make an ideal community. It would be bread for our churches.

It would be the means of happiness to the home, individual, and to the nation.

I believe that Christ is living today and is the best and highest type of citizen we have. But the question is will we recognize him? I believe that that is one of the troubles with us in our christian life today, we do not recognize Christ as a citizen.

I believe that the chief concern of Jesus' earthly ministry was the proclamation of the good news of his coming Kingom. I believe it is the duty of the church to proclaim the evangelistic message of the Master.

His plea is for us to become citizens as he, and citizens not only of our country but of the Kingdom of God.

We should give more time to the spiritual sides of our lives and we as his people should urge it.

Create within us a pure heart aud it would make a clean soul for the church and God would make or be the means of creating better citizen ot our country.

"Render, therefore, unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."

WILL OF REV. WM. T. PRICE, OF MARLINTON

This memorandum witnesseth, that I, Wm. T. Price, of the County of Pocahontas, State of West Virginia, being comparatively in good health, and in the unquestioned possession of my mental faculties, yet nevertheless conscious of the uncertainty of human life; do hereby make my last will and testamemt, subject to whatever changes, I may hereafter think proper to be made.

(1) I commit my soul, body, and spirit to the keeping of God, my Heavenly Father, through Jesus Christ, my last and only hope, by the Holy Spirit of promise.

(2) I devise to my beloved wife, Anna L. Price, all of my real estate during her natural life; in reference to my personal estate, it is my wish, it be converted into money, and the same be placed by my executors at interest, said interest to be at the service of my wife, her life time. I make this exception for any bond or evidence of anything due me from J. Woods Price, it is my wish that such a claim should not be pressed during his natural life. more than renewing the bond, unless he voluntarily consents or wishes to settle the claim during his lifetime.

(3) As to the division of my real estate at the decease of my wife, Mrs. A. L. Price, let it be as follows:

(a) The land in West Marlinton, contiguous to the residence lot, excepting what may be already to my sons, James and Andrew, or bequeathed to members of their families respectively, I bequeath to my son, Norman.

(b) The lot near the Bridge, I bequeath to my daughter, Mrs. Anna V. Hunter.

(c) The saw mill meadow tract, excepting the acre already conveyed to Norman R. Price, and one additional acre contiguous hereby bequeathed him; I hereby leave to my daughters Susan and Anna and my son, Calvin, in equal shares, share and share alike.

(d) The printing office lot, I bequeath to my sons, Calvin and Andrew, in equal shares.

(e) I bequeath to my son, Andrew the extension to the river of the lot already conveyed to my daughter-in-law, Mrs. Grace Price, along with one half of the wood house lot.

(f) I hereby bequeath to my daughter-in-law, Lura Price, the extension to the river of the lot conveyed to my son, James W. Price.

(g) The Jericho lands, I bequeath hereby to my six children; James, Andrew, Susan, Norman, Calvin, and Anna, in equal shares.

(h) As to whatever fund or personalty there may be at the decease of my wife, Mrs. Anna L. Price, let it be given to my six children, share and share alike. Let Mrs. A. L. Price, Andrew and Calvin and Norman Price, be named as the executors of the foregoing Will and Testament.

WITNESS my hand and seal this the 30th day of July, 1908.

WILLIAM T. PRICE (SEAL)

This memorandum witnesseth that this is the last will and testament of Wm. T. Price;

Oct. 24, 1911.

J. A. Sydenstricker, Witness.
J. W. Hill, Witness.

It is my wish that my daughter, Anna Virginia Hunter, should have my portion of the estate of J. Woods Price, for attention rendered him during the latter part of his life.

Wm. T. Price.

TUBERCULOSIS SANITARIUM

A colored tuberculosis sanitarium was provided for by the legislature at the special session in 1917. The site was selected by a committee of colored men, appointed by the governor in accordance with the provisionf of the act of the legislature, acting in conjunction with the state board of control. The site selected at Denmar, on the Greenbrier branch of the C. & O. Railroad in Pocahontas county, consists of 185 acres of tillable land, 2,200 feet above sea level. It was formerly used by a lumber company. There are about thirty buildings and the plant was put to use for sanitarium purposes during the war period, with little expense, when it would have been impossible to erect buildings at almost any cost. It is an ideal location, in good condition, well managed and is doing good work. One thing is lacking, however, and that is the number of patients expected. There are only about twenty, despite the fact the board of control has advertised the institution and written to prominent and public spirited citizens of the colored race in various parts of the state, calling their attention to the institution and its advantages.—Governor Cornwell's Message.

A. M. Tressel, Deputy Collector, will be at the following places on the dates mentioned, to assist any one desiring it in making out his Income Tax Return for the year 1920.

Bluefield.—Fire caused by a defective flue caused the destruction of the commissary department of the Peerless Coal and Coke Company at Vivian. The loss will reach $65,000.

Huntington.—A fallen trolley wire set fire to a Huntington-Ashland car and passengers hurried out of it, huddled in a raging storm and waited for a relief car to be sent to them.

Huntington.—No change is noted in the condition of three-year-old Thomas Doss, afflicted with sleeping sickness for two weeks. Physicians believe the child will sleep two more weeks.

Bluefield.—Myrtle Chapman, held in connection with the death of Hoge Woodyard, has confessed to the shooting, police say. Jealousy of the man who she says ruined her life was given as the cause of the shooting.

Charleston.—The body of Joseph Myers was found with a bullet hole in the eye here, in his small grocery store at Kanawha City, Charleston suburb. His clothing had been rifled and no money could be found in the establishment. County detectives, following a robbery theory, are hunting for suspects they say are known to have been in the vicinity.

Charleston.—Claiming to be real estate men and wanting to sell a piece of property worth $10,000 to Steve Crist, who runs a hot dog stand on Court street, three men in a red automobile took Crist out into MacFarlane street and holding him up at the point of guns took from his the sum of $4,000 in cash which he had recently drawn from a local bank. and made good their escape. Police headquarters were notified by the bank and Lieutenant W. A. Truly started an investigation.

Piedmont.—The trapping of a 288-pound black bear at Henry, W. Va., on the Western Maryland railway, south of here, broke up a service held in a church nearby. The bear had been carrying off pigs, calves and sheep, and Arnald Stahl set a trap. En route to church with friends Stahl stopped to look at his trap to find a bear standing nearly six feet high. Revolver shots only infuriated the animal, which became frenzied. Several well-directed shots from a rifle ended him. In the meantime, several hundred people, who had assembled for church, were attracted to the scene. The meat was divided among members of the hunting party and friends.

Charleston.—The recording of 6,000 real estate transfers in the assessor's office as a basis for the coming tax assessment has imposed so much work on the force that it is a question if the work can be finished by April 1, unless assistance is given by the makers of the transfers. The assessor is asking that all makers of deeds since April 1, 1920, will call at the office in the county court building and lend some assistance as to the description of the property to be transferred. Such assistance, says the assessor, will obviate the necessity of making a complete abstract of the property and facilitate the work of the office.

Charleston.—In co-operation with the State Commissioner of Agriculture, J. H. Stewart, the United States Bureau of Stock Estimates gives an estimated production of 22,100,000 bushels of corn; 7,000,000 bushels of apples, of which 1,670,000 barrels (of 3 bushels each) was the commercial crop; 4,250,000 bushels of wheat; 5,400,000 bushels of oats; 6,840,000 bushels of Irish potatoes; 10,400,000 pounds of tobacco and 1,010,000 tons of hay. According to the detailed estimates of the more important crops there was an increased production over 1919 in oats, potatoes, sweet potatoes, sorghum, soy beans, apples, peaches and pears. There was a less production than 1919 of tobacco, wheat, buckwheat, rye, hay, beans, maple sugar and syrup. The production of corn and cowpeas was the same in both years.

Huntington.—Charged with a systematic robbery of United States mails Lowell William Black, aged 41, postoffice truck driver, is said to have admitted to United States authorities that he has stolen merchandise valued at several hundred dollars. Black was arrested on a warrant sworn out by B. L. Pitcher, postoffice inspector who also swore out a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Alice Smith, 26. Pitcher declared he had recovered approximately $500 worth of merchandise from the woman's home at 825½ Third avenue.

SEEING DIXIE LAND FROM AUTO

EXTRACTS FROM NOTE BOOK

BY D. L. BARLOW

On Thursday night October 28th we camped with a southern gentleman who lives about fourteen miles north of Atlanta. This man when asked if he had charge of the beautiful grove near his house said, "Drive in and make yourself at home, and stay as long as you wish." It was too cold to talk to our friend that night and the next morning we were off so early that we failed to get his name. Two parties, one from Michigan, the other from Indiana, camped with us here.

On Friday October 29th, we visited Atlanta, a city of 200,000 and some times called the "Gate City." It is located on a ridge which divides the watershed of the Atlantic from that of the Gulf of Mexico. Seven miles southeast of the town you will find Chattahoochee River.

Atlanta is the capitol of Georgia and the capitol building was finished more than thirty years ago at a cost $1,000,000. The exterior is lime stone and the interior is finished with Georgia marble.

During the Civil War Atlanta was a confederate supply base and Gen. Sherman compared the city to the wrist of the hand whose five fingers reached the five principal Gulf and Atlantic points. The Confederates held the city until September, 1864. when they evacuated it at the end of a 42 day seige and bombardment by Sherman. It was reported that Sherman's loss in this campaign against Hood was very heavy.

In November 1864 the city was burned by Sherman's orders on the departure of the Federal troops, but after the war it was quickly rebuilt and grew rapidly and today is one of the leading cities of the South.

Here we find the statue of our hero Henry W. Grady whom we have mentioned elsewhere. Mr. Grady, according to my judgment, has not been surpassed by any American. He was called from this life in the bloom of early manhood, but left us such a fine example of citizenship, and so many golden thoughts that we know he lived not in vain. Upon his monument we find the following beautiful thought, "The citizen stands in the doorway of his home contented on his threshold—his family gathered about his hearth stone, while the evening of a well spent day closed in scenes and sounds of that are dearest. We shall save the republic when the drum tap is futile and the barracks are exhausted."

In the evening we drove to Smearr's Station, a distance of about 75 miles from Atlanta. This was a fine drive over fairly good road and we noticed many good towns.

During this evening's drive there came to my mind a little story of the civil war, which my father often told me. He said that near the beginning of the war six Georgia soldiers came to his home. They were so clever and genteel that my father took a great "liking" to them and they became very fond of my father and grandfather who at that time was very old. When they left they gave my grandfather an old army musket and a Methodist hymn book upon the fly leaf of which each soldier wrote his name. I have often read these names but cannot now call them to mind. Many a fine Christmas morning at about two o'clock we boys have called from sleep the citizens of Onoto vicinity by firing the old musket. We generally loaded it to the bursting point, that is the hammer would be blown back ready for the next time.

The only time I ever knew my father to go hunting, he took this gun. Dr. Carter, my father and some others went to Williams River for the purpose of killing a deer. They put my father on the best stand as all were anxious that he have the first shot. So far as I know the old musket was loaded with pot legs, old pieces of plow points and chains. My father heard the dogs coming and the deer was making for his stand. He began to get cold and nervous. On came the deer and I imagine it would heve been safe had not France McCoy come up at this time. My father persuaded Mr. McCoy to fire the old Confedertte musket. Only a part of the deer was found. Mr. McCoy was at thet time in the prime of life and a giant in strength. He will tell you if you ask him that no inexperienced hunter or boy had any business firing the old musket.

Friday night we camped wtih Mrs. R. D. Maddux, of Smarrs Station, Ga. This was as fine a camping place as one could wish. Mrs. Maddux was more than clever and my wife says she was a real lady. Her house and surrounding were spotless.

Saturday morning we started for Macon which we found to be a beautiful city of perhaps more than 65,000 inhabitants. James Oglethrope, the founder of Georgia was one of the earliest visitors (1739) to Macon. In 1775 Gen. Oglethrope was offered in America the command of the British army, which he refused.

This city was named for Nathaniel Macon, who when a student at Princeton University, volunteered as a private to fight in the Revolution. He is one man who never sought for himself or family promotion before service. Let the good citizens of America pray that we may have more men like him. There are too many 2 by twice men and boys who want the honor and pay but never think of giving service.

Macon is situated on both sides of the Ocmulgee river and has steam boat connection with Savannah and other points. The power to operate street cars as well as for industrial plants is furnished by a plant costing many millions and located more than thirty miles up the Ocmulgee River. One of the country's most extensive R. R. shops and round houses is located here and the passenger station is said to be the finest south of Washington.

Macon is the meeting point of the Dixie and National Highways and the roads in a radius of a hundred miles are said to be among the best.

In the school line we find the Baptist, Methodist and Catholic Universities, as well as a business college and a normal school for colored women. Georgia Academy for the blind located here is a credit to any state.

We were a little too late in making our trip through here for Macon is located in the famous peach growing district of Georgia. The largest peach orchard in the world is near the city. We drove by thousands of fine looking trees. My mouth watered as I thought of now much better they looked a few weeks before and I could not help but say the words of the great and immortal poet;

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these, it might have been."

We might have been earlier.

Macon has a $1,000,000 packing plant, also a canning factory to help take care of the fruit and truck which grows in this aection.

I have not time now nor space to tell you of the beautiful homes and the monument erected by the Ladies Memorial Association of the city, but must be off to make up for lost time.

The evening sun was bright, the the sky blue and the road good and old "Sal" soon clipped off 85 miles. It being Saturday we stopped early with Mrs. L. A. Wilkes of Forest Glenn, Georgia. This lady has been suffering for some time with malaria. She is fond of reading and may some time read what I am now writing in my note book. If she only knew the nice things my wife said about her, she would know that somewhere on this continent there is a little woman who remembers her for her kindness.

Sunday morning looked so much like rain that we concluded after some discussion to travel, but we had a hard time to get gasoline as the stores and gasoline stations are all closed on the Sabbath in this country. But I feel that we were paid for traveling because it gave us an opportunity to learn something about church attendance in southern Georgia. To our surprise we found large attendance. At one country church we counted twenty-two mule teams hitched in lot at one side of church. This would be an ideal place for George Auldridge. There were also a number of automobiles. A short run from here they were to all appearance having "dinner on the ground." Lee Carter would not object to being here. There were too many teams and automobiles to count at this place. I was sorry that we had ate our dinner or we would have stopped and had a southern dinner which I know was worth while.

At Ocilla, as we drove by a monument in center of street I caught from a hasty reading of the inscription the following sentiment: You can tell their story as you may, you can sing their praises as you will, but the story and the song of the bravery and glory of the boys who wore the gray will remain untold and unsung.

The above is not a quotation as I only caught the thought that is universal in these parts when when the Confederate soldier is the subject under consideration.

Here we also met a real officer and I would say to my friends, should they ever visit this town, stop and shake hands with Chief of Police Brown. He may be a northern man so far as I know, but somewhere about his person he has a southern heart.

We made a short stop at Douglas which was named for Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, a distinguished antebelum democrat and a candidate for president in 1860.

Sunday night we camped with Mr. F. C. Beaty, near Waycross, Georgia. Mr. Beaty's father was a Confederate soldier. He is now ninety years of age. He has a neighbor who was also a Confederate soldier and is now past ninety-six years young. So I began to feel I am nearing the fountain of youth which De Leon sought but never found.

Monday morning November 1st we drove into Waycross, where before the Spanish adventurer came, it was the custom of the primitive Indian inhabitants to place in the wood and clay hut a part of their harvest and hunt for the use of chief and guests.

Before leaving for Jacksonsville, Florida, we spent some time in this city, getting reports of road conditions &c. Here a gentleman met me on the street and seeing that I was a long way from home and friendless, he sought to console me by saying. "Be sure you are ready before you start out from here. See that your car is all right and that you have plenty of gas and oil. The road cannot be described. My car is out fourteen miles and broke down. I am back for repairs and a chauffeur. I cannot drive that road."

We at last began the eighty miles journey to Jacksonsville with a heavy heart and a light pocket book.

FARMERS MEETING

The meeting of the Pocahontas Farm Bureau at Marlinton on Saturday afternoon was a record breaker in point of attendance, at least. Representative farmers from Greenbank, Edray, and Levels Districts to the number of fifty or sixty were present.

The Bureau was reorganized by the election of Henry W. Beard, president, W. L. Price, secretary, and J. A. Young, treasurer. Vice presidents, G. V. Hannah, Greenbank, J. R. Hevener, Edray; Sherman Gibson Huntersville and C. W. Kinnison, Levels.

The new county agent, W. C. Stokoe was present and made a most favorable impression. In outlining his work and the work of the Farm Bureau, Mr. Stokoe said that a thing to be guarded against was an attempt to do too many things, and do all of them poorly. He realized that this was primarily a stock raising county and the first thing to be stressed was the substitution of pure bred sires for the scrubs. He also wished to see a Hereford Breeders Association organized immediately, and hoped that the Shorthorn Breeders of the county would become members of the Greenbrier Valley Short Horn Association which has headquarters at Lewisburg. Any farmer with two or more registered females would be eligible for membership of these associations. As for sheep. Pocahontas holds first or second place in the counties of the State in the number of sheep raised, and the important thing in the sheep industry was the elimination of the scrub ram.

Mr. Stokoe had been informed by the experts at the University that Pocahontas was a natural potato country, and from his observations he believed it to be the case. In order to command a market, the growers must confine themselves to not more than two standard varieties, grown from good seed. The practical way to secure the seed is to have it grown by some of the farmers of the county, who have already made a specialty of potato culture. The marketing problem solves itself for a standard product in sufficient quantity.

From what he had seen in the short time he has been here, and from information, Mr. Stokoe is of the opinion that the lack of lime is limiting the production of our soils.

The important thing of the Farm Bureau is the work of the Boys and Girls Clubs. The salvation of the farm and country is in their hands. The Club work fits them for community leaders.

The membership fee for the period ending July 1, 1922, was fixed at $3. A part of this goes to the State Farm Bureau and a part to the National Farm Bureau. The National Organization is now composed of a membership of millions of the forward looking farmers of the United States, and with the backing of the farmers generally it will accomplish much for our first and greatest industry, farming.

It was decided to organize fifteen or more farm clubs as soon as the County Agent can make the rounds and be present at the organization of them. The Marlinton club will be composed of the farmers of Marlinton Thorny Creek and the two Buckeye voting precincts. Other clubs at Edray, Lenwood and Cloverlick, Bartow, Hosterman, Cass, Greenbank and Dunmore; Frost. Minnehaha Springs and Hunterville; Hillsboro, Lobelia and Beard.

Cooperative buying, as regards fertilizer and seeds, will save the price of annual dues many times over. The advice is to delay ordering fertilizer as long as possible as the price has a downward tendency. Already the State Organization has secured a reduction of nearly three dollars on the ton from the earlier quotations, and it hopes to be able to get a still better price. The fertilizer business will be handled through the local farm clubs. Among the farmers present at the meeting last Saturday were J. B. Buckley, Edgar Smith, J. D. Gay, B. B. Williams, Marcellus Dorman, J. R. Hevener, W. E. Wallace, E. F. McLaughlin, N. M. McCoy, Jacob Ogar, N. T. Hollansworth, Levi Gay Henry Beard, J. O. Mann, W. L. Price, W. R. Sutton, T. S. McNeel, P. T. Ward, Hubert Echols, J. O. Auldridge, Calvin W. Price, Porter Kellison, Frank Arbogast, G. V. Hannah, Walter Arbogast, Neal Nottingham, Henry McNeel. Ligon Coyner, Joel Beard, G P Baxter, G W Mann, C W Kinnison, W E Poage, J A Young, H W Harper, Arden Killingsworth, C C Baxter, Levi Baxter, C J Ramsey, T E Walker, Clarence Barlow, Ellis McCarty, J P Sharp, Mathew Beard, Guy Kinnison, and Mr. Hendricks.

DESPERATE HOMICIDE

Jumbo, a Big Italian Kills James Persi at Cass

James Persi one of our most valued Italian citizens came to his death at Cass last Thursday by a pistol shot from the hands of Nazzareno Cincilla, an Italian laborer. Persi has been contracting for A. D Neill & Son Co., at Clover Lick, building railroad. He was one of the most successful contractors in the business and had a good deal to do with the Italian labor He had just finished one contract and was figuring on another, and went to his home at Deer Creek. His family consisted of his wife, who was a West Virginia girl and four small children. On Thursday evening Persi walked to Cass to visit Marco Archangelo, a countryman, when the Italian with the difficult name, whose nickname is Jumbo, so called because of his great size, entered the house and made a demand on Persi of some kind, the exact nature of which is not known, but is believed to be something that Persi resisted, for the men got into a struggle at once, and Persi, who was a very strong man himself forced the intruder to the door of the house. Jumbo got a knife first but that was taken away from him, and he quickly drew a revolver and shot Persi through the stomach from which wound Persi died the next day at the Marlinton Hospital.

By this time the man Jumbo was outside the house and he shot at three Italians walking by the house getting Sozio Rea through the leg.

Jumbo got away and ran to the river and threw his pistol in the water and the next morning ate his breakfast at a place on the North Fork of Anthonys Creek, 35 miles as the crow flies, and then continued his flight but the fate of the killer was on him and walking in the forest without a guide by night he was back at Cass, from whence he had started. It is quite possible that he walked over a hundred miles in twenty-four hours. Anyway he was scratched and bruised and his feet are still so swollen that he can not stand on them. He came into the boiler room Friday night and was captured without difficulty.

Jumbo had worked in this county some years ago, but went away. He had been back two or three days coming from Williamsport, Pennsylvania. He was poorly dressed and evidently not been prospering lately. Prosecuting Attorney Edgar has been busy getting the case against him ready. P. T Ward will appear for the prisoner.

The prisoner was committed to jail without bail.

HONOR ROLL: Laurel Hill School Bessie Workman, Teacher, 1st month —Clarence Cochran, Benny Workman, Johnny Cochran, Ralph Taylor, Daisy, Dolly, and Mary Cochran, Lottie Taylor.

Second month,—Clarence Cochran.

Third month,—Clarence Cochran, Brown Cochran, Roy Cochran, Nellie Cochran, Mary Cochran.

The wrestling match between French Moore and J. E. Baker on Tuesday afternoon at the Imperial Theatre resulted in a tie—one fall each.

Next Tuesday, February 22, is Washington's birthday, and a legal holiday. The city mail carriers have the day off.

An Austrian woman was perhaps fatally burned at Cass Tuesday. Her clothes caught on fire while she was cooking. She was brought to the Marlinton Hospital on the afternoon train.

A large crowd attended the sale of the Curry livery outfit at Marlinton Tuesday, and a very successful sale resulted.

Mrs. Anna J. Gum was at Greenbank from Thursday with her stepmother, Mrs Rachel Sheets, who recently suffered a stroke of paralysis and is in a very serious condition.

FARMERS' MEETINGS

Meetings have been arranged as follows in accordance with the action taken at the meeting held in Marlinton last Saturday—

Feb. 17, Thursday, Edray, 7-30 p.m.
" 18, Friday, Beard, 2 pm
" 19, Saturday, Marlinton, 1-30
" 21, Monday, Huntersville, 7-30
" 22, Tuesday, Minnehaha, 2-00
" 22, Tuesday, Frost, 7-30
" 23, Wednesday, Dunmore, 2-00
" 23, Wednesday, Greenbank, 7 30
" 24, Thursday, Bartow, 1-30
" 24, Thursday, Hosterman, 7-30
" 25, Friday, Cass, 2 00
" 25, Friday, Cloverlick, 7-30
" 28, Monday, Lobelia, 2-00
" 28, Monday, Hillsboro, 7-30

Date for Linwood meeting to be fixed later.

The reason for these meetings is to organize all parts of the county for the purchasing of fertilizer and other farm supplies, and eventually to market farm products. Also to enable the people of the county to work together on their community problems.

In order to accomplish much of importance it is necessary to, first, decide what to do; plan to do it, and then do it. Each community will be given a chance to lay out their program as they would like to have it carried out.

One community might decide that they need a cooperative lime crusher; another, that they will replace a number of scrub sires by registered animals with good backing; a third, decide to find out the kind of corn best adapted to their locality; another that it is necessary to make a special effort to improve their sheep. Others, no doubt, will decide that they need some good, live active boys and girls clubs, and so on.

If every community would replace a certain number of scrub bulls with purebred ones, is there another thing that would bring a greater financial return to the county?

Be thinking about the things that need doing in your community, and come to your meeting ready to adopt a good strong program of work.

W. C. STOKOE, Co. Agent.

DEER CREEK VALLEY

Plowing and getting ready to make sugar is the order of the day.

W. C. Stokoe, the new county agent, was here last week shaking hands and getting acquainted with the people.

Joe Sheets and family, of Hinton, are here visiting home folks.

Mrs. Martin Judy, who has been on the sick list, is improving under the care of Dr. L. H. Moomau.

Mr. and Mrs Randolph Galford are building a new house on their farm. They rented their house and farm to Ham Burns last spring and moved to Cass. We welcome Mr. and Mrs. Galford back to the valley.

Our good roads Supt. L O Beard, has about finished putting gravel on the road from Dunmore Class A road to the J. H. Rider farm which makes it nice traveling for the Fords.

W. W. Arbogast made a business trip to Marlinton last week.

The sound of the tractor with the three gang plow is heard and seen running at the Siple Farm.

Jim Belcher, the big democrat, is running the school truck from Cass to the Greenbank High school, which gives the children in the valley a chance to attend the good school.

F. H. Warwick is doing quite a lot of brush cutting and clearing on his farm this winter.

Charlie Malcom is doing a good business in his store at Greenbank.

Willie Sheets is working with the night crew on the W. Va. Pulp & Paper Co's. big mill in Cass.

Uncle Jim Sutton, of Arbovale, still makes his two trips a week to Cass. He will buy anything that you have to sell that you can eat or drink, except old hen or moonshine.

Peter Warwick is staying at Cass this winter with his son Jesse.

J. R. Gum, of Greenbank, has about finished a fine new dwelling house.

W. A. Gladwell, who drives the coal wagon from Greenbank to Cass, came along the other day and stopped and said "Hello." We are always glad to see Uncle Bill.

Frank Young at the Siple Farm, is feeding this winter for the W. Va. Pulp & Paper Co., 103 head of cattle of which 95 are calves. These calves were bred from registered Shorthorns and Pole Angus bulls, and we expect they are the best bunch of calves in the county.

OBITUARY

Orlange Loman Sutton, only son and child of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. B. Sutton, near Green Bank, W. Va., died in Hinton Hospital, February 12, 1921. Age 17 years, 1 month and 13 days.

His illness extended over a period of nearly four weeks, and death was due to blood poisoning with complications.

Standing on the threshold of life the summons came to him, and he met it courageously and fearlessly expressing his readiness to go. He united with the M. E. Church, South in 1917. The burial services were held in Wesley Chapel Church near his home, where he held his membership, conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. W. Rosenberger, assisted by Rev. D. McD. Monroe, of the Presbyterian Church. The services were largely attended by loved ones, friends of the neighborhood, and a large number of the high school students.

He was in the third year of his high school course, was a good student, loved by faculty and student body generally, to whom he was devoted and eagerly asked for their presence during his illness.

He was a devoted son to his parents, and only our Heavenly Father knows their sore bereavement, but they are sustained and stayed by the blessed hope and certanity of a happy reuniting some day. Walking in the pathway that ever leads upward they will come at last to a Mansion in the City of the King, where loved ones are.

In this sad hour there goes out to these parents the tenderest sympathy from many a heart.

Another volume of the Book of Life has been closed, not many chapters written, but we believe to be completed in letters that are eternal.

HILLSBORO

Our school is getting along finely we think. Our semester examinations are over and a very good showing was made by the pupils but we expect to do better the coming semester.

Our last lyceum number was a grand success. Mr. S. Platt Jones, humorous lecturer and entertainer. The entertainment was enjoyed by all. Our next entertainment comes about the 22nd of March. It will be a lecture and we feel sure that if people know the treat that is in store for them they will not let such an opportunity pass. On Thursday we expect with us Mr. Carl Jones. This also we believe to be a treat for our community.

We are having very good basket ball this year. Our team has played four games, and has won one. However we are just starting out and we believe we cen warm up some of our opponents who beat us when they return the games You know even a cur dog will try to lick a husky that has chased him home, when he gets to his own yard. That's the way with us, we feel confident on our home floor.

Miss Sadie Rexrode, originally from Monterey, Virginia, died at Mrowa, Africa, while undergoing an operation for gall stones. She was a missionary of the M. E. Church and a most estimable lady.

J. L. Baxter is building an addition to the Baxter Garage to be used as a stock room.

Organ Wanted

A small Cabinet Organ is wanted for the Primary Department of the Presbyterian Sunday School at Marlinton. Organ Committee Presbyterian Sunday School.

C. W. Price, Supt.

LINWOOD

The fine cattle roam over the hills and meadows of the big stock farms like it was summer time. Eugene Gatewood, C. C. Beal. Dunlap Bros. and Russell Hannah all have fine herds.

We have had several cases of flu, but in a mild form.

The Linwood school taught by Mrs. R. F. Yeager is crowded to its utmost capacity and pupils have been turned away because there is not room for any more seats. We can get the seats but we can not enlarge the building. The school house was burned a few years ago, caused by a defective flue. A temporary building was put up with a view to build a two room school house later. The board of trustees condemned the school house and next year they hope to have a large two room building that will accommodate all the young people who want to attend school at Linwood.

The Slatyfork correspondent is mistaken in regard to little Miss Opal Beal attending school on Elk We learn through Mrs. Yeager that she is on the honor roll of the Linwood school, having neither been absent nor tardy since school opened in December. Others on the honor roll are Elizabeth Moore Dunlap, Mary Warwick Dunlap, Gatewood Dunlap, Winnie, Louise, and Donald Vandevander, Clyde and Elbert Galford, and Norman Beal. Had it not been for the flu the attendance would have been almost perfect. The per cent of attendance for the first month was 94. Those who were sick were nonmembers for a week. The second month will not close until the 19th of this month. A Victrola has been ordered for the school. Some steps taken to have visual instruction but the building is not large enough. Washington's and Lincoln's birthday will be observed with appropriate exercises in the Linwood school.

The largest amount given by any school for the Near East Relief, was given by the Slaty Fork school under the management of Mrs. R. F. Yeager who taught there for a while. She resigned on account of the long distance to walk from her boarding house which she says was an ideal one, having all the modern conveniences of a city home. It was the fine home of L. D. Sharp.

The amount given at the Slaty Fork supper was $143.15. The good people of Laurel Branch helped. And many thanks to the young men employed by that big lumber company who contributed so generously. At their request the hour for the supper to begin was 8 p. m. Promptly at hour a fine looking company of young men filled the large school building. The good people of Slaty Fork know how to make the good things to tempt the appetite.

BUCKEYE

The sick in this part are better.

Feed is plenty and stock is wintering well.

George McKeever has secured a job of logging from W. McClintic.

Some preparations for sugar making.

"There was a man in our town
Who thinks he's wondrous wise,
He jumped into a bramble bush,
And scratched out both his eyes."

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Jas B. Sutton wish to assure the people of their neighborhood, Green Bank and elsewhere of their deepest appreciation and heartfelt thanks for their many kindnesses and sympathy during the illness and death of their son, Orlange Loman Sutton.

Young Women — Trained Nursing

There is nothing better for a young woman than to be a trained nurse. Trained nurses have better health, better pay and better social opportunities than stenographers, teachers and similar professions.

The demand for trained nurses is great—Doctors, school boards, boards of health, the Army, the Navy, all are calling for nurses.

You can get high class training at this hospital without any out side financial aid. For further information write to

SEEING DIXIE LAND FROM AUTO

EXTRACTS FROM NOTEBOOK

Sixty-eight miles of the Waycross was sandy—in many places so deep that the car axle drug. We pressed on, feeling that "The way of the cross leads home." Notwithstanding the terrible road old "Sal" was in her stall from one to two hours before those who started with us pulled through. We were able to run on high gear most all the way and therefore did not have to stop to cool engine. We passed many broken cars and many who had stopped to cool.

At Hilliard, Florida, we made inquiries about Dr. Eskridge's family. The gentleman of whom we inquired spoke in the highest terms of these good people. I will never forget the Eskridges. When I was a school boy the Dr. took me in his home at Hillsboro and nursed me through the measles. Guss was one of my nurses when I had pneumonia. The Dr. has been called to his reward and I remember him as a kind hearted man—a good old time citizen who was an honor to any community.

Monday night we camped with Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Pickett, of Dinsmore, Florida. These are very old people but kinder hearted old souls never lived. Their fine home burned last June, but since then they have built a new home and are again pleasantly situated.

Here we had with us two New York parties. The big man in the bunch is a democrat but said he was doing his part as he had with him three republicans. (Later from returns these were the only ones who failed to vote.)

It might be well enough to note that Dinsmore is but a few miles out of Jacksonsville and it was once a hunting grounds of the Seminole Indians who before the destruction of their settlement in 1812, lived in comfort, wealthy in cattle and horses.

According to a report made by a tourist at one of the campfire meetings the Indians must have had better stock than you will find here now. He said he found a fresh killed razo. back hog in the road and as he did not like to see anything go to waste he proceeded to render the hog. When he had finished he had one half pint of lard and three quarters of turpentine.

Tuesday morning November 2nd we drove into Jacksonsville. This city, founded in 1822, named for Gen. Andrew Jackson. It has a population of over 100,000, is situated on west bank and a few miles from the mouth of St. Johns River which is navigable for 200 miles above the city. This city is called the gateway to Florida and is one of the world's greatest orange markets. It is the state's largest city as well as its commercial center. Jacksonsville is the site of a Confederate soldier's home. In the evening we left this city for St. Augustine which is about forty miles south of Jacksonsville. Here we spent some time looking over the most ancient town in the United States as well as the most picturesque and interesting. In 1512 Ponce de Leon in search for the fountain of youth landed near the present site of this city. However the town was not founded until 1565, which is a year after a colony of French Hugenots settled at the mouth of the St. Johns River. The king of Spain did not want a protestant colony in his domains and sens Menendey to exterminate the invaders, Menendey landed in 1565 and began the building of the fort of St. Augustin

As I walked through and over this fort, and stood for sometime on top of it viewing the surrounding scenes, I could not help but meditate upon the things that occurred here since its beginning 1565 until 1811 when United States seized the Fort together with Florida. This was the year before our second war with Great Britain. Great Britain had possession of St. Augustine from 1763 to 1793 and made it a military depot during the Revolution at the close of which it again became a Spanish possession and was finally ceded to the United States in 1821.

I understand this fort was originally called Fort San Marco but the United States has named it Fort Marion in honor of Gen. Marion the swamp fox of Revolutionary fame. The Fort was 100 years in building and like some of the old Spanish buildings still standing in St. Augustine, is built of concrete made of broken shell lime. This material is called cognina.

The Fort is open to visitors. I shall not forget some of the things I noticed here, but shall only name the following: A churn 136 years old; a spining wheel 203 years old. This wheel is from the island of Minorca; suit of armor used in the time of De Leon; wooden brace used in St. Augustine over 100 years ago. Lantern from the oldest house in America supposed to be over 225 years old. Bones of a murderer hung in a cage near the city gates; bones of a woman found under the ruins of the old Spanish light house.

Of particular interest to us is the chapel and dungeon where three Indian chiefs were confined, two of whom refused to eat until they became so thin that they succeeded in crawling through the bars and by dropping about thirty feet to the ground gained their liberty. One of the Indians broke his leg in the jump and the other carried his crippled companion away on the back of mule. Neither of these Indians was ever heard from again. The third chief refused to go and was afterward taken to the state of Georgia where he died of a broken heart.

In the evening we made a short stop at Hastings, which is located in the famous potato belt of Florida. Here in the spring of the year negro men and women from all parts of the state gather for the purpose of digging potatoes. "Murphy's Carnival" is a term applied to this gathering of potato diggers. You may bet they make merry while working in the fields and the evenings are given over to banjo "picking," singing and a general good time.

Tuesday we camped with Mr. Fred A. Rich, of Bunnell. Mr. Rich is a Missourian and is more than clever. After supper Mr. Rich suggested that I ride over with him to the telegraph office and get the election returns. We were not long in learning that the world had gone republican.

Wednesday November 3rd, we drove into Daytona, an Atlantic coast town. The original town site was a forest of live oaks, palmettos, oleanders and magnolias. The fine road leading to and from this place is bordered by the deep evergreen forests which are hung with festoons of beautiful Spanish moss. In many places so dense is the forest that the road has the appearance of a tunnel;

Daytona is a beautiful town. It was founded in 1870 and unique in that its inhabitants consist not so much of those who come to Florida for the winter, as it does of those who live in Florida and go north for the summer.

In the evening we drove twenty-four miles over a beautiful road and spent the night at De Land. Along this fine drive we saw our first real orange grove loaded with fruit. De Land claims to be a garden spot for oranges. The first settlement was made here during the British occupancy of Florida. De Land was burned by the Seminole Indians in 1835. It is located on high ground, has a few lakes nearby, and is surrounded by beautiful scenery. Stetson University is located here and we find many good churches. Many visitors make this town their winter home on account of the excellent educational and church advantages.

The auto tourist here finds a beautiful camping park, and the city furnishes free water, light, rest rooms, etc. A short distance from here you will find De Leon Spring. This spring throws out 80,000 gallons of water a minute and is excellent for bathing purposes.

Thursday November 4th we left De Land for Cleremont and passed through the following towns: Orange City, noted for its pure water; Sanford, named after Gen. Sanford who was President Lincoln's secretary and once minister to Belgium. Sanford is located on Lake Monroe. A gread deal of truck is produced in this section. Large fields of celery can be seen from the highway and this alone is of much interest to visitors.

Altamont Springs is noted for its famous spring of pure water and the town is well surrounded by tall pines and orange groves.

Winter Park, located in the midst clear water lakes and is noted for its winter song birds as well as the abundance of magnolias and flowers. It is the seat of Rollins College.

Orlando is a city of say 12,000 and is located in a country made beautiful by fine orange groves. The well kept streets and sidewalks are shaded by well kept live and water oaks.

We found Cleremont in a beautiful lake region. The ground is high and well drained. The scenery is delightful. Here we found in his 4-year old orange grove our friend E. H. Moore. He had just finished cultivating his trees when he discovered Mrs. Moore and our party coming through the grove. Many of his trees were bending with delicious fruit. We ate all the oranges and grape fruit we could and carried away several days supply. I think I am safe in saying that there is not a prettier and better cultivated grove in Florida than Mr. Moore's. We shall not soon forget the night we spent with these good people. We talked over the old as well as the new days and next morning being bright, clear and pleasant Mr. M. and I started early and walked over the hills and far away. We looked over the lands owned by Howard Barlow and many others of my acquaintances.

Editor, The Pocahontas Times:

Regarding an editorial copied from your paper in the Charleston Gazette of Sunday, Feb. 13th in which you quoted some verses of mine about the Elk River, appending thereto some pleasing poetry of your own, and flinging into my teeth a classic Horation accusation to the effect that I wrote both free and dry verse.

Permit me to say that you mean well, but you've got your dates mixed. Considering myself a conservative rhymster, it is the unkindest blow of all to be classed with the Vers Librists. As to my writing poetry that savors not in the least of anything stronger than water, I give below a little rhyme of mine which appeared in the New York Times, May 28, 1920. It refers to those stone lions couchant before the steps of the Public Library, on Fifth Avenue at Forty Second Street, here in New York.'

This is offered in self defense. While I am not a "brother Elk," I have been to Delmonicos.

LIONIZED,

By Garnett Laidlaw Eskew,

The lions at the library
Are carven out of stone,
Reclining on their tummies;
As from a royal throne
They watch the throngs that always pass,
Serene, aloof, alone.

And yet, I well remember,
The lion on the right
Raised up upon his haunches
And snarled at me one night;
He snarled an ugly snarl at me,
Transfixing me with fright.

For I had dined most finely
With famed Delmonico,
Where wine of ancient vintage
Continually did flow . . .
I think the lion was slightly peeved
To hear me singing so.

I fled away in terror;
In some mysterious way
I found my safe apartment
And hit the soothing hay;
Nor roused again until the sun
Had brought another day.

And when I see that lion's Serene complacency,—
His lazy toleration,—
I'm wondering if he Recalls that far off summer night
On which he snarled at me!

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Misses Edith and Ethel Smith entertained a number of their friends at their home on Lower Camden Avenue, Wednesday evening, February 16th in honor of their 10th birthday. Those present were—Louise Moore, Mary Richardson, Annas Cole, Rebecca Slaven, Virginia Dearing, Elizabeth Williams, Margaret McGraw, Alice Waugh, Margie McCarty, Madaline Weathers, Kathleen Baxter, Naomi Rexrode, Lina Browning, Margaret Rose, Josephine Browning, Grace Johnson, Orda Hill, Jean Price, Lelia Hill, Florence Price, Betsy Price, Louie Haddicks, Louise McNeill.

Mr. F. D. Boyle, Post Office Inspector, of Washington, was in Marlinton this week in connection with providing for postoffice quarters and equipment for a period of five or ten years. The present lease expires in December of this year. A floor space of at least 1400 square feet is recommended. The present office is 600 square feet. Owing to the great increase in business the present office while one of the best anywhere has become greatly crowded. Bids will be received until April 21, 1921.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF LOMAN SUTTON

Greenbank District High School has been in session three and one-half years January 21, 1921. During this length of time there was only one death in the student body. The past three and one half years have been enjoyed by every pupil. Of course, we have had many trying tasks, hard lessons, and stiff examinations, but, as a whole, school life has been a pleasure. A shadow was thrown over this center of youthful activity and the hearts of G. D. H. S. students and teachers were saddened when, on February 12, 1921, word was flashed over the wires that our fellow student, Loman Sutton, was dead.

Loman was seventeen years, one month and thirteen days old. He was a Junior in High school and was a boy whose pleasant nature won the admiration of all who knew him. He was a member of the O. G. and also of the boy's basket ball team. He did excellent work in all lines of athletics and carried off the blue ribbons in the county track meet at Marlinton in 1920.

Not only in athletics did Loman win honors but he was equally as competent along other lines of development. When in 1919 20, five dollars were offered to the student who could design the best cartoon for the year book, "Mountain Breezes," Loman, with his quick wit, creative imagination, and accurate hand, produced the pieces which were awarded the prize.

Why a healthy talented young man should be taken just when he is beginning to discover his powers and realize his possibilities is more than the human heart can understand, but if it was part of God's great plan that Loman should leave us we must make our wills co incide with His. We, the students and teachers of Greenbank High sctool, wish to express our deepest sympathy to the parents and loved ones and to assure you that your sorrow is our sorrow too.

We shall meet but we shall miss him,
There will be one vacant seat;
But in Heaven we can meet him
When our journey is complete.

Editor Times—

Will you permit me the use of space enough, as an interested taxpayer, to call attention to a statement in a recent issue, purporting to be a statement of the Town's finances, as required by Chapter 47-A of the Code? This statement lacks nearly everything germane to a statement as required. Outside of this, to any one at all familiar with our affairs, this pretended statement shows such glaring deficiencies as leads one to ask some explanations—

Are our bonds all paid?

Has our sinking fund sunk?

Is our cemetery fund buried?

Have we no uncollected revenues of any kind?

Has all the 1920 tax been paid and are we facing 1921 with $1.35 in the banks and $501.49 due from the treasurer, when the first quarter's water rents have been paid in advance?

An examination of this statement and the Recorder's books, which should be closed as of January 30, shows as of that date, a balance due from the treasurer of $2933.73.

To an old fashioned book keeper there is a number of unintelligible entries or lack of entries. The ice plant paid for the use of steam a sum. I find no place where it is charged to the treasurer. What account is credited with the amount? Frankly, the only deduction from the statement, is the fact that we went in the hole $856.43 on the light plant, and if you add the amount charged for street lighting and fire water we were $3979.03 in. We used some supplies though, as $1425.20 was paid, and $1109.80 for transformers.

ONOTO

After having had one of the finest winters that has been experienced for many years, our good balmy weather came to a close Saturday night with about a ten inch snow, since then we have something like 12 or 13 inches of snow.

The people were in the midst of sugar making previous to the snow fall. A. C. Barlow we are informed had gathered 35 barrels of water, which is equal to about as many gallons of syrup.

C. C. Baxter is suffering with something like a felon on one of his fingers.

Our farmers made good use of the fine weather last week, and did quite a lot of plowing. Some are also busy building lime kilns.

Loyd VanReenen of Woodrow was at Onoto, Tuesday.

Miss Lilly Sharp and Miss Janet Siple of Hillsboro, spent the week end with Miss Sharp's parents.

Miss Mary Cromer was the guest of Mrs. M. J. Baxter Sunday.

Dr. H. B. Hill and wife are spending several days with Mrs. Hills parents.

And so much bad in the best of us,
That it ill becomes the most of us,
To talk about the rest of us."

Howdy, folks:

Maybe it's been so long ago since you met me and pap and the rest of our family, that you have forgotten me But I thought you would be glad to know that I am coming to Marlinton next week. Yep! Ain't you glad? Me and Tom Sawyer and pap (he's no account) and the "duke" and the "king" will be with me—the whole bunch of us just like you read in Mark Twain's book about me—"Huckleberry Finn." Only now we have come to life in a big moving picture. You'll see us living the greatest story ever written by dear old Mark Twain.

See you Tuesday at eight o'clock at the AMUSU.

Yours for a good time,

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call unto himself Mrs. Sallie Williams Noel, a member of the Home Department of the Dunmore Methodist Sunday School, mother of two of our Cradle Roll, and of a daughter in the intermediate department, be it Resolved:

First. That we bear witness to the christian character of our sister, who has been a member of the church since childhood, and faithful in all the relations of life.

Second. That her family has lost a devoted daughter, wife and mother; the church and community a faithful friend—yet our loss is her gain.

Third. That we bow with submission to the Father's will, and extend to the father and mother, sisters and brothers, husband and danghters of our friend, our sympathy; and earnestly pray that God may comfort them in their deep sorrow.

ARBOVALE

Most of the farmers have been busy plowing the past week, but from the amount of snow that fell Saturday night they will have to lay off for a few days.

Claud Barkley has been making molasses at Sandy Patterson's camp. He says the sap surely did run for a few days last week.

Roscoe Brown was doing some carpenter work for Claud Tracy last week.

The surveyors were looking over the road from Arbovale toward Bartow to see where the best location would be. We would like to see all roads gravelled, for they have been almost impassable.

F. C. Arbogast has been doing quite a lot of grinding at his mill the past two weeks.

James Cassell has been haullug lumber for J. Hamed to the Arbogast Siding for the North Fork Lumbor Co. to haul out.

Carl Arbogast is preparing to put up a lot of wire fence this spring.

Ten inches of snow fell Saturday night and Sunday.

County Court will be in session next Tuesday.

A TRIP TO POCAHONTAS

(Weston Independent)

Dear Friend Cook:

I have just returned from Pocahontas county where I visited many relatives, descendents of my youngest sister, Mrs. Jno. K. Hinkle. Renick Waugh, a nephew, was here, and he became a great friend of Clark Burkhammer. They planned to take a bear hunt in the mountains near Marlinton, where Renick lives. So December 21st Burkhammer, John E. Swecker and I took the train for Elkins, armed to the teeth. We spent the night at Elkins, and met former Sheriff Jno. A. Chittum there, and the following morning we left for Durbin, and thence to Thorny creek, thirty-five miles down the Greenbrier river, where we met Renick. We ferried across the creek to the home of his parents, L. M. and Maggie Waugh. Both the elder Waugh and his son joined us as we started for the wilds, all loaded for bear, thirsting for blood and breathing threatenings against any bear which might cross our path.

After climing rugged mountains, falling over logs and rocks, sliding down the steeps, seeing some forbidden deer escaping over the ridges, and discovering some turkey-tracks, they returned at eventide without having seen any bear. They repeated this on the second day, and they not inappropriately named it "Armistice Day," having determined that they would let alone all bears which would let them alone, and that sort of an agreement with bears is a reasonably safe one. I should have excepted myself from this hunting party, for I sought, not the game of the fastnesses, but the friendly fireside and the well laden table. We were all royally entertained among my people in that rugged country, and we all enjoyed their comfortable homes and their uniform hospitality. I had a very enjoyable visit with my two nieces, Mrs. Waugh and Mrs. Lucy F. Dilley. In Marlinton I spent a few days visiting my grand-nephew, W. M. Waugh, and his good family. In the car of a Mr. Hiner I had a ride all through the town and its surroundings. Marlinton is built at and around the mouth of Knapp's creek. There is a three-span concrete bridge crossing the Greenbrier river, standing on the same solid foundation where once stood an old wooden bridge, made famous because General Robert E. Lee crossed it in one of his marches during the civil war.

I asked a pretty little thirteen years old girl, Edna May, who was tending a store, to write for me a list of the enterprises in that town, and she did. Among these are two wholesale houses, seven groceries, two drug stores, two banks, six doctors, seven lawyers, etc., etc. It used to have two newspapers until Lee Dean put his type and office towel in his pocket and left for Buckhannon. Now there is but one—The Pocahontas Times. It was being printed when I called at the office, and they were making good Times at a rapid rate. I met the editor, Calvin Price, who reluctantly admitted that he was acquainted with Ad Hall and the Independent.

After leaving the town I went over a part of a country called the Indian Draft. This is a series of flats seven or eight miles wide and something like fifty miles in length, with but breaks. It reaches down to what is called Academy, which is the most beautiful place in the county, all lying between the mountains and the Greenbrier river. It is high above the river bottom level. At that place I was present at the funeral of a Mrs. Walker Irvine at the Barlow burying ground, which had been a burying ground for a hundred years or longer. That plot is in the midst of the Draft and near the foot of Elk Mountain. I found the farms in that country wonderfully clean and generally well kept. It is a rich limestone land.

After spending several days and nights sitting before the great wood fireplace of Moff Waugh, and listening to that grizzled hunter's hair-raising bear stories, we bade the family good bye and left for Cass, where lives another niece, Christine, wife of B. F. Conrad, who works in a company store. Swecker had gone some days previous to this, so Clark and I had all the visit to ourselves. There is much activity in the lumber business along the Greenbrier river. We went from there to Bartow, the home of my brother-in law, John K. Hinkle, father of the nieces I had been visiting. We had a rousing welcome. We spent a half day looking over the Camp Bartow battlefield. The breastworks, rifle-pits and trenches are well preserved. The ruts in the pits where the cannon stood are as plain as though they had been made but a few years ago. Some of the logs in the breastworks are yet to be seen, and the entire scene indicates that some engineer who knew his business was on that job. The position was a very strong one. There are remnants of old buckets and rusty scraps of cooking utensils. I saw a big piece of an old fashioned iron kettle, with one leg to it. Trees have grown up right in the breastworks since the war, which are big enough for crossties. The Staunton and Parkersburg turnpike winds along through the center of the battlefield. We saw how the dead had been buried, and where some bodies had been removed. A good many graves remain there as round and plain as if made a very few years ago. Several of them have rough flagstones at the heads, with the initials of the dead roughly cut thereon. Most of these have fallen down, and it is very pathetic to stand by the graves and think of the poor boys from the far away Southland, whose bodies have lain there since 1861, and have had no loving hand to drop a flower on their graves and none to drop the tear of affection on the sleeping place of those who never came back. Two of the regiments that took part in that battle were from Arkansas and Georgia.

Bartow is a nice little town, situated in the midst of wide bottoms stretching several miles along the Greenbrier river, a most beautiful sight to behold. Standing in those broad bottoms one looks up the mountain sides to giddy heights and in wonderment at the indescribable scenery with which Nature has adorned that locality. The road winds from the valley up through that battlefield where the Alleghenies slope gradually back from the river, until the crest of the ridge is reached at a distance of nine miles. This crest is attained in Highland county, Virginia. There is a generally believed report here that two cannons, one of brass, one of iron, were buried in a swamp here, near the river, and the lower end of the old Burner orchard Persons who live near the battlefield are continuously finding relicts here, and there are left many visible marks of the activities of those strenuous days, while numerous and curious are the stories told of happenings and alleged happenings hereabouts.

I was told of plots of land at the top of the Cheat mountain which are called "dead circles," and in which no vegetation will grow. The centers of these seem to be burned and charred. Traditipn ascribes these to savage Indians who are said to have burned unfortunate whites at stakes here, while the captors danced joyfully around the flames. Arrowheads and other relices found here prove that there was a time when the Indians were very numerous in this territory. Angeline Knight, who is a colored woman, as black as the darkest night between two clouded days and away over a hundred years of age, relates some thrilling events said to have taken place on the borders of this mountain in her earlier days. Three of my grand-nieces, Lelia, Lena and Mintie Waugh, were when children going along a road through the woods, when they saw just ahead of them in the brush, a large panther with young ones. The beast jumped into the road close to the children. Lena, next to the youngest, had a sore foot and could not run rapidly, so Mintie, the youngest, a dear brave bit of a girl, stayed in the rear, for she said that Lena couldn't run fast, and the panther might get her. But the panther disappeared in the woods, and the children were safe. Another time this dear little Mintie went out to the field in the evening to bring the cows. A big dog went with her. Mintie told me she had a little light pole in her hand. It was getting late, and she saw the dog baying what she thought to be one of the cows. She ran near to it so that she could punch it with a pole, and was terror-stricken when she found it to be a black bear. She called her father, but the bear got away.

While I was at Bartow my brother-in-law told me of a strange thing which happened on Timber ridge, in Pendleton county. An old man named Dolley had a fine cellar near his home. He also had a couple of barrels of apple-brandy store therein, along with a lot of other good things. One night, after heavy rains, his cellar, with everything that was in it, fell down through a sink into a cave, and he never saw it again. A few days after that event something scared the old man's chockens, and one old rooster made a dive for the cellar house and went down into the hole. For several days he could be heard crowing away down in that big hole. The man afterwards moved his home to a safer place.

Well, after a pleasing visit, I am again at home. I find a lot of letters awaiting me, one delightful one from Mrs. Josephine Iams, of San Diego, California. She said she had read my former letters in your paper three thousand miles away. She requested me to write more of them, for her children were anxious to read them. That's what I've just finished.

HILLSBORO

About three miles north of Hillsboro on the little mountain is what is know as the High Rocks. A combination of picturesque cliffs of various shapes and lines rising to a great height. From their dizzy summits one can look down on tall trees, and from no point in all this section of country can a grander view be had of houses, valleys and mountains stretching out as far as the eye can see and forming a scenic panorama of surpassing beauty. It was here quite a number of years ago that Marshall Peyatt, a resident of our town, and who has long since passed into the great beyond, met with a trying experience, which nearly cost him his life. Mr. Peyatt in company of a friend whose name at present we cannot recall, went to a point near the High Rocks to hunt. While there they went to the great cliffs to enjoy the magnificent view to be obtained therefrom. As it was the winter season the tops of the cliffs were covered with snow and ice, some of which through a thawing process had slipped over the edge of the cliff about four or five feet and hung partly supported by some bushes which grew out of the cliff. Mr. Peyatt walked out on the projection two or three feet thinking there was a solid foundation underneath it. While standing there he felt it start to give away, and with a great leap barely cleared the space between him and the solid rock, as the great mass of snow and ice went crashing down perhaps two hundred feet to the bottom of the cliff. Speaking of the occurrence afterward Mr. Peyatt said he was completely unnerved by his narrow escape from death, and while clinging there dangerously near the edge of the cliff trembling in every limb his thoughts went out to God. He realized that he had been saved by that unseen hand that is ever leading us through this life, and from his heart he sent up a prayer of thanks to Him who is ever mindful of us, and holds the lives and destinies of all men and nations in His hands. How many of us get down on our knees every day and thank God for the preservation of our lives—for His boundless love and mercy. Oh! not many—not many! May God save us from the great demoralization and sin of the present time that we may be able to stand in the awful day of reckoning that is coming.

W. A. Browning will put up a nice dwelling house on his farm here in the near future. Miss Alice Clark is also going to build an addition to her home.

Remmie Kinnison is putting up a large and convenient granery and machine building.

G. L. Clark will not farm the lands of F. A. Chapman this season owing to failing health.

Miss Margaret LaRue has returned from Charlottesville, Va., where she had her tonsils removed, which operation has greatly improved her health

FARMERS' MEETINGS

County agent W. C. Stokoe is busy holding meetings over the county. At the Edray meeting Thursday night there were 30 persons present; 13 at Beard Friday afternoon, and 22 at Marlinton Saturday afternoon. At Marlinton and Edray action was taken on the scrub bull and ram menace, and committees appointed to effect a change in the next few years. Beard is fast becoming a Hereford breeding center and the scrubs are disappearing there.

No price has been definitely set for fertilizer, but the cooperation of the farmers of the state and nation is bringing it down to a reasonable basis. Mr. Stokoe is pressing the point that we develop about two strains of potatoes suited to our soil ani climate and standardize them. Pocahontas will have a cash crop for which there will always be a ready market. At present there are thousands of bushels of potatoes in Pocahontas of a score or more varieties, and practically no market for them

At Edray Reed Moore tested ouf a number of varieties of potatoes as an experiment, and in the Marlinton district Elmer Sharp has been appointed to do the same.

At the Marlinton meeting Porter Kellison was elected the local chairman. The committee to replace scrub bulls with pure bred sires is E. F. McLaughlin, Z. S. Smith and J. E. Kee. Porter Kellison is the sheep man.

Arrangments were made to hold community meetings at Green Hill and Swago school houses, the dates to be fixed later. Also demonstration meetings in charge of an expert from the University will be held at Edray and Swago, dealing with the diseases of sheep.

Allow this paper to make a suggestion: That when the fifteen meetings are held over the county and the local potatoe, pure bred sire and other committeemen are appointed, that they meet and form county and district committess so that they can work together, have a county program and put the work on a business basis. It is about time that the farmers were doing something for themselves. An appropriation of twelve million dollars is having hard sledding in Congress, but appropriations one hundred times as great for the army or navy slide through easily. Poor war ridden, bankrupt France, with only forty millions of people, is spending thirty-five million dollars for her farmers. Out of every one hundred dollars Congress appropriates, thirty cents is spent for progress.

MRS. MARY M. SYDENSTRICKER

The salient points in the life of the one on behalf of whom we are here today to pay a parting tribute of respect, but feebly tell of the place she had won in the hearts of those who had known her best and who had an opportunity to test the quality of the influence which she had exerted on those about her. A bare recital of the main facts of her life is like showing the frame work of a building and calling it a home. There must be life and love and joy and happines and grief and pain and hope and help to make home. So in every life held together by the upstanding events there must be the hopes and asperations, the plans and purposes, the steady pull of the spiritual forces that give it character and interest and with these, of course, its value to us.

As the wife of the pastor of a quiet country church for thirty years there was not much but silent force of example and the home influence to record. I know specially well the wife of one of the greaest preachers of our church who used to tell amusedly of how some had even rebuked her because she by her drudgery, had obscured herself to advance her husband. I imagine Mrs. Sydenstricker would have acknowledged this to be the ruling principle of her life if she had expressed herself. She was a true help mate and she thought that she was helping the Lord's work best and most surely by taking from her husband all the burdens which she could bear herself. And right well did she succeed for through her housewifely management and economy her husband had the time and means to become one of the most widely known scholars of this Presbytery. Of course all this was done with a loving self-effacement gladly borne, Mrs. Sydenstricker was in this quiet and loyal way deeply interested in the success of the Lord's work and attested her faithfulness with which she attended the preaching services of the church. She could truly say with the Psalmist, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go unto the house of the Lord." At every call the writer made on her while she lived in the neighborhood her interest in the success of the work was indicated by her questions and comments. She was truly loyal and entered sympathetically into the trials which her husband's successor had to face. In ways that need not now be mentioned she made him feel that she was a true and helpful friend.

But the speaker feels that the best evidence of her work and character is seen in the children that came out of the country manse from her influence and example. I'm sure that every one of them would say and truthfully, that the best that is in them is due to the training of the pious home that was theirs and to the example and self-sacrifice of the father and mother who made that home beautiful with christian love.

Such a life does not end with the sleep of death but lives on in the life of those who have felt its moulding and inspiring influence. We cannot estimate it because the subtility of its blessing does not yield to any of our grosser methods of appraisment. We must leave it to eternity to reveal.

She had been in good health for her advanced age within a week or two of her death. She began to show signs of feebleness until she suffered a stroke of paralysis. A few bright intervals came but she gradually grew worse until without apparent pain on Sunday January 30, 1921, she fell asleep.

The tie that bound so sweetly mother and daughter in the home is broken on earth but perhaps all these broken threads will be gathered together in God's own time and united in a home that has no end.. I'm sure the spmpathy of a large circle of friends will sustain and comfort these bereaved children.

"He givith his beloved sleep."

SENECA TRAIL

The statements set forth below are intended for record in the office of the county clerk of this county. While most of the facts set out have appeared in this paper before, they are set down and printed for the purpose of having them receive the acid test of publicity, so that if anything contained therein should be corrected an opportunity will be given in this way.

The Seneca Trail or Warrior's Road was about five hundred miles long and extended from near the eastern end of the Great Lakes to the northern part of Georgia. It ran parallel with the Appalachian Mountains, the name given to all of the eastern mountains of the United States, so called from a tribe of Indians known as the Appalaches, or "people of the other side." But the Indians had a more comprehensive name for the innumerable peaks and ranges which make this the most broken part of the earth's surface—they called them the Endless Mountains.

The great road belonged to a powerful Indian confederacy referred to as the Five Nations. They held a country shaped something after the form of a boot, taking in both sides of the Saint Lawrence River, the country on all sides of Lake Ontario and Lake Erie, west to Lake Huron, and from there south to Georgia, taking in most of Ohio, all of West Virginia, and controlling all of the mountain country down well into Georgia, where the country was controlled by the Creek confederacy, a powerful and progressive nation of Indians, but not to be compared to the Five Nations.

At the time that definite history begins, the Five Nations had forced the Appalachees out of the mountains and they had become a part of the Creek Nation.

In the years that the white people were gaining a foot hold on the Atlantic seaboard, the Five Nations occupied the mountains. While there is pretty definite evidence that they had once been cannibals, they were greatly benefitted by the close association with the white people and by the work of Christian missionaries among them. Peace was maintained for over a hundred years between this great Indian nation and the white people and no doubt as the slow years moved along, no one dreamed but that the arrangement was not to be permanent. The Indians occupied the mountains. The whites the low lands. Soon after the first settlements in America, the Indians had been expelled by a bloody war from New England, and that seems to have resulted in an endless peace, as it must have appeared to the thinkers of those generations.

The white people soon taught the Indians the use of gun powder and fire arms and supplied them liberally from New York city. This gave the Five Nations the ascendency over all other Indian tribes and they enlarged their boundaries and maintained them. It was the old story of the contact of savage tribes with civilized people. The heathen received powder, bibles and whiskey. In Ohio, there was a fort that enclosed more than a hundred acres, with three and a half miles of stone and earth walls from six to ten feet high, all situated on a bold headland of some two hundred and fifty feet elevation. This was the Gibralta of the American Indians. But the Five Nations took a cannon there and notified the fort to surrender as they had magic that would destroy it. The fort began to fight but was soon overcome, perhaps as much by the noise that the cannon made, as by the breach that it made in the walls.

Of the Five Nations, the Senecas formed the most powerful tribe. They had all of the western part. They were the military department. A great and good Indian by the name of Hiawatha, and some associates spent their lives in an effort to promote peace among the tribes which were perpetually at war. It was by their work that the Five Nations were welded into one government, but while four of the tribal aggregations agreed to perpetual peace, the Senecas held out, probably because of the exposed western position, and the Senecas never laid down their arms. Finally after Hiawatha had succeeded in founding a peaceful country, the Senecas were included and it was agreed that they should have the police power of the nation, and also maintain the armies for defense against other Indian tribes.

The result was that all of the conquered territory was made Seneca land, and all of the captive tribes were adopted into the Seneca state, and called Senecas, and in addition, all young men of the Five Nations that hankered after war, joined the Senecas and took the name. It speedily resulted in an overwhelming predominance of power in the Senecas. The Five Nations came nearer having a civilized government than any other nation of Indians of North America, and for many years Great Britain maintained diplomatic relations with them, and kept an ambassador at the seat of government of the Five Nations.

It is pretty certain that the Five Nations did not extend below Pennsylvania prior to the date of their treaties with the whites. But after the Gibralta of Warren County, Ohio had fallen the lines were rapidly pushed south and a chain of garrisons established reaching clear from the lakes to far away Georgia and connecting these forts was a great military road which the white people have named the Seneca Trail, but which the Indians themselves called the Warrior's Road.

So careless has been the invader in preserving the marks of Indian life, that it is doubtful if any trace of their numerous roads can now be identified by marks on the surface of the earth, save only the Great Seneca Trail which can still be followed at places in this county.

The only place that one of the garrisons can certainly be located in this section is that of Mingo Flats some twenty-odd miles from Marlinton, at the head of the Ohio River, and that is due largely to the name being perpetuated by the white people.

It is known that the trail came into Randolph County from Pendleton County and that it is plain to be seen in the woods on Cheat River; it came through the site of the city of Elkins and followed the waters of the Tygarts Valley and crossed over on to the waters of Elk and by the site of the ancient fort at the Gibson's twelve miles from Marlinton. The outlines of the fort can still be observed in the shape of two rings. The trail crossed Elk Mountain and came down Indian Draft, or at least to the mouth of Indian Draft. From there it cro s d Stoney Creek, climbed onto the Jericho Flats came to the brow of the hill above Price Run, angled down to the point of the mountain just where the pike crosses the run. It is a plainly marked road of not more than seven degrees. It follows the course now occupied as the pike for not over 300 steps to the next hollow, (Kee Hollow) goes up that ravine and climbs to the Kee flats and passes by the residence of Geo. M. Kee, and from there it continues in a southerly direction on its course through the Aaron Kee flats and beyond to the brow of the mountain or ridge overlooking Swago Creek and decends there and crosses the creek and immediately climbs the hill again to the low place near the G. D. McNeill farm. This is the place the Bridger boys were killed scouting for Indians on the trail. From the low place, called Bridger's Gap, the trail swings to the west to negotiate the long climb to the Cranberry Mountains and tops the mountain at the long leading ridge that ends at the High Rocks, and from there the trail follows the smooth top of the ridge until it loses itself in the Cranberry Wilderness, passing between the Cranberry Glades on the west and the Levels of Pocahontas County on the east.

In the trail, just at the foot of the ridge where it crosses Price Run, there was in the memory of the writer a sharp turn in the well marked trail that clearly denoted that it was an Indian trail. It was so abrupt a turn that it clearly indicated that though the trail might have indicated an old wagon road, that not even a horse used trail would have had such a kink in it.

Historians say that at the foot of every mountain that was traversed by an Indian trail that there once was to be found a pile of stones. Every warrior before beginning the ascent would lay a stone on this pile as a contribution to the gods of luck to see him safely on his journey. If such a cairn ever existed at the foot of the hill in West Marlinton, it has disappeared.

July 8, 1755, Major Lewis was ordered to Greenbrier with his company to protect the frontier. This is shown by letters of Governor Dunmore. The point called Greenbrier is now known as Marlinton.

Here is an instance as to how historical facts if true dovetail into each other. On the 18th day of October, 1758, Chief King, of the Five Nations made a speech at the conference held with the Indians at Easton, Pennsylvania. He said that three years previous to that time that eight Seneca warriors were returning from war bearing scalps, and having in their custody seven prisoners. That at the place called Greenbrier they were met by a party of 150 soldiers who induced them to travel with them for two days to a store. Clearly to Fort Dinwiddie on Jackson River. There the arms were taken from the Indians and two of them killed and others taken prisoner. The Chief said: "This gave great offense; and the more so, as it was upon the Warrior's Road, and we were at peace with our brethren."

The Lewis fort stood near the court-house. There are some graves near there close to where the Huntersville road crosses the Marlins Run but the exact place can not be located. In our mind's eye we see the Indian party coming out of the hollow where the houses of F. R. Hunter and C. J. Richardson stand. In the two or three hundred yards that they had to traverse before climbing the mountain again, they are met with the formidable company of soldiers, who cannot be sure whether they are Senecas and friends or Shawnees and enemies. The commanding office takes a midway course and pursuades them to go by Fort Dinwiddie the headquarters of the army, and during the journey the killing occurred through a mistaken policy of attempting to disarm the savages.

This town has done something to preserve the identity of the Warrior's Road by naming a street or road in west Marlinton, Seneca Trail.

Next follows the statement of Mr. Anthony Moore, of Montrose, W. Va.

In the year 1911, I was teaching school at Evenwood, Randolph County, West Virginia, on the waters of Glady Fork of Cheat, and at that time I followed an old Indian trail leading from Pendleton County towards Elkins for five or six miles. It passed over the mountain from Glady Fork of Cheat River to Shavers Fork of Cheat River. It was plain in the woods but harder to follow in the fields. In the woods it had the appearance of an old abandoned county road.

ANTHONY MOORE.

Next follows the statement of Mr. Douglas McNeill:

Statement of G. D. McNeill, Superintendent of Free Schools of Pocahontas County:

I was born on a farm near Bridger's Gap, the adjoining farm to the one on which it is located. My father, Capt James M. McNeill was born and raised there. He was born in 1823. He has pointed out to me the Indian trail leading through Bridger's Gap, and has told me that it was unchanged except for the wear of time. He remembers when Indian parties came through by his house. Excavations near the spring on two occasions have uncovered ashes indicating camping places.

I have seen signs of the trail which appeared to cross Swago Creek just below the pike and which goes up the hill in a general line with the pike south topping the hill in the Miller farm, where the old road or path to the Levels forked away from the trail. And from there the trail led through the Bridger's Gap, and I have seen signs of the trail between said Gap and the High Rocks, and my father has told me that these signs of a trail were there before his time, and that the old people of the neighborhood had told him the same thing.

At places the old trail is now used to a certain extent but there are places in the woods where the marks appear to be caused by the use of Indians. This appears to be what is now referred to as Seneca Trail. I have seen ashes, flints, and periwinkle shells around springs, indicating camping places.

G. D. McNEILL.

WITHOUT A FRIEND

"This country, with the possible exception of China, which is involved in a great deal of trouble at home, has not a friend among the nations of the earth." The author of that opinion is Representative Kahn, Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, and the obvious answer is: why should the United States expect to have any friends? What is it doing to earn anybody's friendship?

When the armistice was signed this country had no enemies except among the Central Powers, and in spite of the disappointment of peace-making, the signing of the Treaty of Versailles found the United States the one nation that everybody trusted, the one Nation in which all other nations had confidence.

That trust and that confidence are now shattered. For nearly two years the Congress of the United States, and especially the Senate, has devoted itself almost exclusively to the task of alienating this country's friends

It might be expected that the Allies would be grateful to us for supplying the force that brought the war to an end, but Mr. Harding himself has assured them that we entered entered the conflict only from low and sordid motives. We did not fight for a great principle, according to him, but to save our own skins.

We have not rested content with rejecting the Treaty of Versailles and the covenant of the League of Nations, thereby making it impossible to stabilize the peace that was bought in rivers of blood, but our attitude toward our former associates in war has been one of contempt and derision. Day after day during the Senate debate on the peace treaty President Wilson was pictured as the ignorant accomplice of a gang of crooks who were engaged, figuratively speaking in looting the corpses left on the field of battle.

We have abandoned the the French, who desired above everything else our counsel and our help in putting their affairs in order. All they are going to get from the Harding Administration is a higher tariff on their imports to the United States.

The only two countries left which have the power to be of great help or great hindrance to us are Great Britain and Japan, and both of them are habitually insulted by American politicians. There is not a demagogue in Congress that does not feel free to attack either of them whenever he thinks it will help him with any of his hyphenated constituents.

The attitude of the Senate toward the peace treaty has been consistently pro German—not openly and avowedly pro-German, but sneakingly and evasively and unintentionly pro-German. In consequence we have not obtained even the dubiou, satisfaction of awakening a friendly feeling on the part of the German people. We have irritated everybody, and benefitted nobody, least of all ourselves.

Our best customer, next to Great Britain, is Canada. Congress is now trying to enact a fraudulent tariff law directed in the main against Canada's agricultural products, and the Canadian press is earnestly advoceting reprisals.

Secretary Colby has been to South America to establish better relations with the Latin-American republics, but on the day that the Latin-American Diplomatic Corps in Washington formerly congratulated the Secretary of State on the success of his mission a retaliation bill was introduced in the Argentine Parliament to penalize imports from the United States in case the Fordney Emergency Tariff Bill was passed by Congress.

Japan is still pathetically anxious to adjust all its differences with the the Unitnd States, most of which have their origin in California, but all the sand-lot Senators are preparing to destroy the treaty that Ambassador Morris has negotiated with the representatives of the Japanese Government, and they will oppose any treaty with Japan simply because it is a treaty with Japan.

We have sandbagged the treaty of peace and the League of Nations. We have dislocated ourselves from all responsibility for what follows the war. We have gambled in Europe's suffering and anguish. We have contributed nothing toward the economic stability of the world. We have insulted everybody who waited to be insulted, and are preparing a naval programme that surpasses the wildest dreams of the Hehenzollerns, and then we wonder why we have no friends.

There is not a nation in the world that does not desire our friendship; there is not a nation but wishes to be on the most amicable terms with us; yet we are systematically driving them all away and inviting them to combine against us. This is what two brief years of partisan politics has accomplished in the way of promoting international animosity and all the moral responsibility rests upon the Republican leaders of Congress. This is their handiwork.—New York World.

DURBIN

Sargeant S F. Ruckman captured an automobile that had been stolen in Cleveland, Ohio. F. J. Hogan claimed the car. The party that stole the car had vacated and no trace of the thief has been found yet. The name of the car Martin Touring Car Factory, No. 6840. It was on toe Staunton and Parkersburg pike about four miles from Durbin. The car was placed in the Townsend garage.

Sargeant Ruckman has captured some old hens and the parties have been dealt with according to the law.

Lincoln Cochran was in our town on business Thursday.

Paul Bish died in the hospital at Charlottesville, Va., last week. His body was brought home Monday and on Tuesday was taken to Elkins for burial by the Woodman Lodge No. 1439. It was accompanied by H. L. Stokes, H. H. Hudson, W. W. Marshall, Ray Robinson and S. H. Hiner. The funeral was conductid by the Kendall Undertaking Establishment of Elkins. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved parents.

T. M Black, jewelryman of Durbin, was found dead in his bed Thursday morning, February 24. Death due to heart failure. His friends were notsfied by wire. Undertaker Hiner was put in charge after the inqnest.

This week we had the biggest snow of the winter—about twelve inches, and the road acaoss the Alleghany has been so no caas could come over from Crabbottom.

LINWOOD

We are having our first real winter weather. Farmers have quit plowing gone to feeding and getting wood.

Our school is progressing nicely with an enrollment of 28, under the management of Mrs. Rella Yeager.

We think the Linwood community is entitled to a better school building, as the one we have is not only toe small and temporary but unsanitary.

HON. C. W. OSENTON

Files Announcement as One of Big Four

The old war horse of democracy, the Hon. C. W. Osenton, of Fayetteville, has filed his announcement with the Secretary of State as a candidate for one of the four delegates at large to the San Francisco convention, and it is our most sincere wish that he will be one of that delegation, and we think that he most certainly will.

He is one of the really able and disinterested Democrats of West Virginia and all that he ever asks of the party is a chance to serve it.

The delegation is going so far away that the poor benighted people who live in that far country think that Virginia and West Virginia are all the same, and besides it is second nature with the mountaineers to put the best foot foremost when they go away from home. And we leave it to you if there is another man in the State who would do us prouder than he, the thoroughbred of Fayette County. He is like sunshine on the mountain.

Another reason that we would like to see Osenton on the delegation is because he is the right type of a man to pick a candidate that the people back home can support. This condition is confronting the country in a most acute form this year. It is one of the most supreme importance that the delegates to that convention be able to put themselves in the place of the forgotten man at home. Osenton can do this. He has never changed from the time he was a brakeman on the railroad, and he knows as much about what a common man thinks as any man alive. We particularly want to see Osenton on that delegation this year, and it is important that he be sent. The common herd to which we belong is not always right, not by a long shot, but it is our privilege to be wrong if we want to, and right or wrong you will find Osenton in the ruck with the common run. That is the reason men like him so well. We do not want to see any old political blister nominated for President, this year of years. We want to see a man nominated and all that we can do is to send men to it.

BIG SALE OF TIMBER

Last week a deed was recorded from Dr. F. T. McClintic, Trustee, to Cecil Gross for the timber, with certain exceptions, on two tracts of land at Slaty Fork, on Elk River, in this county. This is the L. D. Sharp land and the acreage of the tracts are 496 and 968 acres.

This is big timber on blue grass farms and is comprised of some very fine trees. There is said to be a lot of fine poplar on the land.

The consideration is $60,000.

William H. Bostic was killed at Raywood on Tuesday morning February 10, 1920, by being caught between a locomotive and two cars loaded with lumber. He was conductor on the log train. In backing up to the cars the coupling failed to catch. The cars were on a slight grade and the brakes had been loosened. When the coupling failed to hold and the engine moved off, he attempted to fit the coupling. He stood in the middle of the track with his back to the cars. The cars moved down and caught him. He lived but a few minutes. Mr. Bostic was a native of Monroe county, and about forty years old. His wife died just about a year ago of influenza. Two little children are left orphans. For ten years or more Mr. Bostic has been in the employ of the Warn Lumber Corporation. Burial at Deer Creek on Wednesday. This is the fourth fatal accident in the lumber industry of the Greenbank District in a month's time.

By a score of 48 to 13 the Hillsboro High defeated the Hinton High School Basket Ball team at Hillsboro on Saturday night. This is rerorted as a good clean game in which the local team by superior playing and familiarity with the floor easily won over the visitors.

The store belonging to H. C. Kincaid and H. C. Gay at Cabin Creek, Kanawha county, burned down. The firm will either buy or rebuild.

MEMORIAL CERTIFICATES

BY LHE FRENCH GOVERNMENT

A handsome Memorial Certificate, suitable for framing, is being presented to the nearest of kin of American soldiers who lost their lives in the War. These certificates are now being received at the headquarters of Pocahontas Post No. 50 The American Legion, and will be presented by the Post to those entitled to receive them, on or about February 22.

Twenty-four soldiers lost their lives from this county during the war; thirteen in foreign service and eleven in the camps in this country. The names of the dead are:

Clio B. McKeever, Ben F. Blankenship, Marvin W. Wilfong, Charles Clyde McLaughlin, Edgar E. McMillion, Carl Rose, William C. Burwell, Owen Frazir Thomas, Ward W. Houchin, Charles Herbert Acord, Charles N. Gum, William Orby Lambert, Loyd W. Buzzard, all of whom were killed in action or lost at sea, none dying of disease in foreign service.

The names of those who died in this country are: Page D. W[illegible], Silas David Dean, Earl A. Gilmore, Fred A. Hannah, Forrest W. Burr, John F. Overholt, Jesse L. Judy, Dewey George Smith. George C. Symes, Winters Webster, Elbert Messer.

The names of the nearest of kin of the each of above soldiers are being ascertained by the American Legion, and the certificates forwarded to them as soon as it is possible to do so.

In this paper is published the announcement of John Andrew Cleek, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the office of Assessor of Pocahontas County. It looks to us that the men who voted for his opponent for this nomination four years ago have been promising it to him ever since. Mr. Cleek is widely known and popular over the county. He has done business with most of the farmers, and he has the enviable reputation of being able to go back and trade with any man he ever dealt with. His qualifications for the office are good. He is a successful farmer and specializes in live stock. Pocahontas people seem to insist that this office be filled by a farmer, and they are just about right too. This paper would endorse him as a good running candidate and a safe assessor.

Mrs. Eveline Johnson sends us word that her eldest grandchild, Everett A. Lightner, has passed his fiftieth birthday, while she is enjoying life at 88 years of age. Her oldest child, Mrs. Rachel Lightner would be 69 years old if living. Mrs. Johnson has 50 grandchildren, forty great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren. She had a lot of grandsons in the war, and two of them, Ward Houchin and Dewey Leffel, were killed in battle.

TOWN MEETING

There was only a fair turn out at the Town Meeting of the Board of Trade at the High School Building on last Friday night.

C. M. Kincaid, chairman of the committee on membership, brought in the namss of a lot of new members and renewals, and reported that there was a general response from the citizens of the town to associate themselves with the organization that is striving to make Marlinton a better and a bigger town.

The Committee on Municipal Affairs, F. M. Sydnor, chairman, was on the job as usual. They recommended that the Board and Town Council busy themselves to take the necessary steps toward securing a Western Union Telegraph office independent of the railroad office; also to see what is necessary to be done about securing the free delivery of express. That the Town Council enforce the hog ordinance, and urge the householders to put the numbers on their houses and that street signs be put up. That the road to Mt. View Cemetery be put in good repair and graveled from the Class A road; that 10th avenue be opened from Class A road to the Court House, and that the railway company be approached in regard to cooperating in the work of filling 4th avenue about the freight depot so that wagons may back up and be loaded conveniently.

The road matters were referred to the Road Committee, P. T. Ward, chairman, whose report showed these and other things were being considered by the committee.

W. A. Bratton, chairman of the Committee on Business Development, in his report spoke of the impossibility of securing sites for industries which might be induced to come here all the land avaliabe being tied up in court. He said efforts were being made by the extract company to secure the Greenbrier Mill land, and that the Marlin Lumber Company would probably locate its plant within reaching distance of the town.

Ira D. Brill attended the meeting the Wool Growers' Association at Charleston and he spoke of the importance of the sheep industry to Pocahontas County. He urged that the committee on Agriculture of the Marlinton Board of Trade assist in the organization of the association in this county. The proper grading and marketing of wool would mean many thousands of dollars of additional money.

The next Town Meeting will be held on the first Friday night of March.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT

Mrs. G. G. Stitzinger Killed at Newcastle, Pennsylvania

Last week, Mrs. Stitzinger, the wife of G. G. Stitzinger, president of the Deer Creek Lumber Company, of Deer Creek, in this county, was killed at her home town, Newcastle, Pennsylvania, in a collision of an automobile and a trolley car.

The street car company was having trouble with a dead car and the car was being pushed in front of a car when it reached a grade and got from under control. The man on the runaway car jumped, and the car continued down the street.

Mr. Stitzinger with three ladies in an automobile turned a corner just in time to be caught by the car. The car touched the rear end of the automobile and slewed it around but did not upset it, and the car continued for some feet and upset and began to burn.

Mrs. Stitzinger had been on the front seat of the car and after the excitement was passed she was missed and the presumption is that she was either knocked out of the automobile jumped and was caught under the car where her dead body was found a few minutes later. A great crowd had gathered in the street and enough men were present to lift the car bodily, but life was extinct.

At a Special Session of the County Court held for the County of Pocahontas, at the Court-house thereof, on Tuesday, the 3rd day of February, 1920.

EDRAY DISTRICT

Precinct No. Seven.

It appearing to the Court that the public convenience and public good require that a new voting precinct be established in the Edray District, to be known as Voting Precinct No. 7, and to include a part of the territory now embraced in Precints Nos. 2 and 6, it is therefore ordered by the Court that said Voting Precinct No. 7, be established as follows, to-wit: Beginning on the line of Precinct No. 6 (Buckeye) at the high point on the Griffin Place, thence running through Precinct No. 6, to the high point on Lee Beard's Place, so as to include Emory Miller in this Precinct, thence around the head of Day's Run, so as to include its waters in this precinct, to the Big Loup on Black Mountain, on the Little Levels District Line, thence with the line of said District to the Webster County Line, thence with the Webster County line to where the same crosses Gauley River, thence up Gauley River to the head thereof; thence on a straight line to the top of Red Lick Mountain, thence on a line to the point of beginning so as to include Elmer Baxter, W. H. Gilmore, and W. M. Vanreenan in this Precinct, and leaving Bernard VanReenan in Precinct No. 2, (Edray.)

And the place of voting in this Precinct shall be at the school house at Woodrow.

GREENBANK DISTRICT.

Precinct No. One.

And it further appearing to the Court that the public convenience and public good require that the lines of Precinct No. 1, in the Greenbank District, be changed so as to include a part of the territory now embraced in Precincts Nos. 6 and 9, and all the territory now embraced in precinct No. 8, it appearing to the Court that all of the voters in precinct No. 8, have petitioned this Court to discontinue the voting place in said precinct, it appearing that there is no necessity of continuing said voting precinct No. 8.

It is therefore ordered by the Court that the lines of said precinct No. 1 in said Greenbank District, be changed as aforesaid, and that the boundaries of said precinct be established as follows: Beginning at a point on the Greenbrier River at what is known as Pine island, thence a straight line to the Forks of Brush Run, thence a straight line to Nottingham's field on the point of the main dividing ridge, and with the water shed of said ridge, to the County Road, near W. S. Darnell's thence with said road to the Mud Bridge corner to the Bartow precinct and with the same down Mud Bridge run to the Greenbrier River, thence a straight line crossing said river to O. W. S. Gum's residence, thence a straight line to a point north of Greathouse's store corner to precinct No. 1, and 5, thence a straight line to a point on the end of the Burner Mountain, on a line of the Durbin precinct as established in 1905, said last line mentioned to include J. K. Hinkle P. K. Kramer and Walter Moyers, in the Bartow precinct, thence with said Burner Mt. to the John McClure Farm near the County line between Pocahontas and Randolph County and with same to the Hosterman precinct, line, and with the same to Greenbrier River thence up same to the beginning. And the voting place in said precinct shall be as heretofore fixed by this Court.

And it is further ordered by the Court that voting precinct No. 8, Burner, be and the same is hereby discontinued.

A well meaning foolish friend approached a leading farmer with the proposition that he run for office. The reply was sharp, short, and to the point. He allowed he was having enough trouble now getting hold of enough money to pay his income tax without fooling with anybody's office, where he would have to move to town and spend money for a living.

FROST

Miss Pauline Pennybacker, who has been sick with typhoid fever, is getting along nicely. Dr. Jordan is attending her.

Mrs. Cronin Bussard, who has been seriously sick, is some better at this writing. Hope she may soon be well.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shrader of the Hill country, are very sick.

Mr. and Mrs Taylor Townsend are on the sick list.

Ed Hiner, of Ronceverte, spent a few days with his little daughter, who is staying with her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Clay Dreppard.

We are sorry our school had to close owing to the illness of the teacher Miss Mary Pritchart. We hope for her early recovery.

We have young boys and girls in this section who need schooling but it seems the very sight of a school house is a terror to them and their parents. This law shonld be strictly enforced. It was passed, became a law and should be carried out.

Sherman Gibson showed us a nice bunch of calves that he intends keeping over. He is one of our progressive farmers.

Eugene Sharp's family has been on the sick list the past week.

Wm. Pennybacker met with a painful accident one day last week while working on the Warn railroad, one of the steel rails falling on his foot and mashing it.

A. H. Sharp, who has been sick with mumps, is better.

Speaking of the Flu which is raging through our county and town—we remember back January 10, 1890, the great epidemic, a disease called LaGrippe spread over a large part of the world. It was a kind of influenza or epidemic catarrh. It frequently resulted in pneumonia or inflamation of the lungs and proved fatal. In Paris, Vienna, Berlin and Switzerland it reached its height. The number of deaths in New York Jan. 1st was 196. It interfered with business in Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston and Utica, N. Y., and our opinion is that the disease in our country today is the same.

We see that Mr. A. A. Sharp is a candidate for the office of assessor on the Republican ticket. We are glad to hear it, although we are not of that party. In offices, such as this, party principles are not an issue. Mr. Sharp is well fitted to fill the office he seeks—educated, a good farmer, a good judge of live stock, a breeder of prize winners, and of a genial disposition—a man who supports church, law and order in his community, a friend to every honest man or woman regardless of social or financial caste and an uncompromising foe of dishonest ones. We hope he is elected.

Ervin Houdyshell left here about ten days ago for Akron, Ohio, to visit his son who was sick. While returning his son became very ill and was left at Durbin. He is not expected to live. The father also became seriously ill with pneumonia and is now at the home of Letcher McLaughlin near Dunmore, with but little hope for his recovery.

GREENBANK

The finals in High school are over, and most of the students made a very credible standing.

A new course is to be offered in the second semester of the school year—a course in Bible Study. We are particularly fortunate in having secured for the teacher of this course Mrs. D. M. Monroe. Mrs. Monroe has had wide experience in this branch of work, holds a B. L. degree from George Washington University, and we gladly welcome her to our faculty.

Miss Vanscoy entertained the O. G. last week at the residence of Mr. W. A. Gladwell. After the program delightful refreshments were served, and a pleasant social evening was spent. New officers for the coming semester were elected at this meeting as follows: Se Foran Sittend, Lucille Oliver; Se For Sittend, Lillian Beard; Se Boc Weard, Hunter Arbogast; Se Hoard Weard, Blanche Patterson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gladwell have been sick the past week with mumps.

Franccnia Ervine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Ervine, died at her home in Arbovale last week. We extend our sincerest sympathy to the parents.

Julian Nottingham has returned home from Florida, where he has been living the past few weeks for his health.

Mr. Rosenberger gave a very interesting talk in chapel. His subject was David and Goliath.

T. S. McNeel is running for the nomination for Clerk of the Circuit Court. Here's hoping that he will be nominated and elected. This office requires more than ordinary ability to fill satisfactorialy, besides familiarity with court procedure and legal forms. All of these Mr. McNeel has. In addition he is painstaking and obliging.

Mrs. W. T. Hogsett died at her home at Millpoint February 8, 1920, aged about 70 years, after a long illness. Her maiden name was Kelley, a daughter of the late William Kelley, of Huntersville District. She is survived by her husband and their children, W. L. Hogsett, Mrs. Oliver Wilson, Mrs. Wallace Dilley and Miss Demma Hogsett. She was a good christian woman, for many years a member of the M. E. Church.

SEEING DIXIE LAND FROM AN AUTO

EXTRACTS FROM A NOTE BOOK BY D. L. BARLOW

THE ORANGE

From some cause while touring Florida, I have been especially interested in the orange, grapefruit and tangerine groves. I will not give the reason, I know there is not a reader young or old, of The Times who could not guess. This is not the first thing I have left for my readers to guess, but it is the easiest.

More than four hundred years ago Ponce de Leon, the Spanish cavalier, seeker after new lands as well as a fountain of youth, landed near St. Augustine. He established friendly relations with the Indians and explored a good portion of Florida. I at that time (if I remember correctly) was not touring this state in on auto, and therefore cannot personally state whether or not there were orange trees here. However I am informed that it is believed Ponce de Leon brought the seed or the fruit— seeds from which he scattered as he traveled from place to place. This seed scattered either by design or accident is thought to have germinated, took root and thus was laid the foundation of the great citrus fruit industry of the Land of Sunshine and Flowers.

After Ponce de Leon's day Florida was once more left to the Indian tribes and it is supposed the seedling trees grew up and bore fruit. This fruit was pleasant to the taste of the Indians who were supposed to have started small groves around or near their camping places and years afterwards when the Spanish adventurers came again they found the orange well established and looked upon it as the best of the many fruits of the land. The Spanish found that the orange thrived best on high ground and usually selected what is called hammock land for their groves.

The foregoing sketch of the origin of the orange industry of this State is based on what is supposed to be good authority and while my personal experience extends back only to November 3, 1920, yet from what I can learn, I am of the opinion that the orange was here when Ponce de Leon came, for the tree in its wild state is found in thickets where-on the foot of man—white or red—has not trod for centuries, if ever. The late Geo. White, of Pocahontas once said: "The blackberry is a natural production of the Laurel Creek soil." So I am of the opinion that the orange is a natural production of the soil of certain sections of Florida and was found here with the live oak, the palmetto and the pine.

While a part of the above is conjecture, yet one thing I do know about the orange is we have many different kinds. I had not been but a few days in the State before I learned this. While walking two or three miles east of the city of DeLand I noticed a beautiful grove and stopped at the house to get a few oranges for my folks. You know that any excuse is better than none. I found that the grove was owned and managed by a Mrs. Woods, a Kentucky lady. "She said to me, "You will find the ripest and sweetest oranges on the last row in the grove. Go out there and help yourself. I there learned that there is as much difference between the different varieties of oranges as there is of different variesies of apples. Of the many kinds of oranges I only remember the following: The King, the Blood, the Indian River, the Pineapple, Enterprise Seedless, the early and late Valencis, etc.

Oranges of the same variety may differ greatly in flavor depending upon the stage of ripeness. You know there is a great difference between a green apple and a ripe apple. There is just as much difference between a ripe and an unripe orange. A large portion of the fruit picked and shipped north early in the season is too green. A Mr. Graddick who ownes a grove near Haines City and makes a business of shipping direct to the consumer told me when I was in his grove last Sunday that he turned down all orders received before the holidays. He said, 'I would rather loose a customer than to ship him unripe fruit." Oranges, like the apple, to be of the best and sweetest flavor must be tree ripened. When I first began to sample oranges in early November I found it difficult to find one sufficiently ripe to suit the taste. The oranges that have been allowed to hang on the tree through the winter and spring are sweeter and juicier than those picked in the fall. I think the grower makes a great mistake in allowing his unripe fruit to go to the consumer.

Florida has been greatly favored by nature for the growing of oranges, yet perfection in this line cannot be attained only through painstaking and scientific methods. Every detail of the business requires attention. It is even necessary that the seed planted by the nurseryman be of a kind that will produce a splendid root system and a sturdy stalk upon which to bud the variety desired.

In speaking of budding it might be well to add that the orange industry has progressed from the old seedling trees to the budded stock and the budded stock has been improved from time to time until now it is considered to be as nearly perfect as the ingenuity of man and the sunshine and rain of Florida can produce.

Now when the grove man has selected ground, prepared same and set out his trees, his real work has just begun. If he neglects his grove all is lost. I have seen many groves that are nothing but disease breeders and eye sores. It requires from three to five years of intensive cultivation, proper fertilization and pruning, as well as spraying to guard against insect pests before the trees are brought into bearing. One cannot hope to attain success in the orange business without considerable expense and great labor. A grove owner, if he wishes to grow fruit—the kind that is full to the bursting point of sweetness, healthlulness, and delicious to the taste as well as pleasing to the eye, must be on the job and ready on a moment's notice to do away with any enemy that may tend to mar his fruit or blight his trees. The orange tree is an open book and you have but to look to read its condition. The leaf, the fruit, the growth, and the color will indicate whether or not the tree is receiving proper or improper nourishment and attention.

The orange is an evergreen tree, and never altogether dorment. It is necessary that the soil be kept in a state of cultivation. However, I am informed, the cultivation should be shallow to avoid injuring the root system and that a cover crop is desirable during the late summer and early fall. Fertilizer must be judiciously and abundantly used.

In the north one of the seasons which appeals to us is the spring when the apple trees are in full bloom the bees humming, the birds singing their best songs and all nature taking on new life. Last year's apple crop is gone and forgotten, but you are happy in anticipation of next fall's harvest. Now suppose you were to walk into your orchard on a fine May morning and find the summer rambo tree with leaves of a glossy dark green, twigs stout and strong, but loaded to the breaking point with sun-kissed and delicious tree ripened apples, and at the same time the tree white with bloom indicating that a new crop is being born and from a topmost limb a mocking bird is pouring forth its sweetest music. From this you may have a picture of the orange tree. It has been been my pleasure to see trees full of fruit and bloom at the same time. A stroll through a grove during the months of February and March when the trees are laden with fruit and blossoms and the air with perfume is an experience not soon to be forgotten. While my experience with the Florida climate has been limited yet I am of the opinion that nature intended the fruit to hang on the tree through the full twelve months of the year, so that it may absorb in its own peculiar way Florida's sunshine and showers.

It is interesting to watch the experienced picker as he skillfully clips the fruit from the tree, drops it carefully into the canvass bag and carefully transfers each bagful to the field crate. The crates are loaded on motor trucks and hauled to the packing house where the oranges are put through the washer, dryer and polisher and grader. Experts stand along the belt converyor and pick out all culls. The choice fruit drops into proper bins, from which it is wrapped in sanitary tissue paper and snugly packed into crates.

I am informed that some packers do not allow the fruit touched by the bare hand—that all workers from the pickers to the packers are required to wear white canvass gloves, and when you buy a certain brand you may rest assured that your hand is the first to touch the fruit when you remove it from the tissue wrapper.

The orange is the origin of the citrus fruit industry of Florida and its cultivation led to the introduction and improvement of the grape fruit, tangerine, lemon, lime kumpuat, etc. A number of these different fruits may be budded on the same stock and may be seen growing on the same tree with oranges.

MURDER AND ROBBERY

CAMP ON NORTH FORK OF CRANBERRY HELD UP

Last Friday night, a woods camp containing about thirty Slav laborers was sound asleep. The camp is located on the North Fork of Cranberry River within the county of Pocahontas. It is a part of the woods work of the Cherry River Boom and Lumber Company, with head-quarters at Richwood. The camp was a long building with all the men sleeping in bunks in one room. For the purpose of a hold up it might be termed to be well adapted to that kind of an attack, even as a Pullman car.

Out of the night three men came upon that camp and entered. The sleeping men were aroused to find a man with a pistol at each end of the camp, with an extra man to relieve them of their savings. The program moved along without a hitch until the robber reached the bunk of a Russian who had something over two thousand dollars on him, and he revolted.

Then one of the guards came forward swiftly and shot six holes into the protester, and after that no further resistence was made. The Russian died instantly.

The men gathered up about ten thousand dollars in currency, six thousand dollars in checks, and some watches and jewelry. They went together a short distance until they reached the waters of Williams River and there they seem to have separated

A telegram was received at this place Saturday giving word of the occurrence. On Sunday a young man of Austrian nationality came out of the woods from the general direction of the scene of the robbery and attracted a good deal of attention under the circumstances from the fact that he was bare headed, his shoes badly worn, his face any hands badly scratched, and having a general appearance of having fled through the woods. He was not arrested at the time, but the word was sent to Marlinton, and Policeman R. K. Burns went after him.

The stranger struck the railroad near Seebert and hit the ties for the outside world. He walked eighteen miles. In the meantime, Mr. Burns had taken a ride on a railroad motorcycle and had run to Renick and got off there and sent the car back, and started to walk back towards Pocahontas County, thoroughly convinced that he would meet the man coming. Near Renick, he met him and took him by holding a revolver on him.

When he was searched the sum of $2280.00 in currency was found on him in a loose roll. He was brought to Marlinton, Monday, and has been held for the Cranberry affair. He claims to have won the money playing poker at Elkins the night of the robbery.

He gave his name as James Antphor and claims that he registered as an alien in the draft from Durbin in 1917.

HILLSBORO HIGH SCHOOL

Four students were enrolled last week, Hazel, Lessy and Brent Shields who moved near here from Tucker county where they had been attending the Parsons high school, and Martha Phares from Arbovale.

Miss Harbourne spent Easter with Lilly Sharp at her home near Marlinton.

The Graded school will have a program in the Auditorium Friday night April 1st.

Miss Nutter took her general science class to a large cave Friday afternoon to study rock formation under ground.

The Marlinton High School play will be given here Saturday night April 2.

Several students went home to spend Easter.

The Normal Senior class visited three rural schools last week. They report good work being done in the surrounding schools.

Dr. Russell H. Conwell will deliver his great lecture, "Acres of Diamonds." here Tuesday night April 5.

The Sophomore class conducted assembly services Monday morning.

SPECIAL RATES TO S. S. CONVENTION

A special railroad rate of one and a half fare has been secured for the delegates who will attend the State Sunday School Convention at Charleston May 10, 11 and 12. The directions are to secure a certificate from the station agent at the time you buy your ticket to Charleston. This certificate, when endorsed by W. A. Snow, Sunday School secretary, at Charleston, will be good for half fare back home. Don't confuse "certificate" with "receipt." Some stations do not keep certificates, but the agent can tell you the station where certificates can be obtained.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Maybelle Grimes Beeler was bern September 8, 1899, and departed this life January 2, 1921. She was united in marriage to Joseph Clay Beeler of Clinton, Illinois. Her death after a long illness was due to typhoid fever and complications.

Mrs. Beeler was converted and became a member of the M. E. Church about five years ago. She has been a successful teacher in our public schools. Her work and interest seemed to be among the young people to which she was specially adapted, and eminently qualified both in school and church work. Not only was she naturally adapted to this work, but she prepared herself most thoroughly to do the work she liked best, most efficiently. She was of delicate build, and was never very strong. She accomslished her tasks by force of will rather than by strength of body. Her sweet disposition won for her at once a place in the young heart, and brought gladness and sunshine into the lives of all who knew her. It can be truthfully said of Mrs. Beeler, "She went about doing good." As a wife she was affectionate, and obedient, as a daughter she was tender and kind, as a friend she was wise and invaluable; as a christian was modest, humble and pious. When the heart is clean and pure with no mists of doubt, nor clouds of sin then by faith we can see our master. One day we shall slip away from these scenes of earth, gently as the mist is lifted along the shore, and closing our eyes on all familiar things we shall open them to look upon the unveiled face of Him who said, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God.'

We must be content while here to "see as through a glass darkly," to know of things in part and not in their fullness; but when the day breaks, and the shadows in which we now walk shall flee away, then we shall see clearly, and know more perfectly. There shall be no mysteries in that world to come. There we shall see clearly, and "shall know even as we are known."

Rev. J. H. Light, D. D. of Marlinton, and Rev. C. B. Rutledge of Frost, conducted the funeral services.

Mrs. Beeler leaves a husband, mother and father, an aged grandmother, three brothers and one sister and a host of friends to mourn what seems to be an untimely departure. How sadly we miss her! But memory is more pleasant because she was here, and heaven is richer because she has gone. The flowers are fresher because of the dew that has fallen, though it is now gone, so are lives better who knew her though she has slipped away for awhile, we shall meet her in the sweet by and by.

CHARGED WITH ROBBERY

Richard Kennedy, of Boyer, was before Squire A. E. Smith on Wednesday morning for a preliminary hearing on the charge of holding up and robbing John Slayton, of Boyer, on Monday night, March 21. Kennedy was held under bond to await the action of the grandjury. He is charged with entering the house of his kinsman, John Slayton, in the night time, with pistol and flashlight in hand, and demanding money. Mr. Slayton is 72 years of age and getting feeble. He asked the intruder if he was not fooling. The reply was a heavy blow in the face, which knocked him over. When he got up he found a pistol presented at his forehead, and he gave up his money, about $200. Slayton thinks he recognized Kennedy by his voice.

Kennedy was arrested at Marlinton Saturday morning and lodged in jail. He is about 28 years of age and a native of Pocahontas. He has not lived here the past ten years. His wife died about a year ago, and he has two children who live with their grandparents at Grafton.

WANTED—Cattle to pasture this summer on my range on Brier Knob.
Mrs. Lou McNulty.

Editor of Pocahontas Times:

I read in a recent issue of your paper the protest, in regard to the sale of the County Farm for the Poor, written by "X" and I heartily agree with him. It has been disappointing that the issue has not been agitated more freely.

If you will allow me space in your paper I wish to add a few statements as a supplement to the above mentioned protest.

The Home for the Poor, being a County Institution, should be so located and managed as to give the best service to the greatest number of its citizens at a reasonable cost. In my opinion this can be done at the present location as well as any where else. The tendency in recent years has been to take such institutions out of town rather than into town. It is true that our poor are not as well provided for at present as they should be but the improvements needed can be made on the present location just as well as on a new one. The County already owns this farm and I do not think it can be sold for more than ten or twelve thousand dollars. Some of the farming land is a little rough but very fertile and in good condition. Where can we get as good location for the same price? Shall we make a change simply for the sake of a change? Certainly not unless there is some advantage to be derived from from a change. The inmates quarters would be almost worthless for any other use and a total loss if the farm was sold. I do not know the sentiment of the people in regard to this matter but I am sure if they are properly informed they will be decidedly against a change of location.

It is true that there is some disadvantage in having the Home located in one end of the County. This objection would be more valid if we did not already have one and was establishing a new one. For several years the average has been about one admission each year. At this rate the additional cost for transportation to the present location will be very little.

The number of inmates at present is seven; 3 men, 3 women and 1 child. Three are feeble minded, one is an arrested case of tuberculosis, two are crippled from chronic diseases and the child (4 years old) is healthy. All except two are active and enjoy outdoor life. One of the crippled can walk some but the other very little. All of them have lived practically all their lives in the country and certainly feel more at home there than in town.

The loss to this community or the gain to some other from the removal of the Home would be very slight, as the number of inmates is so small.

The County should provide these unfortunate individuals a home, as near like a home in a well regulated family among their own kin, as it can. With a few changes and a comparatively little additional cost this can be done on the present location as well or better than any where else.

I would suggest the following changes:

1 The inmates at present are housed fairly comfortable but some improvements are certainly desirable. They have no bath room. This should be provided with hot and cold water. Running water (gravity system) has been installed in the Superintendants house and could be extended to the inmates quarters with very little additional cost.

2 At present both renting of the farm and letting of the contract for keeping the inmates is done by competitive bid. This is a very democratic method but a very bad system and can never give the best results. The County Court should select the Superintendant because of his and his wife's special fitness for the position. I mention the Superintendant's wife because she has to deal with the inmates as much or more than he does. The Superintendant should be paid a salary or employed by contract and everything on the farm should be owned by the County. I understand the contract system has worked well in Greenbrier County for many years.

3 The County should employ and pay a nurse, matron or attendand to look after the inmates. She should see that they bathe regularly, that their quarters are kept clean, attend to their clothing, nurse them when sick and give them such other attention as they may need. This position would not require an expensive employee. At present the Superintendant's wife performs these duties. She has all she can attend to properly without these additional cares.

Let us hear from others, both pro and con.

—By costing less to run

QUALITY and Economy have brought Stewart success. For Stewart Trucks built eight years ago are still working profitably for their owners; earning daily satisfaction and paying dividends on the investment.

They are sturdy trucks—designed right, built right, and priced right. The very first ones made still serve the needs of trade. Their first cost is $200 to $700 less than the average price of other trucks, and the saving continues throughout the truck's long life—on upkeep, on repairs, tires, gasoline and oil.

VOL. XXXVIIII NO 30 | MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, APRIL 7, 1921 | $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

A ROAD BILL

A road bill, known as the Lantz bill, is before the legislature, proposing a series of State highways to connect the various county seat towns of the State. There are eighteen routes in all. The following three routes are to connect Pocahontas. The route to Webster Springs will go out from Valley Head, in Randolph county, and thence connect with the north and south road from Princeton to Wheeling by way of Beckley, Fayetteville, Summersville, Sutton, Clarksburg, Pine Grove, New Martinsville, Moundsville.

Route 2. Beginning at Parkersburg in Wood county, and running in a northerly direction by the shortest route, so as to connect Elizabeth, Grantsville, Glenville, Weston, Buckhannon, and Elkins and via Huttonsville, Durbin and Bartow to the Virginia state line on the route to Monterey, to be named and known as The Parkersburg-Staunton highway.

Route No. 5. Beginning at Romney in Hampshire county and running by the shortest practical route so as to connect Moorefield, Petersburg and Franklin and to Bartow on the Parkersburg-Staunton highway.

Route No. 6. Beginning at Huttonsville in Randolph county and running by the shortest practical route so as to connect Marlinton, Lewisburg, Union and Hinton.

Tax Commissioner Hallahan has ruled that all male persons over fifty years of age, except paupers and insane persons must pay an annual capitation road tax of one dollar. The assessors have been notified to collect this tax. Heretofore all men over 50 have been exempt. The law reads af follows:

"The county court of each county shall levy for road purposes capitation tax of one dollar on each male inhabitant of the county who has attained the age of twenty-one years and not liable to labor on the roads and pay the commutation mentioned in sec. 60 of this act.

S. L. Brown, local weather observer, reports as follows for the month of March. Total rainfall 3.49 inches; greatest in 24 hours, 1.34 inches on the 3rd; a trace of snow; rain on 10 days. Two clear days; 5 cloudy and 24 partly cloudy. The hottest was 78 degrees on the 20th and the coldest was 10 degrees on the 30th. On the 28th the thermometer ranged 44 degrees, from 26 to 70. The average for the month was 45 degrees; the mean maximum being 60 degrees, and the mean minimum 30 degrees. Killing frosts on the 29th and 30th, and thunder storms on the 14th 16th and 18th.

A decided effort is being made by the citizens of Huntersville District to secure the services of Dr. Raymond B. Lockridge, to return and take up the work of his father, the late Dr. J. B. Lockridge. In reply to the petitioners he says he feels no higher tribute could be paid him nor one he appreciated more highly than to be asked to take up the yoke so suddenly laid down by his father. He has the matter under consideration and will be in West Virginia soon, and talk over the matter with those who desire his return.

Dr. J. E. Flow, of the Alderson Presbyterian church, and the following members of the building committee of that church, L. E. Johnson, John L. George and W. G. Smith were in town looking over the Presbyterian church building, with a view of building a somewhat similar church in Alderson.

J. Steele McClintic died at his home at Renick, April 3, 1921, aged 81 years. He was a former resident of this county, and a Confederate soldier. One of his children is Mrs. J. C. Maupin, of Marlinton.

Col. W. C. Householder has bought the ice plant, and has it running and making ice. Carl L. Sheets is in charge as chief engineer. Extensive alterations and repairs are contemplated.

Hon. W. E. Baker, of Elkins, has been appointed Federal Judge for the Northern District of West Virginia, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge A. G. Dayton. Judge Baker was a former chairman of the Republican Executive Committee.

The venerable Wm. Clendennen, of the Levels, spent a few days with his son, C. C. Clendenen, this week.

COUNTY COURT

County Court was in session on Monday with W. H. Barlow president, and Dr. U. H. Hannah, and E. H. Williams, commissioners, present.

P. L. B. Brown, A. O. Pyles and L. S. Cochran recommended for notary commissioners.

Notice to be served on Paul Golden to remove obstructions from road near Cloverlick.

Walter Meeks allowed $300 to be expended on new road from Cloverlick to Stony Bottom.

J. W. Ziegler and J. W. Carpenter's estate relieved from erroneous taxation.

Mrs. Melinda Wees, a poor person, allowed $8 per month for support of children.

Mrs. Susan Jinks allowed $10 per month for support of James Herold.

Notice to be served on J. W. Riley and Sam'l Ervin for road change through lands.

Mrs. G. W. Sharp qualified as notary.

Sheriff directed to get prices on blood hound.

Order entered to sell poor farm at private sale.

Court meets again Tuesday May 3.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hill, their twin daughters, Leila and Orda celebrated their tenth birthday Tuesday, April 5th, by asking a number of their school mates of about their age. Refreshments were served and the little folks had a fine time playing games in the yard and house. It was a lovely evening. Each one brought a nice little gift which was very much appreciated. The little guests were the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Smith; Edith and Ethel. Florence Price, Elizabeth Williams, Lovie Haddax, Grace Johnson, Annas Cole, Mary Richardson, Madaline Shinaut, Lilian Zimmerman, Margie McCarty, Naomi Rexrode, Clytie Shinaut, Mabel McNeil, Alice Waugh, Harold Johnson.

Forest fires in many parts of the mountains this week, and the wardens end their neighbors have been kept busy. Dry windy days have been bad for fires, but the damp nights have given the fighters a chance. In Buckley and Marlin mountains, on Droop and the head of Stamping Creek the fires have raged.

The Cloverlick band is being reorganized. The position of instructor has been offered to S. O. Gum.

NEW ASSESSMENT OF REAL ESTATE ADVOCATED

The State Tax Commissioners addressing a conference of state assessors pleaded for uniformity in taxation and co-operation of the assessors to that end.

Commissioner Hallihan said assessors are face to face with the fact that "our system of property taxation has reached the point of collapse. Our system is tottering because we have failed to make of it a system that gives equitable, fair, uniform assessment, I hazard the prediction that no system of advalorem taxation which permits of the inequities that we find in our day to day existence now, can sustain itself.

"The first step that must be taken in the direction of bettering conditions is to bring about at once a complete reassessment of real estate of the state.

"The present legislature should not only provide a method of placing the property of the state upon the books at its full value, but it should likewise submit to the people for ratification or rejection a constitutional amendment to the effect that the rate of taxation for all purposes should not exceed $1.25 or $1.50 on the $100, with the proviso that in exceptional cases it could be further increased by a two-thirds or four-fifths vote of the people.

The rate in West Virginia in many places has become so high it is alarming. In fact, it has become so high the people generally are not going to tolerate it much longer."

GREENBANK

There will be a combined entertainment and box supper in the High School Auditorium, Thursday night, April 14th. The purpose of this is to replace the Seniors' invitation money which was lost in the recent fire. The Senior class treasurer had collected the money but had not mailed the order and did not reach the house in time to save it. No admission will be charged but we hope the girls will all bring boxes and the boys come determined to have a good supper regardless of the price. The hearty cooperation of the people in neighboring towns wil be greatly appreciated.

Miss Stella Malcohn, of Monterey, is visiting relatives and friends in this section.

Mr. Rosenberger has gone to Roanoke, Va., to attend conference. We hope he will return to us for another year.

Earl Arbogast has moved into the Odd Fellows Hall for the time being.

The road between Dunmore and Greenbank has been scraped recently and is now in very good condition for cars.

MY AUTOBIOGRAPHY

I was born on the first day of January, 1906 in a little neighborhood not far from the Virginia border. My parents were very proud of me because I was a New Year Gift.

As I was very soft minded I cannot remember much that happened during my childhood days. I am still affected somewhat by the same trouble.

Whon I was seven years of age we moved to Shady Nook Farm, which is my present home. I had gone to school some before we went to Shady Nook for I well remember one cold winter morning when I fell into the creek. My uncle rescued me but has since said that he was very sorry for having done so.

I started to school the morning followind my arrival at Shady Nook and have been going ever since although I have not been present every morning when the roll was called.

Along with the other events of those early days my old maid sister went to West Virginia Wesleyan where she learned to be an English and History teacher and just as sure as I frame a sentence which I think is correct in every detail she finds some grammatical error in it.

On the twenty-fifth day of October my only brother came. While we were rejoicing over the fact thai a boy had come to our home to stay the flu took my little sister away. That yeas was a very hard one and my total school attendance amounted to only thirty-five days out of the six months.

The past few years have moved along in just about the usual manner. I have frequent attacks of dropsy and heart failure—that is: I drop into a chair and do not have the heart to get up, but am thankful that these do not last long.

About the middle of August, 1920, I went to the little city of Raywood, where I spent three weeks and then I came to G. D. H. S. I have managed to exist through one and one-half semester of my Freshman year. What subjects I cannot carry I have to drag. Being a true hearted farmerette, agriculture appeals to me most.

I pretend I am Daddy's little boy,
Wish I were at home to help haul hay:
But I have another wish, oh joy!
I want to be a farmer's wife some day

HOW AILSIE SAVED THE BIBLE

It was in the year 1555, when Queen Mary sat upon the English throne and filled the land with trouble because of her terrible persecution of the Protestants. In the west of England was a little village called Harrant. At one end of the hamlet standing apart from the few dwellings scattered along either side of its single street, was the blacksmith's shop, with its small house just back of it, and a tiny garden in the rear.

The smith's wife was dead, but his bonnie, blue-eyed little daughter kept his house. When lonely, she pushed aside a small panel in the end of the shop and crept in and stayed with him, unless the sound of voices or hoof-beats on the road drove her away, for she was a shy child.

One day when she had stolen in, her father was standing behind the door.

He had a sliver in his big hand, with which he touched the side of the great black beam in the corner. Suddenly a block of wood fell forward, disclosing a small opening. Into this he thrust a dark, leather-bound book, and quickly, but carefully, fitted the chip into the place, so that no sign of the hidden space remained.

Seeing his child, he started and said sternlt: "Ailsie, child! how dare you spy upon your father?"

"O father! I am not spying!" said the blue eyes filled with tears.

"Of course, you were not. I was wrong to say so, child!" said the smith remorsefully; "but you saw what I did."

"You put the Holy Book into the beam, father. It is a fine hiding-place, too, for neither priest nor soldier can find it there."

"I would you knew not its place of concealment, for the knowledge may bring you into danger, lass. You must never betray it. When Parson Stow went away to foreign lands, he gave me the sacred Word, and told me to keep it as my life. For, by the queen's orders, all the Bibles have been gathered up and burned, and we are forbidden to read from its holy pages. This is the only one between here and the sea, and it is more precious than the crown jewels. You are fifteen, Ailsie, and old enough to understand, so I told you all."

"You need not fear, father," said Ailsie, firmly, "I will not tell." But the rosy cheeks grew pale as she remembered all that her promise might mean.

Now there was a certain priest that came sometimes to Harrant to preach to the villagers. But, being all Protestants, they would neither listen to him nor pay him tithes. He was very angry at their behavior, and spied about until he became sure there was a Bible among them; and he knew it was in the blacksmith's possession, because he was the only man in the village who could read.

After trying in vain to find the Hold Book, he went to the nearest town and lodged information against the village officers there; and one day when the smith chanced to be away from home, an officer and six men marched into Harrant.

They called upon the cottagers to surrender their Bibles; but one and all declared they had none. Then the soldiers searched every dwelling and threatened to burn every one, unless the Book was found.

But that did not suit the priest at all. He would get fewer tithes than ever if the village was destroyed. So he told the soldiers to let the rest of the villagers alone, for the Bible was in the blacksmith's posession. It was getting late, and the soldiers were in a great hurry to be gone. So they resolved to burn the two little buildings, and thus destroy the Book quickly and surely.

At the first sight of the strange men, Ailsie had fled through the garden, out upon the moor, and hidden among the furze bushes. She was terrified, for she feared they might find her and demand the hiding place of the precious Bible.

It was growing dark when she saw a bright light against the sky, and sprang to her feet. Her father's house was on fire! The sight made the shy child a heroine. Forgetting all about her danger, she only remembered that she must save the Bible at all cost.

Swift as an arrow she sped homeward.

The soldiers were intent upon piling straw around the burning buildings, and did not see the little figure that darted in between the house and the shop, whose thatched roofs were all ablaze. Breathless and determined, she pushed aside the panel and stumbled through the blinding smoke.

The hungry flames scorched her dress and her hair, and burned and blistered her hands and face before she secured what she sought. But at last she reached the Bible and fled out into the open air.

No one had noticed her in the darkness, and she crept safely into the little garden, and sank down choked and suffering among the vines.

But she felt that the Bible was in danger even now. She slipped off her woolen petticoat and wrapped it around the volume; then, digging with her little burned hands in the soft soil, she buried it under an immense cabbage. Then she crawled upon her hands and knees to the spring at the foot of the garden, where her father found her, an hour later, half unconscious with pain and fright. He never ceased, while he lived, to praise his little daughter for her brave deed of that day.

The Bible always remained in the family, and years and years afterward Ailsie's great-granddaughter carried it when she followed her Puritan husband across the sea, to the lonely coast of New England.—King's Builders.

KILLING ON THE C. & I.

Last Saturday evening about dark William Carr, arrived at W. H. Blankenships, who lives near Wees Siding out on the C. & I. R. R about 13 miles from Elkins, hunting trouble He found it and was filled with buckshot by some one in the Blankenship house. Sunday about 11 o'clock he was brought to the Davis Memorial Hospital here and died that evening. The remains were taken today out on the C & I. train at 12:45 and will be buried on Middle Mountain about 5 o'clock this evening. He leaves a widow and two children and was about 33 years of age. The State Police went out and arrested three men at the place of the shooting. They had been in jail here and the officers of the law have been investigating the matter ever since and and after a final hearing before Justice Smith this morning W. H. Blankenship and Pete Roberts were held for the Grand Jury without bail and sent to jail and the other party released.—Randolph Enterprise.

Pete Roberts, mentioned above, is a citizen of Pocahontas County, a son of Jesse Roberts who lives at the Taylor place on Little Laurel of Williams River.

WARWICK

The health of our community is good, except that Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Landis have been very sick for a few days, but are some better now.

W. J. Hebb came home recently from camp on Elk river, where he has been employed in the lumber woods for some time.

Charley Waugh attended the sale of J. B. Sutton at Greenbank last week.

F. S. Weiford and his son Kennie motored to Hillsboro last Saturday to visit their relatives.

Our Sunday school will be organized at Mt. Pleasant, April 10th, at 10:30 a. m. We extend an invitation to all who can to be present.

Our school is nearly to a close. It has been a very successful term—taught by B. F. E. Wooddell and Miss Mattie Sue Lewis.

S. P. Landis has bought a Ford car.

We are having ideal farming weather at present and the farmers are getting along nicely with their work. Some have sown their oats and are ready to plant corn.

J. E. Carwell, owner of the Monterey Hotel, Monterey, Highland, county, Va., mysteriously disappeared from his home on Saturday night, March 26. Since then no trace of him can be found. He had some money, and his pistol is not in the room. A thorough search by his neighbors and the county authorities has failed to bring to light any clue as to his whereabouts. Carwell is a man of middle age, with three motherless children.

JOHN LEDERER

The First Expedition from the head of Pemaeoncock, alias York River (due West) to the top of the Apalataean Mountains

Upon the ninth of March, 1669, (with three Indians whose names were Magtakanh, Hopottoguoh and Naunnugh) I went out at the falls of Pemaeoncock, alias York-River in Virginia, from an Indian village called Shickehamany, and lay that night in the woods, encountering nothing remarkable, but a rattle-snake of an extraordinary length and thickness, for I judged it two yards and a half or better from head to tail, and as big about as a mans arm: by the distention of her belly, we believed her full with young; but having killed and opened her, found there a small squirrel whole; which caused in me a double wonder: first, how a reptile should catch so nimble a creature as a squirrel; and having caught it how he could swallow it entire. The Indians in resolving my doubts, plunged me into greater astonishment, when they told me that it was usual in these serpents, when they lie bask in the sun, to fetch down these squirrels from the top of the trees, by fixing their eyes upon them; the horrour of which strikes such an affrightment into the little beast, that he has no power to hinder himself from tumbling down into the jaws of his enemy, who takes in all his sustenance without chewing, his teeth serving him onely to offend withal. But I rather believe what I have heard from others, that these serpents climb the trees, and surprise their prey in the nest.

The next day falling into marish grounds between the Pemaeonesck and the head of the River Matapeneugh, the heaviness of the way obliged me to cross Pemaeoncock, where its North and South branch (called Ackmick) joyn in one. In the peninsula made by these two branches a great Indian king called Tottopottoma was heretofore slain in battle, fighting for the Christians against the Mahocks and Nahyssans, from whence it retains his name to this day. Traveling thorow the woods, a doe seized by a wild cat crossed our way: the miserable creature being even spent and breathless with the burden and cruelty of her rider, who having fastened on her shoulder, left not sucking out her bloud until she sunk down under him: which one of the Indians perceiving, let fly a lucky arrow, which piercing him through the belly, made him quit his prey already slain, and turn with a terrible grimas at us; but his strength and spirits failing him, we escaped his revenge, which had certainly ensued, were not his wound mortal. This creature is something bigger than our English fox, of a reddish grey colour, and in figure every way agreeing with an ordinary cat: fierce, ravenous and cunning; for finding the deer (upon which they delight most to prey) to swift for them, they watch upon branches of trees, and as they walk or feed under, jump down upon them. The fur of the wilde cat, though not very fine, is yet esteemed for its virtue in taking away aches and pains, being worn next to the body; their flesh, though rank as a dogs, is eaten by the Indians.

The eleventh and twelfth, I found the ways very uneven and cumbred with bushes.

The thirteenth, I reached the first spring of Pemaeoncock, having crossed the river four times that day, by reason of its many windings; but the water was so shallow, that it hardly wet my horses patterns. Here a little under the surface of the earth, I found flat piecee of petrified matter, on one side solid stone, but on the other side isinglas, which I easily peeled off in flakes about four inches square: several of these pieces, with a transparent stone like crystal that cut glass, and a white marchasite that I purchased of the Indians, I presented to Sir William Berkley, Governour of Virginia.

The fourteenth of March, from the top of an eminent hill, I first decried that Apalataean mountains, bearing due west to the place I stood upon: their distance from me was so great, that I could hardly discern whether they were mountains or clouds, until my Indian fellow travellers prostrating themselves in adoration, howled out after a barbaroas manner, Okee paeze i.e. God is nigh.

The fifteenth of March, not far from this hill, passing over the South branch of the Rappahanock river, I was almost swallowed in a quicksand. Great herds of red and fallow deer I daily saw feeding; and on the hill-sides, bears crashing mast like swine. Small leopards I have seen in the woods, but never any lions, though their skins are much worn by the Indians. The wolves in these parts are so ravenous, that I often in the night feared my horse would be devoured by them, they would gather up and howl so close around him, though tethr'd to the same tree at whose foot I myself and the Indians lay; but the fires which we made, I suppose, scared them from worrying us all. Beaver and otter I met with at every river that I passed; and the woods were full of grey foxes.

Thus I travelled all the sixteenth; and on the seventeenth of March I reached the Apalataei. The air here is very thick and chill; and the waters issuing from the mountain-sides of a blue colour, and allumish taste.

The eighteenth of March, after I had in vain assayed to ride up, I alighted, and left my horse with one of the Indians, whilst with the other two I climbed up the rocks, which were so incumbered with bushes and brambles, that the ascent proved very difficult: besides the first precipice was so steep, that if I lookt down I was immediately taken with a swimming in my head; though afterwards it was more easie. The height of this mountain was very extraordinary: for notwithstanding I set out with the first appearance of light, it was late in the evening before I gained the top, from whence the next morning I had a beautiful prospect of the Atlantick Ocean washing the Virginia shore: but to the north and west, my sight was suddenly bounded by mountains higher than that I stood upon. Here did I wander in snow, for the most part, till the four and twentieth day of March, hoping to find some passage through the mountains; but the coldness of the air and earth together, seizing my hands and feet with numbness, put me to a ne plus ultra; and therefore having found my Indian at the foot of the mountain with my horse I returned back by the same way that I went.

BEEKEEPERS' MEETING

T. K. Massie, president of the West Virginia Beekeeperss' Association, left the city yesterday morning for his home in Mercer county.

He stated the beekeepers had an instructive and interesting meeting, that the hospitality shown the association by Governor MacCorkle and the sight-seeing trip and smoker given them at the Hotel Ruffner by the commissioner of agriculture, James H. Stewart, were very much enjoyed and appreciated.

He also stated the "horticulturists now fully realize the fact that instead of beekeeping being the small and unimportant business usually ascribed to it, it is one of the biggest propositions before the people at the present time."

"The amount of money received by horticulturists from the services of bees as cross-pollinators of their fruit is vastly greater than that accruing to the beekeepers themselves, and the money spent in bee keeping instead of being an expense, is a dividend paying investment," he said.

Mr. Massie and the secretary, W. Griffith, have given considerable of their time and money in the last few years to the advancement of the organization and to the education of the people to the use of modern appliances and methods of beekeeping.

"Congress and the legislature annually appropriate many thousands of dollars to the agricultural and horticultural departments, which is money well spent, yet the most essential factor to the horticulturist, the honey bee, goes unprotected and is subject to extinction from the effects of destructive diseases. It is hoped that the legislature now in session may see the importance of aiding the beekeepers and through them the horticulturist and the people in general by enabling them to obtain more of the life-sustaining food provided for mankind by the Allwise Creator," Mr. Massie said before leaving.—Charleston Gazette.

THE CROSS OF JESUS

By Anna L. Price

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
I let sin's burden fall;
Its heavy weight would crush me,
And Jesus bore it all.

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
I cast my doubts and fears;
I would anoint His head—His feet,
And bathe them with my tears.

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
I lay my sorrows too,
For the sufferings of God's children
Are neither small nor few.

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
I cast the joys of earth,
God gives so many blessings,
Of rich and untold worth.

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
Let little children sing,
And offer glad hosannas
To Christ their Lord and King.

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
The Church, at His right hand,
Built on the Rock of Ages,
The Rock on which we stand.

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
I lay me down to die;
Saved by his blood most precious,
Receive me, Lord, I cry.

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
Oh, sinners, come, draw near;
We soon shall see our Savior,
The time is almost here.

Beneath the cross of Jesus,
The Lamb for sinners slain,
Almighty God and Spirit,
The Trinity,—Amen.

A CARD

Mrs. Anna L. Price desires to thank the dear children of the Presbyterian S. S. Primary Department, for the very many nice letters they have written to her; and hopes this card may in some way come to their notice. Yes, "Grandma" Price highly prizes the letters that the S. S children have taken so much pains in writing, and she loves the dear little boys and girls of the primary S. S. Keep on singing your sweet hymns and reciting Scripture and learning about God.

"Jesus loves you, this I know,
For the Bible tells me so."

OUR
Vanishing Millions and State Taxation

Why does not West Virginia do as all other Gas Producing States have done—

TAX GAS?

WHY TAX GAS? - because

Ohio, Oklahoma, Texas and every other gas producing state is doing it.

There is no question about the constitutionality of a law imposing a tax on the gross revenues of gas pipeline companies.

The gas business is a monopolistic business and for the special privilege of amassing millions by monopoly an adequate license or tax should be imposed.

The gas supply of West Virginia is very rapidly being depleted and the state is having nothing left to show for it.

More than three fourths of the gas produced in West Virginia is being piped out of the state to the enrichment of the people of other states. Of the 278 billions of cubic feet available last year only 51 billions of feet were used by West Virginians.

If the gas companies undertake to pass the tax on to the people to pay the people of other states profiting by its use will pay it, as West Virginia has a Public Service Commission to prevent them passing it on to the people of our state for the small proportion of the gas they use.

Gas, flowing under the ground, like water flowing over its surface, in fact belongs to the people and the people should share in the millions it produces.

If this monopoly is not taxed the people will have to pay the state's bills out of their own pockets in the form of a direct state tax, or a gross sales tax, as is now proposed, which in fact is a form of direct taxation in disguise.

4 per cent on the $50,000,000 gross revenue of the gas companies will raise $2,000,000 in revenue and this is neither burdensome nor confiscatory, but reaonable and just.

And because—these companies have brow-beat and hood-winked our Legislatures and dodged it too long already.

Ohio has been collecting 4 per cent on the gross revenue of gas companies for many years and is collecting this on all the gas exported from West Virginia to that state. Maryland collects 2 per cent; Pennsylvania eight-tenths of one per cent; Oklahoma 2 per cent; Texas 3 per cent in like manner. Kansas collects 4 per cent on gross receipts and Louisiana has a provision in the State constitution giving the state the right to impose a license tax on severance of the natural resources of the state.

About one half of the gas exported from this state goes into Ohio on which that state collects 4 per cent while we get nothing.

The total available supply of gas in this state for last year was 278 billions cubic feet, of this amount only 51 billions feet were consumed by the people of the state. The local consumption is growing less every year and the exportation is growing larger. Eight years ago we used within the state about 33 per cent of the gas production. We are now using about 18 per cent.

The Women Should Act

Since the women have been enfranchised their letters and petitions will have as much weight and effect before the legislature as those of the men. They should not fail to express their views as any member of the legislature likes to know the views of his constitutents so he can properly represent them and he will take it as a favor if you write him. Do it now, as the session of the legislature is growing short.

This sentiment for taxing gas has been crystallized by the failure to collect the transportation tax on gas which has made a large deficit in the revenue of the state.

After you have read this pass it on to your neighbor to read and if you favor the tax on the gross revenues of the gas pipe line companies and believe we should at this late hour do something to partly retrieve our lost revenue from failure in the past to place an adequate tax on gas, and if you believe the people of West Virginia are entitled to some slight return for this great luxury which is nearly all going to other states to comfort, benefit and enrich their people, write your senators and representative at Charleston, and do it now, as some form of taxation must be provided at the present session of the legislature to raise the money the state must have.—Advertisement.

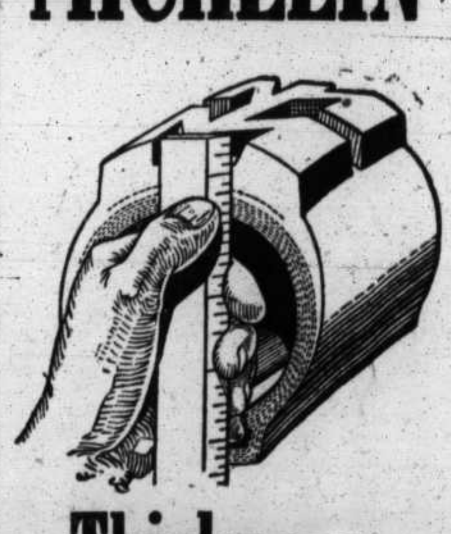
MICHELIN



Thickness

Before deciding on your next tire, have your dealer show you cross-sections of the various makes you are considering—so that you can measure the total thickness of the rubber and fabric used in building up the various makes.

You will find that Michelin Tires embody more of these mileage-giving materials. In the 34x4 Michelin Universal, for example, there is a solid though flexible mass of wear-resisting rubber and fabric almost an inch thick.

Every bit of the materials used is of the highest quality. Yet Michelins are moderate in price.

VOL. XXXVIIII NO 31 | MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, APRIL 14, 1921 | $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

CIRCUIT COURT

Circuit Court continues in session and there will be at least one more week after this week. The court is keeping pretty well up with the calendar, though some cases have been continued.

The case against the Italian, Nazareno Chambello, charged with killing Jim Persi, another Italian, was continued until the June term. A plea of insanity was entered. On last Tuesday night the jailer heard an uproar among the prisoners and upon investigation found this Italian hanging by the neck. He had taken a chain from his bunk. He was cut down, dead to the world, and brought to the Marlinton Hospital. He was soon revived.

The cases against Holmes Sharp and Si Bowers were continued.

George Burwell drew a six months sentence and $50 fine for carrying weapons. Also J. J. Prine, eight months and $100 for the same offense.

Three penitentiary sentences have been imposed. Two years for Harlan Gibson for moonshining; two years for John Paugh for grand larceny; two years for W. W. Wyatt for hitting a child with a rock. The latter has been given a lot of attention this court, and in addition to the above sentence has drawn 20 months in jail and several hundred dollars fine in nearly a dozen convictions for bootlegging.

Much of the day Wednesday was taken up with the case against J. B. McNeil for selling cider with a kick in it. The jury found a verdict of guilty, and Judge Sharp sentenced the defendant to three months in jail and a fine of $300.

A considerable sum has been subscribed by citizens of Marlinton to erect a pumping plant on Knapps Creek to connect with the town mains and thus secure an accessory water supply for the town which will be suitable for all purposes. The Knapps Creek water is certainly superior to that of most towns in purity. At times when the water is low in summer it might be safer to use by boiling the water used for drinking purposes. The same is true of the water supply from the hills now being used by some houses in Marlinton, which has been repeatedly reported unsafe, because of contamination with the bacillus of para-typhoid Dr. M. S. Wilson is pushing the enterprise, which has the sanction of the Town Council. It is deemed impracticable because of the great expense to pipe water under gravity from head of Indian Draft or the McLaughlin Spring, which would be an ideal source of water for the town.

A game warden asked us to call the attention of those who are inclined to break the game laws by fishing out of season and by spring hunting turkeys to two things—the penalties they are laying themselves liable to, and the mean advantage they are taking of those who do observe the law. In other words, if you can't be a good citizen, why be a sport any way. In certain parts of the county, particularly along the Alleghanies, large numbers of turkeys came through the winter. The penalty for killing a turkey is not less than six months in the penitentiary. There is an open season for turkeys this fall. The trout season opens May 1st and the bass season is June 1. Trout 6 inches and bass 8 inches can be legally caught.

Married, recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Dilley, near Mt. Zion, their daughter, Miss Stella to Gay Campbell of Dunmore.

THE ROAD BILLS

The proposed good roads bill, as introduced in the legislature, contains no suggestion as to the routes of the proposed system of highways except in so far as it complies with the constitutional amendment which requires at least that the county seats shall be connected.

However, at least two amendments will be offered. One of them known as the Lantz bill provides for 18 road routes—one of which is the Staunton & Parkersburg Pike, another connects Franklin, Pendleton County, with this pike at Bartow, another connects Elkins and Lewisburg by way of Marlinton.

A second plan is that of Delegate Thompson, of Barbour County, and this is the one approved by our own representative, Hon. E. N. Moore. We believe it is the right one. It certainly is the one that will take care of Pocahontas the best. The delegates from each county were asked to take a map of the State and designed by pencil marking the two most important ways from the county seat by which they would like to have the State highway pass one way through the county. Mr. Moore marked his map in Pocahontas County from Marlinton towards Lewisburg, toward Elkins and toward Franklin.

In Pendleton from Franklin toward Marlinton and toward Petersburg.

In Randolph from Elkins toward Marlinton, toward Parsons and toward Philippi.

In Greenbrier from Lewisburg toward Marlinton, toward Charleston and toward Union.

Neither Nicholas nor Webster looks this way.

In speaking of the plan, Delegate Thompson says:

"The proposed plan herewith presented, will cover at once the most important routes, put us on the road to go somewhere and bring us back home on a different route. Start at a given point on the map and see what a pleasant trip you would have touching the county seats of each county. You can go around the state—you can go across the state in several directions—you can get on top of the state in the highlands of Randolph and Pocahontas counties and see the place of the "Birth of Rivers.""

In the Supreme Court of Appeals the case of the Bank of Marlinton vs. Pocahontas Development Company was affirmed last Tuesday. This is the case in which a decree of sale was entered selling the lands owned by that company in and around Marlinton consisting of town lots and surrounding farms and wood land. Before ths sale was made an appeal was taken from the decree of the Circuit Court.

Glen, seven year old son, of G. C. Jack, who lives on the Smith farm near Marlinton, loosened the block of a road wagon standing on a hillside. He rode the double trees and was caught against the side of a building and severely bruised about the back and stomach. It was necessary to move the wagon before he could be released. He was thought to be internally injured, but is getting well without necessity for operation.

Another cold wave with ice freezing temperature Sunday night and Monday has added another streak of lean to the prospects for small fruits and other crops this year. The wheat crop apparently has been damaged to some extent, the top frozen down considerably. Young clover and other meadows have been set back also.

Baltimore Conference met in Roanoke last week. Few changes were made in the pastors of the Lewisburg District.

Dr. J. H. Light, after a year of most successful work at Marlinton, is made Presiding Elder of Moorefield District, with headquarters at Romney.

Rev. L. V. Ruckman is sent to Grace, Church, Roanoke; H Q. Burr to Hamilton; J. C. Thrasher, Fairfax; W. D. Keene, Andrews Chapel, Baltimore; R. K. Nevitt, Frederick Avenue, Baltimore; R. M. Wheeler, Church Hill, Maryland; W. T. Gover Reisterstown; Geo. W. Richardson, Presiding Elder of Rockingham District: B. L. Parrot, Mt. Solon; J. D. Pope, Clarksburg, Virginia; A. Lee Barrett, Frederick; J. M. York, Mt. Ranier; W. H. Ballengee, Berryville; Christopher Sydenstricker, Edinburg; Frank Richardson, Winchester.

This writer voices his personal regret and that of the people of the town of Marlinton generally over the removal of Dr. Light to another field of usefulness. In the year that he has been among us he has endeared himself to us all. He is a strong preacher and a likable sympathetic man. For the past six months he has been the pastor of the town, and it is with reluctance that we give him up.

DIED

Andrew, little four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Harouff, died at the Marlinton Hospital on last Thursday night, April 7, 1921. On Wednesday evening he was run over by an automobile at his home near Hillsboro, and received injuries at the base of the brain and elsewhere. The little boy had gone across the road to the mail box, and two automobiles came along. The driver of the first one saw him and stopped, but the second driver, not seeing the little boy drove around the first car and struck the little fellow. Doctors were called promptly and the little boy brought to the Marlinton Hospital at once, but he was too badly injured to be helped. On Saturday the little body was buried at the McCoy graveyard on Bruffeys Creek. Andrew was a manly little fellow, the joy and delight of his parents, and great sympathy is felt for them.

STAMPING CREEK

The weather is fine after the cold spell. A good many people had made garden during the nice weather and may have to make it again.

Most of the farmers are ready for planting.

The health of the people of the is very good at this time.

Mrs. Lacy Bryant has been having quite a bit of trouble an infected finger, but it is better now.

Joseph A. Sharp, fire warden, has been having trouble keeping the fires under control.

Adam Irvine the sawmill man, is at home now making garden, building fence and preparing to plant corn.

William Jackson has been quite busy caring for his flock of Angora goats during the recent cold spell.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Waugh and little daughter Mary Frances, were in Marlinton one day last week.

Adam Irvine and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Landis motored to Marlinton last Saturday on busines and to see Mrs. Landis' sister, Mrs. Icie Miller, who has been quite ill at the Marlinton Hospital.

Our school was out last Friday, after a very successful term taught by G. W. Hill.

Ramon Rhodes has moved from Rainetown to John Gay's place near Edray. We were sorry to lose such good neighbors.

Clarence K. Livesay has been elected Secretary of the Marlinton Board of Trade. A meeting of the board of directors is called to meet at the High School building on Friday night, April 15, at 8 o'clock. The board consists of J. A. Sydenstricker. Ira D. Brill, Hubert Echols, Z. S. Smith, A. S. Overholt, F. M, Sydnor, and Calvin W. Price,

---

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bible and two little daughters, of Cass, went to Elkins last week. Their little daughter Virginia was operated on for enlarged tonsils and adnoids and returned home with her father this week. Mrs. Bible will remain in Elkins for some time and take treatment form a specialist for throat trouble.

Married, April 6, 1921, by Rev. G. W. Woolard, William Minon Hite and Miss Elsie Buleah Lambert.

SECOND MAN IN JAIL

On Charge of Murder and Robbery on Cranberry

Antonio Gradison, an Austrian, was brought to jail this week and is held on the charge of being one of the three men who went into the camp on North Fork of Cranberry and killed a Russian and walked away with some thousands of dollars in money. The prisoner is a heavy set man of about thirty and he has remained silent in all the languages that he knows.

R. K. Burns, policeman, who made the other arrest traced the prisoner into Cumberland and found that he had arrived there on Tuesday after the Friday night of the murder.

With the aid of the local authorities, the man was arrested and he immediately got himself a lawyer and objected to going back to West Virginia. The prosecuting attorney of this county secured an extradition from the governors of the respective states and C. C. Clendenen, deputy sheriff, went to Cumberland to join Policeman Burns. There they were met with a habeas corpus proceeding which was heard before Judge Henderson, who sent the prisoner back to where he was wanted.

This judge has a vivid recollection of Marlinton. He came here in 1896 to try a lawsuit between the Cumberland Lumber Company and the late Col. D. O'Connel, and while here Judge Henderson was attacked by a virulent case of diptheria and was desperately ill. The place at that time was 46 miles from a railroad and the Judge seemed to consider it a marvel that he received such good attention in the wilderness.

But to get back to the prisoner, he was found to have $1140 00 in currency on him when he was arrested which was brought back by the officers.

The rain of last Friday put out the few forest fires which had not been checked by the citizens of the county. The former way was to let the fires rage unchecked except where property and fences were in danger, and then back fires were started. The result was the destruction of untold wealth, both in mature merchantable timber and in small trees, which was to have furnished to the people of the future their lumber. It is different now. Perched upon some mountain top is a wooden tower in which a man sits day and night during the dry weather of the fire season. The country he overlooks is laid out in squares on a chart and he knows the distance to certain points. In case of a smoke, it is located in a certain square and the owner of the land or the nearest local warden or both are notified by telephone. The neighborhood is then summoned and the fight is on. The federal and state governments and the association of large land holders jointly bear the expense of patroling the forests of this section.

The time for a business man to borrow money, if ever, is when he does not need it. If he really needs it, it is usually a sign that he needs something else first. The use of money in business is extremely limited. It cannot be the substitute of repairs and replacements. If a granary is losing out through rats, the cure is not to put in more grain but to stop the rat-holes. The business man's best loan is made of himself—his brains, interest, application. A business cannot be cured by money-poultices from the bank, but by surgical operations within. Loss is corrected by building up the processes of gain—not by borrowing. The cure of every business's difficulty is within itself. Internal difficulties must be met by internal corrections, not by external borrowings.—Henry Ford.

Mr. Fisher and Mr. Hutchison, of the Geological Survey arrived at Marlinton last week and have started to work, measuring the mountains and mapping the country. They will work from the Greenbrier to the Pendleton County line. Mr. Fisher is accompanied by his wife. This week the party is working around Jacox.

Someone asked an aged man what he thought about the capitation road tax assessed against all men, regardless of their age. The reply was that he guessed he could stand it, and there was one thing he was glad about—that it could not be laid against the Wilson Administration!

OBITUARY

In memory of Clementine and Frank Hollandsworth of Droop W. Va,

On November 25, 1920, Mrs. Clementine Hollandsworth departed from tnis world of care to the Great Beyond. She had heart trouble but had only been past going one week. She was the daughter of Valentine Byrd, and the last of his family. She was in her 72nd year, baving been born in May 1849. She was married to Frank Hollandsworth and has one daughter, Mrs. Lieu Gillian and two sons, Lewis and Joe. Everything was done for her that loving hearts and willing hands could do, but the call of the Master was stronger than all earthly ties. She gave herself into her Master's care in her early years and has been a member of the Presbyterian church ever since. She was a good mother, a devoted and faithful wife and is sadly missed in the community in which she lived. No funeral services were held on account of the serious illness of her husband. On the evening of the 27th her remains were laid to rest in the Walkup cemetrey while some friends sang the beautiful hymn, "Death is Only a Dream."

Sunday morning December 19, 1920, the Death Angel again visited the Hollandsworth home, this time claiming as its victim the father, Frank Hollandsworth, He was born in May. 1852, and was in his 69th year. He had been in poor health for several years and a helpless invalid for over a year. His wife had waited on him constantly and faithfully until one week before her death which occurred on Thanksgiving Day. Besides his three children he leaves to mourn him five brothers and two sisters. It is hard to give up our loved ones from this world, but we are sure God knows best and some we will see and understand. On the evening of the 20th his remains were laid by those of his wife in the Walkup cemetery there to await the final call of the Master.

Green be the turf above thee
  Friends of the by-gone days,
None knew thee but to love thee,
  Nor named thee but to praise.
Tears fell when thou wert dying,
  From eyes unused to weep,
And long where thou art lying,
  Will tears the cold earth steep.
When hearts, whose truth was proven
  Like thine, are laid in earth,
There should a wreath be woven
  To tell the world their worth.
While memory bids me weep thee,
  Nor thoughts nor words are free,
The grief is fixed too deeply
  That mourns loved ones like thee.

Mrs. Mattie Jane Neff, wife of Rev. C. M. Neff, died at her home near Bellepoint, Summers county, last Sunday, April 3, at 8 o'lock p. m. She had been in declining health for a number of years. If she had lived to the 16th of May she would have been 78 years of age, and the 26th of April would have been her 61st wedding anniversary. She is survived by her husband, Rev. C. M. Neff, and two daughter, Mrs. Esta Morrison, of Charleston, and Mrs. Emma Williams of near Bellepsint, and several grand-children and great-grand-children.—Monroe Watchmau.

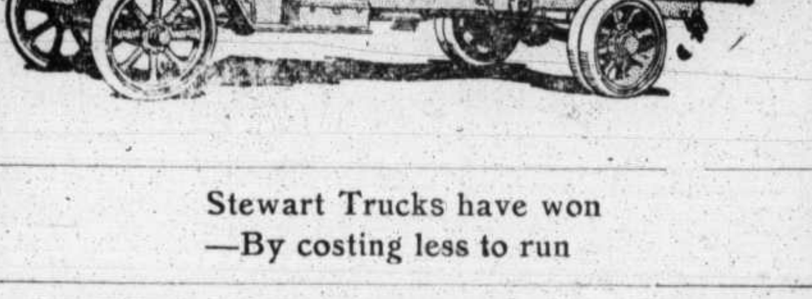
Stewart MOTOR TRUCKS



Stewart Trucks have won
—By costing less to run

QUALITY and Economy have brought Stewart success. For Stewart Trucks built eight years ago are still working profitably for their owners; earning daily satisfaction and paying dividends on the investment.

They are sturdy trucks—designed right, built right, and priced right. Tne very first ones made still serve the needs of trade. Their first cost is $200 to $700 less than the average price of other trucks, and the saving continues throughout the truck's long life—on upkeep, on repairs, tires, gasoline and oil.

Capacities: 3-4, 1, 1 1-2, and 3 1-2 ton

TO MARK OLD GRAVES

Among the first permanent settlers in the Tygart's Valley in the year 1772, we find the name of Conly. It is presumed that this name is the same as Edward or "Darby" Conly who afterwards figured in local history, and who resided on the Valley River at the mouth of Conly Run in the year 1777. Local tradition fixes his cabin on the east side of the turnpike on the little flat in the northwestern corner of Charles L. Hamrick's field just north of the Conly Run. In fact the evidences of his cabin remain at that place to this day. We do not know where "Darby" Conly came from. Most of the settlers coming to this valley in 1772, with Colonel Wilson and Captain Friend, were from Pendleton and that part of Hardy now in Grant. The Hamiltons and a few others who settled in the neighborhood of Huttonsville, came from Augusta. John Warrick and Stewart, who settled just below Conly on the river were from Bath, then in Augusta. As many of the settlers about Valley head and Mingo came from Cow Pasture and the southern sections of Augusta, it is very probable that Conly came from that section also, as he settled in the extreme upper end of the valley. On the 15th of December, 1777, according to the account given by Withers, while Conly and others were putting the roof on his cabin they were fired on by Indians from the hill back of his house. It is said that he and his wife and several of the children were killed and three of the children were taken prisoners. The Border Warfare states that the Indian party has ascended the valley without being able to commit any depredations, and that on account of the falling of snow they withdrew to the mountains and remained in concealment until the snow went off and then returned to the settlement, exterminated the Conly family and came down to John Stewart and killed him and his wife and children, and took a Miss Hamilton, sister of Mrs. Stewart, prisoner. The Hamilton family lived on the river near the mouth of Hamilton Run and Stewart, between that and Conly Run. After these atrocities the Indians left the valley and, according to tradition, passed through the mountains by way of Pickens, thence to the waters of the Little Kanawha River which they descended to the Ohio. In the afternoon of December, Colonel Hadden was passing the trail and seeing a pet elk, belonging to the Conlys lying dead in the yard he investigated and found the crimes above mentioned. He at once returned to the Hadden fort and dispatched messengers to Colonel Wilson, who sent a force of thirty men to the scene of the crimes on the next morning, and they followed the trail of the savages for six days without appearing to gain upon them and as they were out of provisions and were worn out they returned to the valley without being able to rescue the prisoners or to punish the perpetrators of these dastardly deeds. Price's History of Pocahontas County says that these offenses were committed by Indians under Chies Killbuck, who had ascended the Great Kanawha River in the fall of that year as far as the Little Levels on Greenbrier, and being unable to commit any depredations because the people were all in their forts, they were on their return to Ohio and came through by Mingo and committed the above mentioned depredations on their route. Both accounts mention the snow storm and the hiding of the Indians until the snow went off. Indian Camp Mountain, where these Indians remained during the snow storm, is about eight miles west of Conly Run and is a northern branch of the Point Mountains. The camp is said to be on the northern slope of this mountain about a half mile south of the William Vandevender place at the head of Back Fork.

The members of the Conly family, and probably the Stewarts, who were killed, were buried the next day in the river bottom about 300 yards from the Conly cabin. Tradition among the old settlers says that they were buried at that particular place because it was far enough away from the hill to be out of range of the Indian guns if they should still be in hiding. The exact location of these graves is known and is in the meadow bottom now belonging to Mr. Andrew Hannah, and until very lately a stone planted by the burial party was standing. At present there are no indications of these graves except the base of this stone, which is still in the ground.

The John Hart Chapter, D. A. R., has undertaken the work of erecting a marker, or monument, at these graves in commemoration of this pioneer family. A suitable monument will cost several hundred dollars. Contributions from those interested will be gratefully received and may be sent, or handed to Mrs. H. G. Kump, Chairman Committee, Elkins, West Virginia.—Elkins Inter-Mountain.

TWO YEARS FIGHTING V. D.

Syphilis and gonorrhea, the chief venereal diseases, are germ infections which in most cases may be cured if treated promptly and skillfully. Yet today they are causing widespread and terrible suffering. To gonorrhea is due much of the blindness among infants, countless surgical operations among women, and sterility in both men and women; syphilis often results in paralysis, insanity, miscarriages; diseases of the heart or other vital organs. Together they constitute the most urgent health problem before the country today.

Venereal diseases have become destructive largely because from time immemorial a false modesty has prevented people from discussing them frankly. Thus they have flourished in the darkness of ignorance, striking inexorably the innocent and helpless as well as those guilty of sexual irregularities.

The war made it necessary for the United States to face frankly the problem of these diseases. It was found that a large proportion of the venereal disease cases originated, not in the cities near Army camps, but in the home towns from which the men came and in the cities through which they passed on their way to camp. Careful investigations during the war established unquestionably the responsibility of civil communities for the prevalence of venereal diseases. Accordingly, a program of medical, legal, educational and recreational measures was developed for civilian communities by various war-time agencies, with the co-operation of the United States Public Health Service and the State boards of health.

In the past two years there haye been in the United 427 Free clinics established.

185,200 patients have been treated.

28,000 Druggists have stopped the sale of nostrums.

20,000 Newspapers and magazines have refused quack ads.

150,000 Placards have been posted.

60,700 Physicians are cooperating.

740,000 Young men have seen "Keeping Fit" exhibit.

13,000 Audiences have seen lantern slide exhibits.

5,000 Industrial developments have taken it up.

21,000 Lectures have been delivered.

22,221,000 Pamphlets have been distributed.

How would this do for an advertisement for Huntington? Secure the services of a capable photographer. Let him take snapshots of Fifth avenue from Ninth to Thirteenth streets, and the immediate approaches of Tenth Eleventh and Twelfth streets. The hour, of course, being some time between 11:00 a. m. and noon. The day, of course, being Sunday. The aggregate result would be pictures of some hundreds of automobiles, belonging to church goers. On any fair Sunday Fifth avenue is lined with practical solidarity from a ways below Tenth street to a point well above Thirteenth, while the approaches of the intersecting streets allow parking spaces for almost as many more. But let's get the movie man on the scene, too. Six of the largest congregations in the city have their places of worship in this area. The services in these churches conclude at approximately the same time. When the people emerge from the sanctuaries and get the machines in motion the sight is one of unusual activity, and for several minutes there is an accute congestion at every crossing in the central section of the city. The sight, on the whole, proves Huntington a prosperous city, and that the prosperous people make up the majority of its Sabbath communicants.—Huntington Herald.

YELK

There is a lot of farming being done in our community this spring.

We are glad to say there is no sickness in our community so far this spring.

Miss Ona Gibson was at home afew days last wesk. She was accompanied by Miss Eula Galford. They returned to school at Marlinton Sunday eve.

The club members of the Elk Busy Bee Club held a meeting Saturday night at the Hannah school house. A large crowd was out.

Miss Ethel Correll has returned from Alderson where she had been called by tho sickness and death of her mother.

Miss Pearl Carter was visiting in this section Saturday and Sunday.

Several of our people are attending court this week.

J. C. Hannah is doing a rushing business sawing.

Davis Mace has moved to Slaty Fork. We are sorry to lose good neighbors.

Wm. Varner is very badly crippled with rheumatism this spring.

Miss Florences Gibson is home for a few days visit, after spending six months in the City Hospital, Elkins.

Miss Mary Jackson. of Cass, is visiting friends on Elk.

Ed Roberson has closed his sawmill down for a while, and perhaps for the season.

Jesse Hannahand Miss Elsie Baughman motored to town Sunday.

LINWOOD

A sudden change in the weather made us gather around the fire. The ground is covered with snow and vegetation looks chilled.

J. A. Dunlap has been away the past three weeks buying cattle. Dunlap Brothers are the largest cattle buyers in this section. Not only fine cattle are found on these fine farms but thoroughbred sheep and Kentucky horses. Lou Dillon, a thoroughbred mare, is owned by Dunlap Bros., and the mother of Light Foot owned by Eugene Gatewood. These beautiful horses are natural travelers and would attract attention at any horse show.

W. H. Doyle is preparing to build a handsome bungalow near his store.

The large springs with their immense water power are a boon to the people. Their homes are equipped with every modern convenience that the city homes have.

The Linwood school is moving along nicely. The entertainment Friday evening was fine. The pupils are delighted with their new Victrola.

A large acreage has been plowed for oats and corn, and the farmers are almost ready to plant.

The people are elated over the news that in the near futur it is possible that Linwood will have a railroad. It will pay, not only Pocahontas but Randolph county will be benefited by the road.

Sunday school was organized at Linwood Presbyteriad church last Sunday after which Rev. O. N. Miles preached an excellent sermon. Mr. Miles is pastor of this church and has endeared himself to the people by his earnest and faithful work.

Charles Rhea, of Virginia, is moving to the Rhea farm near Mace. We welcome him to our community and neighborhood.

Mr. Bell of Virginia is here looking over his stock farm. He spent Sunday with Eugene Gatewood.

The mail is very heavy from Linwood to Slaty Fork on account of the Cass Lumber Co. operating on a large scale at Laurel Bank. The Slaty Fork post office is kept by the company at Laurel Bank. The mail is very heavy from Clover Lick. Linwood is the distributing office.

A CARD FROM GOV. MORGAN

April 12, 1921

To the Editor:

The federal government has instituted a campaign in West Virginia for the distribution of Victory Medals among the world war veterans of our state and has solicited the aid of our newspapers in an effort to secure the proper distribution of these medals, thousands of which remain undistributed.

Several million dollars have been expended by the government for the manufacture and distribution of these medals among the participants in the world war and aid has been requested from the newspapers, the American legion, Red Cross chapters and civic organizations to bring the distribution campaign to a prompt and effective conclusion. Thousands of our West Virginia service men are probably unaware that they can secure their Victory Medals upon proper application when accompanied by their discharge papers.

To expedite distribution in West Virginia, the War Department has detailed to this state Lieutenant Colonol R. S. Woodson, who has distributing offices in Wheeling, Huntington and in the office of the Adjutant General at Charleston. Our soldiers who have failed to receive their Victory Medals should not fail to make immediate application to the office named above, accompanied by their discharge papers which will be carefully preserved and returned.

In directing attention to this, for distribution of these medals your newspapers will perform a patriotic service which, I am certain, will be appreciated by our world war veterans.

Very truly yours,
Ephraim F. Morgan,
Governor.

Commissioner's Notice

Bank of Marlinton vs
A. D. Williams and others:

Thickness

Before deciding on your next tire, have your dealer show you cross-sections of the various makes you are considering—so that you can measure the total thickness of the rubber and fabric used in building up the various makes.

You will find that Michelin Tires embody more of these mileage-giving materials. In the 34x4 Michelin Universal, for example, there is a solid though flexible mass of wear-resisting rubber and fabric almost an inch thick.

Every bit of the materials used is of the highest quality. Yet Michelins are moderate in price.

The annual sermon to Odd Fellows will be preached by Rev. F. B. Wyand at the Marlinton Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, May 8 at three o'clock.

RED CROSS

A meeting of the Executive Committee of Pocahontas County Chapter American Red Cross on Thursday night was addressed by Miss Jones. from Washington. She was here in the interest of all soldiers who may be in need of assistance of any kind. She urged the necessity of the Red Cross getting a record of every man who went to the army from Pocahontas County, whether he needed assistance or not. The Red Cross is seeking to help every man who is sick; who wants his insurance straightened out; who has not been paid in full; who wants to learn a trade, etc. The Home Service Secretary, F. M Sydnor, recently sent out cards to the 600 service men of the county, but only 122 of them returned the questionaire. Thirty-seven of these asked assistance of different kinds. The local chapter will continue this work, and it has the backing of the local post of the American Legion. Every service man is urged to communicate with the County Chairman, J. A. McLaughlin, or the Home Secretary, F. M. Sydnor.

The case of James Auldridge, a returned soldier who is suffering from tuberculosis, was considered and a weekly allowance was voted him until the County or the government can take care of him.

Pocahontas County is to have a community nurse. Miss Finley will arrive about May first. Suitable quarters have not yet been secured.

GEORGE WASHINGTON HILL

Died, at Marlinton, April 26, 1921, George Washington Hill, aged 76 years, who for the past fifty-five years has made his home on the Clover Lick farm. He was born a slave but immediately after the war came to the home of the Warwicks at Clover Lick and has remained at the old homestead ever since, with four generations of the family.

He has been failing in health all winter and was brought here for treatment but succumbed to the infirmities incident to age. He was a good, useful man, faithful and true.

"Give us a man, young or old, high or low, on whom we can thoroughly depend, who will stand firm when others fail; the friend faithful and true—in such a one there is a fragment of the Rock of Ages."

John Ryder and his brother, sons of Andrew Ryder, were killed while resisting arrest at their home near Monterey, Monday afternoon. The report is that the young men had broken some town ordinance and had resisted the police and escaped. A warrant was placed in the hands of Sheriff Bird, who took a number of deputies and attempted to arrest the young men at their home. They resisted, shots were exchanged and both young men were killed.

Car load after car load of young western cattle are being brough to the Greenbrier Valley grass lands by stockmen this season. One day last week a car load of black cattle consigned to Bartow, had to be watered at Marlinton As soon as they were turned out of the car, about forty of the cattle took to the woods like buffalo. And then section men and office force had a little variety from the daily routine. All were rounded up except five head and these scattered over Marlin Mountain from Joe Buzzard's on Knapps Creek to the mouth of Thorny Creek on Greenbrier River, and it took sevearl days to bring them in.

Born, to Mr and Mrs A. E. Staton, at Ward, W. Va., a daughter, April 25, 1921.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs Guy Thomas, at Buckeye, April 21st, a daughter

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Everett Ruckman, Minnehaha Springs, April 25th a son.

The Circuit Court is still in session but the jury got through and were dismissed last Saturday.

BARTHOLOMEW--MCNEEL

On Wednesday afternoon, April 20, 1921, at 3:30 o'clock, the Oak Grove Presbyterian Church at Hillsboro, W. Va., was the scene of a beautiful and interesting society event, when Miss Lida Wallace McNeel became the bride of Mr. George B. Bartholomew.

The Church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and potted plants.

The only attendants were the attractive ribbon bearers, Rachel and Virginia Irvine, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Irvine cousins of the bride, and Mary Elizabeth and Catherine Bartholomew daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Bartholomew, nieces of the groom, wearing dresses of white and green organdie, very effectively carrying out the color scheme of green and white. The ring bearer was Master Samuel C. Bartholomew, Jr. nephew of the groom. who wore a white suit and bearing the ring in a filigree basket.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Johnson, in a very impressive manner using the ring to seal the vows.

The bridal party entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march rendered by Miss Mayo Beard, cousin of the bride.

The ushers were Kyle Beard of Beard, and Richard McLaughlin of Lewisburg.

The bride was attired in a handsome going away dress of dark blue tricotine and georgette hat. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. McNeel and is one of the Levels fairest and most attractive women, and the groom is a prominent business man of Hillsboro, and has been a resident of the county for several years engaged in the manufacture of lumber, and is now Secretary-Treasurer of the Bartholomew Lumber Company.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome presents consisting of silver, cut glass, china and linen.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew, 'mid a shower of rice, old shoes and words of good cheer from their many friends motored to Seebert where they took the afternoon train over the C. & O. for an extended western trip.

Mr. and Mrs. McNeel gave a reception on Tuesday evening to the bridal party, the following guests were very hospitably entertained: Rev. J. C. Johnson, Mrs. Nannie Beard, Miss Mayo Beard, Miss Jean Pritchard, Miss Nancy McNeel, Mr. and Mrs. French Nickell from Ronceverte Mrs. Gray, [redacted] S. C. [redacted] and Mrs. W. [redacted] Virginia Irvine, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. McNeel, Mr. and Mrs. Moffet McNeel and children, Kyle Beard and Richard McLaughlin.

PUREBRED CATTLE

E F. McLaughlin has bought three registered two year old Shorthorn heifers. These fine cattle are from the McLaughlin herd at Maxwelton, Greenbrier County. This herd has won prizes wherever shown, from the International down. Last year Mr McLaughlin bought a registered bull, and he has now the nucleous of a herd of Shorthorns, in which is represented some of the best blood strains of this noted breed of cattle. Mr McLaughlin is the kind that will make a success as a breeder of purebred cattle. He is an expert stockman, conservative and experienced, with a great boundary of good blue grass, and a couple of boys who are enthusiastic farmers.

A SAD ACCIDENT

As briefly stated last week, Mrs. Bertie Hinkle Morrison, wife of S. W. Morrison, and second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. A. Hinkle of this vicinity. was accidently ran over and killed by an automobile in the hands of an inexperienced driver, April 10, 1921, at Overland Park, Kansas.

We learn this week that she survived the accident about 40 minutes. Mrs. Morrison was born April 12, 1882, and was 38 yrs. 11 months and 28 days old at the time of her death. She had been a consistent member and an active worker in the M. E. Church, South for many years, professing faith in Christ when about the age of fourteen years. She leaves a husband and three children—1 boy and 2 girls, a father and mother, six brothers, two sisters and many loving kin to mourn her untimely death. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord for they shall inherit Eternal Life."—Greenbrier Independent.

The Mayor has designated Saturday, May 30, as clean up day in Marlinton, and the town trucks will be running to carry away trash if the householders will put it at a convenient point. There is not nearly as much litter as usual this spring, and a few days hauling will help a lot.

Rev. F. B. Wyand, the new Methodist pastor, arrived last week, coming overland in a truck from Middletown, Virginia. He is an ex-army man, having been attached to the air service. He is a hustling young preacher, and, we venture the prediction, he is just what we need in this town. Mr. Wyand has held pastorates in Spokane, Cheyenne and other western cities.

T. J. Mason is moving his bottling plant to his large warehouse on 3rd Avenue, which is nearing completion. W. C. Kohler will move his harness shop to the building vacated by Mr. Mason.

SEEING DIXIE LAND FROM AN AUTO

CAMPING ONBANKSO FSUWANEE RIVER

"Swanee, how I love you,
How I love you,
My dear old Suwanee;
I would give the world to be Among the folks in D-I-X-I-Even know my,
Mammy's waiting for me,
Praying for me
Down by the Suwanee.
The folks up north
Will see me no more,
When I go to the Suwanee's shore."

Some years ago one hot day while pretending to labor. for my father, I stole into the shade of the chestnut grove near my grandfather's old home which was the birth place of my father as well as of your humble servant and from the cool shade I looked about to make sure no one was in hearing distance, so I sang, as many of my readers well know, with a clear melodious voice,

"Way down upon the Suwanee River,
Far, far away
There's where my heart is turning ever,
There's where the old folks stay;
All up and down the whole creation,
Sadly I roam,
Still longing for the old plantation,
And for the old folks at home.
All the world is sad and dreary,
Every where I roam,
Oh! darkies, how my heart grows weary,
Far from the old folks at home."

While singing the above song, little did I dream that on Easter Sunday, March 27, 1921, I would be found camping with folks from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Pennsylvania, Tennessee Alabama and Virginia, on the banks of the famous and historic Suwanee River River and the wide armed oak—all moss-hung and hoary with age under which the song, "Old Folks at Home" is supposed to have been written

We are located at the juncture of the Withlacoochee and Suwaneerivers in a forest of oak, pine and holly and many other kinds of trees which I am not able to name. We are glad to be in a good shade for the day is very hot.

I expected to find these rivers [redacted] and sluggish but on the con- [redacted] them flowing rapidly and [redacted] water looks dark it is not muddy.

About one hundred feet above where I am sitting there is a spring pouring out several thousand gallons of water per minute from under the bank of the Withlacoochee river. In fact the spring is so large that I would call it an underground river, and it flows out with such force that waves from it are noticible even to the opposite shore of the W. I let down my jug and drank copiously of this water and pronounced it good. It is cool and clear and with one exception I have not drunk better water in Florida.

It is natural for a visitor to try to figure out the source of the underground rivers which are the fountains from which such springs as De Leon, Sulphur, Silver and the springs here are fed. I have heard it said that some of the underground rivers which come to the surface in Florida have their source in the melting snow which forms some of the lakes of the north and northwest. But I am of the opinion that only the Creator of this wonderful universe knows the source of the springs above mentioned. The underground river just above me appears to have its source in the north west, yet there is a large spring about one thousand yards below me on the south east side of Suwanee. river which appears to and must flow from the south east. I am told that there is a large spring at Falmouth about three miles from here which flows a short distance and again sinks It is believed that this is the same water. We know not the workings of Nature. Our little minds are not strong enough to grasp it all.

I only wish I had access to my library for I feel there is some interesting history connected with the country. I would, any way, think that the first settlers and Indians must have had some fun here. The Confederates had a camp here on the south east side of the river, but I understand there was no fighting in this locality. You know I feel I am missing something but I do not know what it is. Yet after talking with a few old gray-headed darkies I think I know why Stephen C. Foster wrote:

"Gone are the days when my Heart was young and gay;
Gone are my friends
From the cotton fields away,
Gone from this earth
To a better land I know
I hear those gentle voices calling
'Old Black Joe.'
I'm coming, I'm coming,
For my head is bending low,
I hear those gentle voices calling,
'Old Black Joe.'"

While writing the above I have seen a score of fish jump out of the water and I could not hiep but think there are fishermen in Pocahontas who would like to be here a few days, but let me tell you the campers here have had poor luck. The sign of the moon is not just right.

The shades of the evening are gathering. A perfect day has passed. I shall never forget this Easter because it is the first one in my recollection that I did not eat RED EGGS.

Monday—All our neighbors on the Suwanee camping grounds left us this morning and are now on the road home. Many of them seem to be restless and are anxious to be at home. As I bid them good bye I realized that there were many I would not likely see again. They are good people and have treated us better than we deserved. I hope that prosperity, good health and happiness will attend them through life.

My wife, Goldie and I realizing that
"In woods, there is peace,
And in woods, repose," decided to remain here for one more day and night. Tomorrow we will start for Macon, Georgia, where we expect to remain for some days As our new friends are leaving us, I feel a longing to get back with my old comrades who live among the West Virginia Hills.

FROM TEXAS

Letter from Fort Worth, Texas to Pocahontas Times, written 35 years ago.

Editor Times:

As Pocahontas was once my home, and thinking some of my friends would like to hear from me, I will give them a brief and perhaps an uninteresting description of my travels since July 23rd.

I cannot say there was much real pleasure to my trip, for as it was in a business capacity, my mind and nerves were often so over-taxed I could scarcely enjoy what might have been, under other circumstances, a pleasure.

My route first called me through the northern and north-eastern part of Texas, stopping at all towns of importance. The country is very much alike, a rolling prairie, interspersed with belts of timber making it beautiful in appearance. Further on I struck the pine regions of Texas which reminded me very much of West Virginia. Saw mills in abundance were in operation in this region. This pine region has one advantage over West Virginia; that is, in the way of railroads on which to transport lumber to any point. Lumbering is carried on extensively in all the eastern part of this state.

At Texarkana I crossed over into Arkansas. I must say, as I always had a great antipathy for Arkansas, and as I wrote to some of my friends at Fort Worth, I felt as if I were "banished off the face of the earth," however to do justice to the home of the "Arkansaw Traveler," I must say I was agreeably surprised sometimes. After traveling through the southern and roughest portion of the state, which is thickly timbered and swampy, I went by way of Brinkly to Little Rock and then found on that road some fine country. Little Rock, overlooking the river, is quite a nice place. The capitol building is rather ancient in appearance and I hardly think does justice to the State.

From there to Searcey Springs, a noted watering place is very healthy. I remained there several days and on Sunday listened to one of the finest sermons I ever heard, by the evangelist, Rev. Robinson. I met some most excellent people and made some warm friends, among them Mr. Altheimer's very interesting family, one of Pine Bluff's wealthiest merchants.

Then up the Iron Mt. road to Newport, and from there on a branch road to Batesville. There I stopped at the Arlington Hotel kept by a gentleman from Richmond, Virginia, and one of the best kept hotels in the state. There I felt at home, as you know how one Virginian appreciates another and I was treated very kindly by the host and hostess. most estimable people.

On the way back to Newport we had a little wreck of the train, but fortunately no lives were lost, and no one injured, only badly scared. Any way we had a very narrow escape which caused us to think how essential it was to carry "accident insurance policies" when traveling.

From Jonesboro to Helena (on the Miss. River) the country is very productive. Corn and cotton principally raised.

Then over into Mississippi and down the Mississippi Valley road where I saw an abundance of rich country, large plantations but to my mind not a very desirable place to live in summer, so low and so level, and so much chills and fever. Further on I came to Vicksburg, a noted city of the South, and one of the most interesting and attractive. It is situated on a high hill and overlooks the grand Mississippi, defying it's destructive power as on other cities. The city looks like one grand, vast amphitheatre, business houses and residences rising one above the other like steps, each and every yard terraced and sodded over beautifully. Sunday a party of us went to the national cemetery, which is kept by the Government in the grandest style. The gardens, fountains, bowers and monuments were grand.

My next place was Baton Rouge, an ancient but beautiful place. The Capitol, which faces the river, is a beautiful building. 'Twas there the French language became the "order of the day.' I was then getting into the Creole region, and I felt quite out of place, for what English was spoken was very broken.

There I crossed the river and went down the west side of Plaquemine located on the river and Plaquemine Bayou. This is the identical Bayou Longfellow spoke of in his Evangeline, and I gathered some shells, etc., from the bank for souvenirs.

Next to Donaldsonville and then to New Orleans, the beautiful Crescent city. I had letters of introduction to some of the most influential people there and to the Woman's club whose association enhanced greatly to my enjoyment. I was invited to their homes and treated most cordially. Early one morning I visited the French markets, and there is where one is amused to his heart's content, at least, with the ludricous. People of every color and nation, and wearing all kinds of costumes with baskets on their arms, buying their eatables for the day. In this market there is everything the mind can conjure up. One evening I went alone to the Museum and was viewing the curosities in the way of a Menagerie and admiring the seven "giants," when a gentleman, whom I had met in Arkansas, recognized me, and kindly offered to accompany me to several places of interest. First to the "Battle of Pa- - -" the most perfect representation of a battle. One could hardly believe it was not real. Then we went to West End Lake, one of the most beautiful summer resorts to be found anywhere. This place is about seven miles from the main part of the city, part of the way by street car and part by steam. The grounds and gardens, which are surrounded by the lake, are crowded with pleasure seekers until a late hour. On passing on either side of Canal St., you would think you were in two different cities,—one American and one French. I spent nine days in New Orleans, trying to "take in" the most interesting features, but as my time was limited I had to leave without seeing a great many things of interest. I stopped at all the towns of any importance on the route back to Texas, and found them inhabited most exclusively by the Creoles, but was treated very kindly by all.

I met several Virginians and always found them as glad to meet another from their native State as I was.

I passed up the south-eastern part of Texas into Dallas and then to Ft. Worth, my home town, and I can truthfully say I have never seen no place I would prefer living to Fort Worth.

There has been fine rains in all parts of Texas that has suffered from drouth before. Grass and vegetation are green and nice.

It would seem strange to you to see the flowers in bloom at this season. Yards are one garden of roses, and all kinds of flowers in full bloom.

Through the kindness of a Pocahontas friend I have received The Times ever since I have been in Texas, and it is very much appreciated I assure you. Home would seem incomplete without THE TIMES.

Wishing you all success in the world I must bid you adieu.

RHODA

By Anna L. Price

And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken, named Rhoda.—Acts 11: 13.

I'm thinking of Rhoda, the damsel,
Who 'tended the door of the gate,
At Mary's house in the time of prayer
When they cast on God their heavy care,
And for answer not long did wait.

How glad was the heart of Rhoda,
As she recognized Peter's voice,
And hastening in she told the trnth,
And while some doubted, she knew forsooth,
And urged them with her to rejoice.

For the Lord had delivered Peter,
Chained and sleeping between armed men:
"Arise and cast thy garment about thee,
And thy sandals, put them upon thee"
And he followed the angel then.

The great iron gate of the city,
Opened to them of its own accord;
Peter "at himself," without a guide,
Knowing the streets of the city wide,
Sought the people of the Lord.

In Acts you will find the story,
One more helpful you've never met;
And when you have gathered up the
And answered prayer in the lines between,
Damsel Rhoda do not forget.

BEEKEEPERS REELECT OFFICERS

Charleston Mail

The West Virginia Beekeepers Association adjourned its convention in Charleston yesterday after reelecting officers. The officers reelected are T. K. Massey, of Hatcher, president, and Will C. Griffith, of Wheeling, secretary-treasurer.

Bees and their diseases, as described by a bee doctor; and methods of effecting a cure; swarming and other phases of bee life, were discussed at length yesterday.

It was the second day of the session. The morning session was opened with a talk on wintering bees by Dr. E. F. Phillips, agriculturist of the bureau of entomology, Washington. He brought out the conditions necessary to insure good wintering, telling why these conditions are necessary. He stressed the necessity of leaving the colonies of bees plenty of honey for the winter, so they will not starve. It is necessary, he said, that these stores be of the best quality of honey. The colonies should be protected further by placing each hive into a large box and packing around it dry leaves or shavings.

Management of bees in the spring was the subject of a talk in the afternoon by E. T. Adkins, of Watertown, Wis. He stressed the importance of leaving plenty of honey in the hive for bad weather so the brood rearing shall not be retarding. If the rearing was retarded, he said, it would later result in there being too few young bees ready to gather the crop of honey, when the flowers that furnish the bulk of honey come into bloom.

George S. Demuth, editor, of Gleanings in Bee Culture, published in Medina, O., gave a talk on the control of swarming. He told how by placing the new hive where the old one stood, after setting the old hive to one side, the new swarm would be hived on the cld stand and the old field workers would be kept in the same place. By this means, he said, more honey could be obtained than when a swarm is hived in a new location, a method which divides the working force of the colony. He also told how to fix the colonies to prevent swarming entirely, so that it is not necessary to stay at home to watch for swarming during the swarming season.

Dr. Phillips in a second lecture, described the diseases which destroys the young bees in such numoers while still in the larvae stage of development. He also gave directions for the treatment of these diseases.

W. R. Lerch, of Medina, O., spoke on the merchandizing of honey.

THE POOR FARM

Editor Times:

Will you print the following from the Charleston Gazette? It is a report by Dr. McClintic, a member of the Legislature from Greenbrier county. It is for the benefit of the public. Two letters have already been printed. I don't want to get into an argument over this matter, but to my way of thinking something must be done. It will cost as much to equip the prisent poor farm as it will take to buy the Marlinton Hospital. There is now an old colored man at the hospital at county expense; one blind woman and several sick people to whom monthly allowanes are made, and not one sound minded person at the poor farm.

Voter.

ONLY 108 INMATES OF COUNTY POOR FARMS IN STATE NORMAL

Figures By Dr. McClintic, of Greenbrier, show fifty Per Cent of Infirmary Inhabitants In Urgent Need of Medical Treatment.

More than half the inmates of the state's county infirmaries are in need of medical attention and do not properly belong in poor houses, according to figures made public by Dr. C. F. McClintic, of Greenbrier county, a member of the house of delegates, following an investigation of the infirmaries in all the counties.

There are 1,200 inmates in the poor houses of the state, the figures reveal and of this number, 51 per cent are in urgent need of treatment in hospitals. Fifty per cent of the children housed in such institutions are subnormal or feeble minded. Dr. McClintic's report shows, and should receive medical treatment as such.

Only 10 per cent of the inmates on poor fasms are normal, or entitled to habitation on such farms. Of the total number, 22 per cent have mental diseases and 41 are feeble minded.

In one county of the state, Dr. McClintic said, there is housed in a poor farm only one feeble minded girl. There are no other inmates. The state is paying the superintendent and his wife as matron. They have seven children. This institution is run solely for the benefit of the feeble minded girl and she is not receiving the kind of treatment she should.

There are 67 persons housed at the Ohio county poor farm, the investigation of Dr. McClintic revealed, and of this number only six are normal. In other words 61 of the inmates should not be there. Three of them have venereal diseases, 35 are simple minded, 36 are feeble minded; 29 are sick, 17 are cripples, 8 are blind and 1 has epilepsy.

There are no normal inmates at the Harrison County poor farm, according to Dr. McClintic. There are five sub-normal inmates, seven feeble-minded, nine sick, two crippled, one blind, four imbeciles and two deaf.

The report shows that there are no normal residents at the Marshall county poor house. Four are subnormal, six feeble-minded, six sick, one with venereal disease, one cripple, two blind and one epileptic.

Wood county has no inmates who properly should be housed in its poor farm. Three of the inmates are subnormal, 14 feeble-minded, three sick, two crippled, two blind, two epileptic, two deaf, three idiots.

The percentage is about the same in other counties, Dr. McClintic added. The counties with inmates in their poor houses rank as follows:

Ohio, 67; Kanawha, 55; Cabell, 20; Wood, 19; Preston 19; Jefferson 18; Marion 16; Harrison, 15; Wayne, 12; Fayette nine; Randolph, four; Tyler, three; Roane, two.

Dr. McClintic, with other members of the committee of the house of delegates on humane institutions and public buildings, has been working hard during the present session of the legislature to find some resolution to the county poor farm problem but so far no satisfactory bill has been framed.

The house committee has appointed a sub-committee for the purpose of working only on county infirmary problems. One of the propositions considered is to appoint a commission, it is understood, who would comb from the inmates of the county poor farms all those who do not belong there, and to send them to the institutions where they could be treated for their ailments.

It has been suggested by some that the county infirmaries be abolished and a state institution established. If this be done, it is said the number of inmates would not be large, if only those who are "normal" are given protection.

Another problem that is being worked upon by several members of the house is the education of the children in the poor houses. Recently a bill was passed making it optional with the county courts to appoint a school teacher where poor farms have a certain number of inmates of school age.

THE FARMERS PLACE

Roughly, one-third of us in America are farmers. We produce things to eat and wear; two thirds of us are consumers; we have got to have what the farmers produce or we die. We have not looked at it in that way. In the midst of bounty we have figured largely that all that was necessary in order to eat was to open the mouth and put the food in. We are likely to learn better. The fact is the time has come when the consumer two thirds has got to take a real interest in the welfare of the agricultural industry; otherwise, the farmer will keep on curtailing production, and the farmer has the whiphand in the matter. Mr. Urbanite, Mr. Capitalist, Mr. Organized Labor Man. If you don't know it, it's not improbable that you are going to find it out one of these days soon. It will be really good for us all, the waking up. But it will not be pleasant.—Exchange.

The annual value of the strawberry crop in the United States is said to be $18,000,000. It is a crop, specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture warn, that must be handled with the greatest care to avoid waste.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS AT STATE S. S. CONVENTION

On the last evening of the State Sunday School Convention, to be held in Charleston on May 10th, 11th and 12th, the pageant, "The Sunday School From Bethlehem to Tokyo," will be given in the armory under the direction of Prof. H. Augustine Smith, A. M., who is also the author. This is the pageant which was given at the World's Sunday School Convention last fall at Tokyo.

The music of the convention will be something more than convention music under the direction of Prof. H. Augustine Smith, Boston Director of Department of Fine Art in Religion and Social Service, Boston University.

The book used will be the "Hymnal for American Youth," published by the Century Company. Worship in the Sunday school and elsewhere will be demonstrated. It will be an inspiration to take home with you and use for all time. An illustrated lecture on Music and Art will be one of the attractions.

Two entire afternoons will be given over to Divisional Conferences. Each delegate will choose the conference in which he is especially interested and faithfully attend that one. No sight seeing or shopping during convention hours. The program for each conference will contain help for the country and district officers of that division as for the local school worker. The most of the convention is to be found in these conferences.

The quota of Delegates for Pocahontas county is ten. The County President has been furnished with the proper number of credentials.

Badges can be secured only by registering. Admission to the Convention church will be by Badge.

For credentials and further information write County President S. N. Hench, Marlinton, W. Va.

HAS 100 PER CENT PUEBRED SIRES

The township of Jackson, in Hardin County, Ohio, is entirely free from grade and scrub sires. In notifying the United States Department of Agriculture of this fact, Prof. John W. Wulthet, of the Ohio Agricultural Extension Service, adds, "This is the first township which has come to our attention that we feel satisfied is 100 per cent on the right side. No sire was considered pure bred unless it could be proved that the sire and dam were registered."

The survey of sires included the principal classes of live stock, except poultry, and was made for advance credit by a student in the college of agriculture. The survey showed that the township included 165 farms on which were 21 purebred boars, 26 purebred rams, 6 purebred beef bulls, three purebred dairy bulls, and two purebred stalions. No grade or scrub sires of any kind were found in the township.

Lexington Presbytery met last month at Mt. Carmel Church at Steel's Tavern, in Augusta County. This is an old historic church, and the largest country organization in the Synod of Virginia. It was organized in the year 1837, and has enjoyed a steady growth. It is built on a commanding height and is surrounded by an ancient graveyard, and adjacent to the beautiful and well kept cemetery. The old church was superceded by a large brick structure in 1860, and this was replaced in 1915 by the present modern and beautiful edifice, one of the finest country churches to be found in the land. It has a seating capacity of 800 or more, and thoroughly equipped with a Sunday School building, basement and other modern conveniences. A splendid cement driveway around the church is the gift of the McCormick family of Chicago. Cyrus McCormick, the blacksmith, inventor of the McCormick reaper, was a member of this church, and his old shop, where he made the first reaper stands nearby on the 640 acre McCormick homestead. Old Mt. Carmel Church has been served by noted pastors in its day. Among the names are James Paine, John Miller, William Pinkerton, A. H. Hamilton and J. E. Purcell. Rev. J. L. Fairly is the present pastor, and his church is growing in numbers and spirituality; it supports three flourishing out posts. Presbytery met in this church twenty-four years ago. One of the ministers present then, unable to be at the meeting in April is Dr. D. A. Penick, of Lexington, well known to many Pocahontas people. Lexington Presbytery is composed of fifty-nine ministers and sixty-four churches and has thirteen candidates for the ministry under its care.

Mt. Carmel is the home church of C. E. Denison, of Marlinton, to whom this writer is indebted for the above interesting items concerning this historic old church.

Our friend Peter McCarty came to visit us last week. He is one soldier for the Union that Uncle Sam has neglected to remember with a pension. As a boy he volunteered as a member of Company I, Third West Virginia Cavalry at Buckhannon. He saw six months hard service and was taken down with jaundice. He was so sick that he was mustered out of service at Buckhannon. Upon recovering his health, he again volunteered and served a year in the State guard. Mr. McCarty had one brother killed in the battle of Winchester, and another brother who died two years after the war, the hardships and exposure of the war breaking his health.

Nine marriage licenses were issued the first three weeks of April: Wm. M. Hite, 26, and Elsie Beulah Lambert, 22; Lee VanHorn Rose, 30 and Ruby May Peyton, 19; Herbert Gilmer Fisher, 49 and Verdie Blanche Kincaid 30; Sidney Elam 35, and Mrs. Martha H. Perkins 28; George Bartorff Bartholomew, 49 and Lida Wallace McNeel, 26; Emmons F. Moore, 21, and Ina Lee Sharp, 21; George Grover Thompson, 36 and Nannie G. Rose 28; Earl A. Landis, 17 and Lella O. Wooddell 18; Pearl Turner, 26 and Mary Ethel Webster 20.

TWO MEN KILLED WHILE RESISTING ARREST

The Recorder is called upon to chronicle one of those tragic events common throughout the world and read of almost every day, but never brought so close home before.

Clarence and John Ryder, two brothers, aged 26 and 27 years and sons of Andrew Ryder, were mortally wounded while resisting arrest by Sheriff Bird and a posse of sworn deputies near their home five miles east of Monterey Monday afternoon.

It is not the purpose of the Recorder to make of the unfortunate event a sensational, two column newspaper story, but to give, as briefly as possible, the deplorable details and circumstances leading up to and connected with the tragedy, and which are now being investigated and brought out by a coroners jury.

The trouble started when an effort was made to arrest one or all of the three—Lewis Wimer being with the Ryder boys when they drove their Ford car up Main Street at an unlawful and dangerous rate of speed. The officials had one of the brothers in hands when he broke away and ran. Later Wimer was also in the officer's hands when he broke from him but was caught, overpowered and locked up.

Meantime the Ryder boys took a stand on the hill north of town and defied arrest, and it was then that the sheriff deputized a number of citizens to go with him, knowing that the boys not only had a bad feeling for the town authorities but also had fight in them.

The sheriff's posse reached the neighborhood of the Ryder home a head of the boys, having left the autos and approached on foot, and when the young men drove up in their car they were practically surrounded.

What followed has been given with slightly varying details, but as nearly as we could learn, the officers before advancing urged the two boys to submit to arrest, go back to town quietly and that a small fine would end the matter. The reply was a refusal and a threat.

As the sheriff's men attempted to close in a rock and gun battle followed, both the boys being killed. Robert Hedrick, one of the deputies, was struck by two rocks and was the only member of the posse being hurt.

Members of the posse hurried to a neighboring telephone and called Dr Fox to the scene, but both the victims were dead before he arrived. His examination showed that each of the young men had received a shot about the chest.

On Tuesday morning Commonwealth's Attorney, A. L. Jones had E. D. Swecker sworn in as acting coroner and six citizens as members of the jury, and they were driven to the Ryder home to look at the ground, view the bodies and take the testimony of witnesses over there.

The inquest was then adjourned to Monterey and the taking of testimony continued throughout the day. At 4 p. m. the body adjourned until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Verdict of The Coroners Jury

We the jurors sworn to inquire when, how and by what means John Ryder and Clarence Ryder came to their deaths, decide that John Ryder came to his death by gun shots from the hands of the sheriff and his posse in the execution of the duties required of them by virtue of their office, and that Clarence Ryder came to his death by gun shots fired carelessly and recklessly by the sheriff and his posse.

Signed: E. D. Swecker, Coroner

G. D. Dudley

As a matter of course, the unfortunate affair was the chief topic of conversation, and as is also natural sentiment was divided in fixing the blame. Not a few sensational rumors reached town ever and anon, and purely as a precautionary measure, Judge Holt, sitting at the spring session of court had several constables sworn in while the investigation is in progress.

Thoughtful conservative citizens feel confident that sober judgment and counsel will prevail and that any indiscreet act tending to renew or augement the trouble will be discouraged and avoided.

The funeral of the two unfortunate young men took place at Straight Creek church Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 both being buried in the same grave. The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Thumm of the M. E. church and the gathering was one of the largest ever seen on a similar occasion in that community.—Highland Recorder.

I. O. O. F. ANNIVERSARY

Dear Brother:

The members of Marlinton Lodge No. 182 I. O. O. F. will meet in their Hall at Marlinton, Sunday May 8th at two o'clock p. m. and go from there in a body to the Methodist Church where the Anniversary sermon will be delivered by Brother F. B. Wyand.

All visiting and sojourning Odd Fellows are earnastly and cordially invited to meet with us in commemoration of this the 102nd anniversary of the Indepenent Order of Odd Fellows.

Yours in F. L. & T.
C. S. WILEY, Noble Grand,
A. H. McFERRIN, Secretary.

The public is cordially invited to this service.

Pyemia killed a sixteen year old employee of a department store out west the other day. This disease developed from the supposedly harmless act of moistening an envelop with the tongue. A germ on the flap of the envelop entered a small cut on the boy's lip; the tissues began to swell, and the poison passed through the system until it resulted in the young man's death. This should be a warning to anyone who persists in using the tongue in sealing and stamping envelopes. This means should never be employed even in haste. Use an envelope sealer or a sponge; never touch an envelope flap or the back of a stamp with the tongue or lips. And wetting the thumb to turn the pages of a book or to count money is another dangerous and unclean habit. Blood poisoning is nothing to trifle with, and there are plenty of ways to acquire it accidentally, without going out of your way to look for it.—Knickerbocker Press, Albany, N. Y.

YELK

Jake Gibson's family has been sick with grip, but we are glad to say they are better at this writing.

The storm Saturday night did not stop the big play given by the Hanah school. Also the Busy Bee club gave a big pie supper that amounted to $89 and a few cents. Some one is expecting a trip to Morgantown this year.

Samuel Barlow and Collett Gay attended the play and pie supper here Saturday night.

Misses Pearl Carter, Susie Bear and Lillian Hannah, accompanied by Frank Isbell motored over from Marlinton Saturday evening, returning Sunday.

Samuel Gibson is moving to the Head of Elk this week.

Miss Florence Gibson expects to return to the City Hospital, Elkins, where she has a position. She has been visiting her home folks the past month.

Charley Sharp closed his school Friday.

Harry Shelton and family and Mrs. McGuire motored to Slaty Fork Saturday afternoon.

Misses Lucile, Edmonia and Ona Gibson, from the high school at Marlinton, attended the play and pie supper here Saturday night.

Bruce Brown has purchased a new Ford car from Lee Bonner.

Our Sunday School is a succes: several scholars have enrolled, and we hope many more will enroll.

HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETIC

The athletic meet, which was held between the three high schools of the county on last Saturday afternoon, resulted in a victory for the Edray District High School. Out of a total of 108 points the Edray District High School won 69, Hillsboro 25, and Greenbank 14.

Haupt, McLaughlin, and Richardson, all of the local school, were the three individual stars of the meet, having to their eredit 23 points, 15 points, and 12 3-4 points respectively. Gold, silver, and bronze medols were awarded these young men in the order named.

A fine silver loving cup becomes the posession of the local high school for one year. It will again go to the school winning the greatest number of points next year, and will become the permanent property of the school that succeeds in holding it for two years.

EIGHTH GRADE COMMENCEMENT

Commencement exercises for all the eighth grade graduates in Edray and Huntersville districts will be held in the high school at Marlinton, on Saturday afternoon, May 28th at two o'clock. The hour is set at two, so those who live at a distance will be able to attend the exercises and return home before dark that evening, if they wish.

Mr. L. L. Friend, of Charleston, and State Supervisor of High Schools, will deliver the address. County Superintendent, G. D. McNeill will deliver the diplomas to the graduates.

It is hoped that all the graduates in both districts will make it a point to be present for these ererclses.

All parents and patrons of the schools are most cordially invited to attend.

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT

The annual class sermon to the high school graduates will be preached by Rev. Frederick H. Barrow, of Elkins. The exercises will be held in the high school auditorium, on Sunday evening May 22 at eight o'clock.

The high school commencement exercises will be held in the auditorium on Friday evening, May 27, at eight o'clock Professor Walter Barnes, of the Fairmont State Normal School, will deliver the address.

On April 26, 1021, Pearl S. Turner and Miss Mary Ethel Webster were quietly married while seated in a car in front of the parsonage at Edray, by Rev. C. R. Powers. The young couple motored to the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. H. H. Grimes, at Dunmore. Here the young people gave them a good serenading. The bride is a daughter of Jacob Webster, of Buckeye, and the groom is a well known industrious young man. Their many friends wish them a happy, prosperous life. F.

There will be singing at Campbelltown church next Sunday the 15th, by some of the leaders of the county. Also Mr. Hench and Mrs. Rexrode, of Marlinton, will be present and make addresses on Sunday School work. Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

Extensive repairs are being made at the Manse by the Presbyterian congregation.

A large number of trout were caught last week—the first week of the open season.

Fine spring rains today and yesterday are bringing out the grass but are holding up the corn planter.

IN MEMORIAM

Miriam Nancy Walton was born February 25, 1860. Her mother died when she was just a little girl. but the little girl found a friend in Jesus at the age of 15 or 16 years, and united with the M. E. Church, South and remained faithful to her church until her death, a term of 45 or 46 years.

On February 12, 1880, she became the devoted wife of Henry Mason Vaughan. Happy is the man that finds such a wife. To this union were born seven children, six sons and one daughter, Dr. Robert Renick, Dr. Raymond. Forrest Burwell, Joseph Lake, Leonard Anderson, Orlenna Susan and Milton Dye, all of whom survive their mother except Forrest Burwell who died March 29, 1911. She is also survived by her husband who feels that he has lost his life companion and the most valued gem this world can give but has the assurance that in the near future all will be well and they shall meet again an their companionship shall last through eternity.

She has one brother, J. B. Walton, of Renick, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Vaughan of Keyster, yet living.

She loved and served her family as only such wives and mothers can.

She died May 2, 1921, aged 61 years 2 months and 7 days.

On May 4, she was tenderly laid to rest until the happy resurrection morning in the burying ground of her church, Emanuel. The services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. K. D. Swecker.

She has gone to dwell with the Friend she found in her youth, the One who was her comfort and stay in life, her Savior who accompanied her through the Valley when she was called to go.

"Up where the Savior's own face is the light,
The dear ones are gathering home"

A friend.

John F. Duffield, of Roberts, Idaho, is here after an absence of ten years. Four years ago he took up a half section homestead, and has about proved up on it. He is in a wheat raising country and where irrigation water can be had, the country blooms as the rose. Mr. Duffield lives a hundred miles from the famous Teton range of mountains and so clear is the atmosphere that the peaks are plainly visible.

"Savageland," a musical comedy, produced by the seniors of the high school, played to a capacity house on Saturday. It was the most elaborate and successful attempt of this kind ever given in Marlinton Door recetpts amounted to $216. It is hoped that "Savageland" can be given again here.

At a congregational meeting of the Presbyterian church Sunday morning a unanimous call was extended to Rev. Harvey Orr, of Malden. to be come pastor of the Marlinton Presbyterian church. Mr. Orr has the best recommendations as a man, preacher and pastor, and it is hoped that he can see his way clear to accept this call.

Dr. and Mrs. Everett Herold, of Marlinton, W. Va., accompanied by Misses Nelle and Mabel Herold, who are attending school there, spent Sunday at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Herold at Mill Gap and attended the instalation service at Beulah Church Mrs E. B. Whitelaw, of Monterey, was also present.—Highland Recorder.

About 60 Odd Fellows attended the anniversary service at the Methodist church Sunday afternoon. Rev. F. B. Wyand was the speaker and he preached a fine sermon.

Thursday, May 12th will be generally observed throughout the United States by 8,000 hospitals as "A NATIONAL HOSPITAL DAY" on which special effort will be made to inform the public as to the services that the hospitals render as to their relation to the community.

May the 12th was selected as the most fitting date, because on that day was born Florence Nightingale, pioneer in modern hospital and nursing method. We are all familiar with the work of this grand and noble woman.

The hospital of this county has been run under the present management for the past six and one half years. During this time there have been admitted 1427 patients. 628 major operative, the balance general medical and obstetrical cases.

Each year of this time the Hospital has done on an average of $2800. charity board and nursing. Quite a burden for it, especially during the past few years as Hospital cost has mounted to 110 percent increase.

The attention was called to the County Court of our county that 80 percent of the cases who become county dependents were infirm needing medical care, sanitary quarters and nursing.

A committee composed of two men of opposite politics from each district was appointed to make a recommendation. The committee was composed of J. A. Sydenstricker, E. H. Williams, Dr. H. W. McNeel, C. W. Kinnison, R. S. Hickman, Dr. H. H. Moomau, G. M. Sharp and S. P. Curry. They met and recommended sale of the present poor farm. It has been suggested that with the money derived from the sale of said farm that the Marlinton General Hospital be purchased and a County Hospital and Infirmary be started. To be run on pay, part pay and charity basis. By doing this the same Superintendent of nurses and same kitchen would take care of both propositions.

The inmates when sick would have the proper care and attention, not to say anything of their comfort. Again the revenue from pay and part pay cases would take care of part, if not entirely the major maintenance expense. Besides State help that would be obtained as a county institution.

This Hospital to be open to every ethical physician to practice in (this would stimulate our doctors to take up special work) the public would benefit thereby. A health center for the county could be established with headquarters connected with the Institution.

These things are not visionary but practical, all that is necessary for the attaining of same is by cooperation of the public, especially those who stand for better public condi tions. It is better for us to have had a part in leaving better public conditions (church, school, road, etc.) for our children to live under than to leave them wealth.

H. C. SOLTER.

MANY ARTISTS IN BIG SHOW

What promises to be an event in the way of entertainment is the coming of the Campbell-Baily-Hutchinson Combined Circus and Wild West, which will give two persormances at Marlinton Monday May 16.

This year's program includes some of the best known artists in the circus world—the famous Davenport Family of Riders, Azuki troupe of Japs in marvelous acrobatic feats, Campbell-Baily Hutchinson herd of Performing Elephants, Rochetta, the man who walks on his head, Captain Dunbar's trained Seals, Campbell's High School Horses, the Arlington sisters in beautiful living statuary poses, several trained wild animal acts, also a miniature department for the little folks, which includes trained ponies, dogs and monkeys and a score of funny clowns.

This year's performance is augmented by a thrilling Wild West exhibition presented by Cowboys and Cowgirls, Indians and Mexicans, introducing half a score of wonderful riders and ropers, including Texas Joe, fancy rider, expert rifle shot and Australian whip cracker, Orville Gillam, champion roper of the southwest, Cheyenne Charlie, trick rider par excellent, Oklahoma Bill, whose ability to top a pitching porse is known from one end of the west to the other. TANNING WHITE LEATHER IN JAPAN

By Lloyd Balderston,
In Our Views and News.

White leather has been made a Takagi, Japan, for over three hundred years. The village has a population of about 3500, living in 600 houses, occupying a space of hardly more than ten acres. It is said to be like a piece of China set down in the midst of Japan, and to the Japanese the villagers have a different look from other people. They were of the "eta" class in the old days. This class was the lowest, socially, and certain occupations including leather making, were carried on by eta only. They were meat eaters in the old days when the Japanese did not generally eat meat. The name eta has no official recognition in Japan now. The late Emperor early in his reign abolished the eta class and promoted them to be "hemin," ordinary people. But I notice that the term "shinhenim is in use, which means new hemin," so there is a distinction, whether there is a difference or not. Whatever the social handicap of the people of Takagi may be, they make a very useful product, which nobody has succeeded in imitating.

This little place furnishes nearly all of the $150,000 worth of white leather produced annually in Japan. The industry is essentially a domestic one, in which practically all of the people old enough to work are engaged for at least a part of their time. The tools required are few and inexpensive, and but little space is needed for the part of the work which is done indoors.

The river is swift, and the main current flows along an outer curve past the village. The slope of the river bank is perhaps 50 yards wide, and it is gridironed with ridges at right angles to the stream. These are a foot high with a steep side toward the north and a gentle slope some 8 feet facing the south, forming a sort of sloping terrace, built of pebbles. These ridges number a hundred or more, and on a sunny day they will be covered with hides loosly spread out, grain side up. Japanese white leather, like hay, must be made while the sun shines.

In making white leather any kind of a hide will do. Japanese green or wet-salted hides are used to some extent. We saw one freshly flayed cow hide being brought in to be put in process. The great majority, however, are dry or dry-salted hides of rather inferior quality. This is possible because most of the uses to which the leather is put are such as not to demand large pieces without blemish, and on the other hand the price which the product demands is too low to warrant the use of high grade stock.

The first process is to tie the hides by ropes to stakes set in the river in water one or two feet deep, in such a way that they float out and wave up and down in the current. The water must be clear and not too warm, so in summer this soaking is done in a branch of the river coming down out of the mountains which is cooler than the main stream. The time required for the hair to be ready to slip in summer is three days for fresh hides, four days or more for dry or dry salted ones. In spring and fall these periods are longer, ranging perhaps from ten to fourteen days. In the fall the hides are often taken out of the water and laid in a pile covered with mats for a few days to sweat before the hair will slip. In winter this first soaking may take a month. The unhairing is done on a flat board, the worker standing up, the board with the hide being on the ground. The hair is pushed off with a tool consisting of a slightly curved blade fastening spade-wise to a handle four feet or more long.

The next process is a brief washing The hides are then shaved to the required thickness on a flat cherry plank about 14 inches wide sloping about 30 degrees from the horizontal with a knife built much like a spoke shave except that the very thin blade is at right angles to the face of the tool, This tool is pushed, not pulled. It takes about forty minutes to shave a skin. The material shaved off is dried in cakes about 12 by 16 inches in size and an inch thick and sold for glue stock.

The wet shaved hides are now sprinkled with salt, from one and a half to three quarts, depending on the size of the hide. The hide is now trodden and worked with the bare feet to work in the salt. This is done in a shallow wooden tub. The color becomes lighter as the salt penetrates, and this color change is the index of the completion of the process, which requires fifteen minntes or more for one hide. The hides are now packed into a cask where they lie for from one to three days for the salt to become uniformly distributed. During this period the grain is liable to become mottled by the growth of some organism on the surface.

The next step is to spread the hides out in the sunshine to dry and begin the bleaching process. If the sun is not shining, they are trodden every day until it does, to prevent the mottling of the grain. The period of exposure to sunshine required for this first drying and bleaching is sometimes as short as two or three days in dry, warm weather, but in winter it may reach thirty days. The completion of this stage is judged by the appearance of crystals of salt on the grain side. To decide when the proper condition is reached is one of the most difficult points in the whole process.

The next stage may be translated as "seasoning," but the term is rather contradictory, as it consists in the removal of salt by soaking. In summer this is done by immersion in the river, but in cool weather the hides are placed in a water cask. The proper length of soaking to leave just enough salt in the skin is determined by tasting. After drying, the hide is ready to receive the rape seed oil, which is the chief agent in the actual tannage. The surface is prepared to receive it by spraying with water blown from the mouth as the Chinese laundrymen used to sprinkle clothes. The oil is applyed to the flesh side with a swab, from two to five ounces per hide, depending on size and thickness. Marsne animal oil may be used instead of rape, but the color of the finished leather is not so white as that made with rape oil.

A number of holes are now cut around the edge of the hide, and a string run through, making a bag of it, grain side out, This is so folded as to make a mass two feet or so long, and the second treading process begins. This time the hide rests on a straw mat on the floor. The worker grasps a horizontal bar and kneads the hide with his bare feet, much as a housewife used to treat dough with her hands. I suppose there is some Japanese term to denote foot skill as dexterity describes the skill of the right hand, and that it is applied to the deft movements by which the soft mass is worked over and over until the oil comes through to the grain side. This work is done by men, women and half-grown children. The warmth of the feet is an essential element in it. The time required is from a half day to a day or more, depending on the size of the hide and the weight and strength of the worker.

A light coat of oil is now applied to the grain side, and another shorter period of treading follows. Next comes a second period in the sun, shorter than the first, and depending on the weather as before. Another treading follows, a little oil and water being applied if needed. The next step is to wash with a little water, to avoid loss of salt. The hide is spread on a horizontal board and a wisp of straw is used as a brush. If the hair did not come off entirely in the first place, remaining patches are now removed by shaving with a knife and another period of drying and bleaching follows, covering three days or more.

Another treading comes next, then a first staking, about fifteen minutes to a skin. The staking tool is of a familiar pattern, but the upright is not high enough for a western man to work at with comfort. Another period in the sunshine follows, then another treading, the grain inside this time, and then another staking.

Now follows a long period of bleaching in the sun forty days in winter, but sometimes as little as four in summer. The color at the end of this period is white, the yellow due to the oil having been entirely bleached out. After this the goods lie in pile, folded, for from thirty to sixty days, depending on the time of year. (The temperature reaches the freezing point only a few times in the course of the winter in Himeja.) During the piling the oil comes to the surface again, but a few hours bleaching restores the white color.

A short soaking to remove more salt is now given, the proper point being determined as before by tasting. This results in bringing back the yellow color again. Another washing with a wisp of straw is followed by sunning for about a day. The leather is now rather hard, the grain side smooth, hair pattern hardly showing. The flesh side is somewhat yellow.

Each hide is now folded in four and placed in the river until just wet through, then trodden and staked, then laid in the sun for half an hour, and while warm from the sunshine trodden again for half an hour and staked for half an hour. The skin is now quite white and the hair pattern shows plainly.

Another sunning of from one to to three hours is followed by another treading and staking. The hides are spread out on the ground over night to become damp, and then pegged out on straw mats on the ground, stretched tightly, being exposed to the sun for final drying. The whole time consumed in the process averages about six months.

The product is as soft as well bated side leather, as tough and durable as oil-tanned lace leather and as white as the whitest alum-tanned leather. It is divided into three grades with respect to thickness, and these are subdivided in grades of both quality and weight. The heavy grade averages 35 pounds per 100 square feet, present prices ranging from 61 to 65 sen per square foot. The actual measure used is the square shaku, which is about 0.99 of a square foot. The sen is about half a cent. Medium weight ranges around 25 pounds per 100 square feet and baings from 59 to 62 sen. Light weight averages 17 pounds per 100 square feet and brings from 57 to 60 sen. The grading is done at the request of exporters, the pound used being the same as ours. Quality is not very uniform, there being too many factors difficult to control.

The heavier grades are mostly used in Japan, largely for straps of various kinds, lacings for fencing armor, belts for light machinery, etc. The best quality wooden clogs have white leather straps. Export trade takes the lighter skins. These are used for suspender tabs, bags purses and fancy articles of various kinds. The low prices above quoted are made possible by the fact that the hides used are cheap, and the further facts that the expense for materials is very small, that the glue stock commands a steady market at a good price, and most important of all, that the labor is very poorly paid. Tanneries elsewhere are beginning to draw on the skilled resources of Takagi, and this fact cannot fail to have its effect on the conditions of work here. It is greatly to be desired that such a laborious manufacture should be rewarded by better prices being obtained for the white leather.

Many of the hides we saw were seriously defective, full of warble holes, "sunburned" or otherwise injured. One was branded "C C," apparently a Mexican hide. The same kind of leather is made at two other villages near Himeji, but is not so good as the Takigi product. The difference is attributed to slower current in the stream and lower purity of the water. At Osaka and Kobe it is impossible to make it because the air is so full of soot that everything laid out in the sun becomes dirty beyond recovery.

It has been suggested that the production of this leather is in some waypromoted by the character of the water. Such an explanation is very improbable. The country has heavy rainfall, and the Ichikawa is a short and rapid stream of high volume. Under such circumstances the presence in the water of any mineral matter having tannin effect is not likely. The mere fact that when the water is moderately warm hides immersed in it slip their hair in a few days shows that it is not a tanning agent.

I believe that this famous leather is simply oil-tanned with the minimum of oil and the maximum of labor. In the first place, about 5 per cent of salt is worked in, and this produces a sort of temporary tannage. It is a familiar fact that a salted hide is not flint hard. The working in of the oil is very thorough, and as it slowly produces its tanning effect, the salt is gradually worked out. In the ordinary kind of oil tannage, a great excess of oil is used, and afterward removed. There is no more free oil in chamois than in Japanese white leather, and it is possible to bleach chamois almost white by exposing it to the sun in a damp condition. If a split cowhide was subjected to chamoisage with rape seed oil and then sun-bleached, it would probably be much like Japanese white leather. I intend to try some experiments along this line, but shall be glad if other leather men will do the same, especially if they will publish their results.

THE SUMMER OF 1816

"I haven't heard much else but talk about the weather since I came to New York," said Nonagenarian James Winchester, of Vermont, who is visiting his daughter in this city, "and you have had a pretty snug winter for here, I suppose, but I remember the year that was winter from one end of it to the other, and when the weather was so severe in June that a terrible snowstorm prevailed on the 17th of that month, and people froze to death in the month of roses. I don't think there are many people who have as vivid a recollection of the year without a summer as I have, for various reasons, one being that there are few surviving who was as old as I was in that year, and another is because a near relative of mine was frozen to death in Vermont on June 17th of that year, which was the year 1816

"I was 14 years old then, and lived in Vermont, where I always lived, and where that memorable season was at its very worst, as in the other New England States in June snow fell, but 5 inches deep, and in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey it was nowhere deeper than 3 inches. In Vermont it was 10 inches on the level. I mean the great snow of June 17th. Snow fell several times during that month, and ice froze every day in the month. In fact there were snow and ice in every month of 1816.

"That snowstorm of June 17th was one of the severest ones I ever saw, even in the depth of winter in that locality of severe snows. An uncle of mine had some sheep in a back pasture lot. To get to that lot he had to go through a piece of woods for nearly a mile. The weatner had been very cold all through June. The big storm of the 17th began along about noon, and my uncle started after dinner to go to the sheep pasture to fix up a shelter of some kind for the sheep. No one had an idea, cold and eccentric as the weather had been up to that time, that we could have a fall of snow that would amount to anything at that time of year. I was at my uncle's when he left home to go to the sheep lot, and as he went out of the door he said to his wife in a jocular way:

"If I'm not back in an hour, call the neighbors and start them after me. June is a bad month to get buried in the snow, especially when it gets so near the month of July.

"Nothing more was thought of the matter. The snow increased in fury and by night had drifted so that the roads were almost impassible, but even then, and when it grew dark, none of us felt uneasy about uncle. The weather had become bitter cold. When night set in in earnest, and there was no sign of my uncle's return, his wife sent me and my cousin, who was two years younger than me, to alarm the neighbors and tell them that we believed uncle had been lost in the snow and had perished

"We had a hard time getting to the nearest neighbor's less than a mile away and there gave the alarm, but could go no further. The neighbor summoned others, and, in spite of the severity of the night they searched the woods until morning, but no sign of the missing man could be found. The search was taken up by others the following day and all of the next night, without any trace of him being discovered, except that he reached the pasture and built a shelter of boughs in one corner of the lot, under which the sheep huddled. On the forenoon of the third day the searchers found my uncle buried in the snow a mile from the pasture, in almost an opposite direction from home. He was frozen stiff.

He had evidently become bewildered in the blinding storm and had wandered about until he succumbed to fatigue and cold. It seems a most improbable thing that a person ever fell a victim to a snowstorm in the middle of June in this latitude but I have this sorrowful knowledge of one instance, at least, wheresuch a thing was only too true.

"The wind during June, July and August of 1816 was continuously from the north, and it blew fiercely and cold. Farmers wore heavy overcoats and mittens while about their work every day during those months. There was but little use of planting anything, nothing grew to speak of, but they did plant corn as usual, and planted with mittens on.

"There was very little rain during the entire season. The great piles of firewood that always accumulated during the summer months at the farm-house back doors in readiness for winter didn't accumulate in 1816. They were needed for current use. July was colder even than June, and August was colder than July. Ice half an inch thick was formed in July, out in August it froze an inch and more. There was a heavy snowstorm on Aug. 30. The whole summer was as bleak and dreary as November. There was not a green thing to be seen anywhere. The first two weeks in September brought the first real warm weather there had been during the year. The thermometer went up to 70 degrees, which was 25 degrees warmer than it had been since May.

"The general opinion had been that the cause of the cold summer was a sudden and rapid cooling of the sun by some violent disturbance, and many believed that the end of all things was at hand. The appearance of the warm spell in September, though, dispelled that fear for a time but on the 16th of the month the cold weather returned suddenly, and the calamity believers were once more made miserable by their old fear. One old man, James Gooding by name, was so hopeless over the prospect that he killed all his cattle and then hanged himself, after vainly trying to induce his wife to make away with herself also, to escape the terrible and gradual death by freezing and starvation, which he believed was to be the common doom.

"Cold increased from the middle of September until winter returned, and it may truly be said that, in Vermont at least the year 1816 had neither spring, summer nor autumn. There wasn't grain enough grown that year to seed the next year, and those who were lucky enough to have more of the crop of 1815 on hand than they wanted for their own use had no difficulty in selling it for $5 or more a bushel."—New York Sun.

"A JEWEL OF CHICAGO" Is Title Applied to Wrigley Building

Wrigley's new office building in Chicago is at the new Boulevard Link Bridge, Michigan avenue and the river and heads the vista looking north on Michigan avenue, so Mr. Wrigley chose a beautiful design which makes the building a decorative feature of the Chicago lake front and harmonizes with the Chicago Beautiful plan.

Wrigley Building

The main building is 16 stories high, surmounted by a tower 42 feet square and rising 398 feet from the street level. This tower will contain a clock with dials on four sides, each 20 feet in diameter and will be surmounted by a searchlight lantern 9 feet in diameter.

The building is covered with enamel finish terra cotta on all four sides. It is regarded as one of the most beautiful buildings in Chicago and people and press are enthusiastic about it. The Chicago Tribune published a picture labeling it a "A Jewel of the Link."

Wrigley also recently completed new factories at Chicago and New York.

All this new construction work in the space of a few years is certainly a tribute to the power of advertising and the accumulative effect of a multitude of 5-cent sales.

Among the commencement features of the high school will be class day program, Thursday afternoon, Nay 26, at 2:30 The program will consist of a class prophecy, history, and valedictory address. At the close stunts will be put on by the freshmen, sophomore and junior classes and the faculty. This is the first year that class day has been held at E. D. H. S. and it is hoped that the public will attend.

Before deciding on your next tire have your dealer show you cross-sections of the various makes you are considering—so that you can measure the total thickness of the rubber and fabric used in building up the various makes.

You will find that Michelin Tires embody more of these mileage-giving materials. In the 34x4 Michelin Universal, for example, there is a solid though flexible mass of wear-resisting rubber and fabric almost an inch thick.

Every bit of the materials used is of the highest quality. Yet Michelins are moderate in price.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

FROM UNIVERSITY

Now is the time to test seed corn, to test garden and other seeds, to repair plows, harrows and other machinery, to repair harness, to plant your hot bods, to get tools, posts and other fence material ready for fence building, to buy all spring seeds and fertilizers not already provided, to get out manure and to plan a crop rotation.

Are you pruning now? Get your pruning done before growth starts in the spring. Prune light for trees that have been previously well cared for. Winter pruning is the only kind that pays. Never prune in the summer.

Dynamiting Soil Doesn't Pay.

Dynamiting has not proved by experiments to be a profitable means of breaking up impervious subsoils, either for common farm crops or for setting out fruit trees. The cost of dynamiting was $17 an acre.

Fertilizer Pays in an Orchard

On old bearing orchards in sod on fairly poor land, the West Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station has produced apples at a cost of 14 cents a bushel by applying 5 pounds of nitrate of soda around each tree. Apples grown without the use of nitrate of soda. cost $1 a bushel.

Do You Roll Your Wheat?

Roll your wheat this spring and follow the roller with a harrow to leave a mulch on top of the ground. The rolling helps germination. Experiments at the Nebraska Experiment Station show that rolled wheat produced 43 bushel and unrolled wheat 38 bushel to the acre, a gain of 5 bushels.

Editor Times:

The Grimes Golden apple did not emanate from Hampshire county as you say in a recent issue. The famous fruit was discovered on the Grimes farm in Brooke County more than a century ago. The old tree was still standing last August. At intervals it is oiled and scraped in order to preserve it as long as possible. When it finally succumbs another tree of the same variety will be planted in its place.

This apple has found its way to every land where apples are grown, and many famous Horticulturists have made long journeys to where the parent tree still stands.

West Virginia has given the world another apple, which may surpass the Grimes. It is known as the Golden Delicious and was found on a mountain side in Clay county. The owner, A. H. Mullens, was paid $5,000. for the tree by a western nursery and it is enclosed in a steel cage with a burgular alarm system. This seedling has supplied budding stock for thousands of trees now in bearing.

Nature seems to place her finest gifts in her remote chambers, but where quality excells they are certain to prove their worth. This is also true of men or the works of men. Henry Watterson says that God went to the forest and set Abraham Lincoln up in His own back yard according to His own notion and for the great purpose "Honest Abe" lived to accomplish.

Isolation is no bar. "If a man can preach a better sermon, write a better book, or make a better mouse trap than his neighbor, although he live in a wilderness, the world will make a beaten path to his door."

O. H. Adkinson,
Interstate, W. Va.

Our good friend George A. C. Auldridge is out for the Republican nomination for Assessor of Pocahontas County. While there is no part of a politician in his make up, our idea is that the man who beats him to the nomination or to the office will know that he has been running some. Mr. Auldridge is a farmer, born and raised on the waters of Stony Creek in the good old District of Edray. He has held office, but not enough to hurt him any. For years he was on the school board, and the past term he has served as Deputy Sheriff. He has made good in both offices, conducting public business in a manner to suit us, and give us a respect for his ability and his honest intentions, and an admiration for his old fashioned back bone.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, Marlinton, January 28, 1920, a son.

COUNTY COURT

County court met on Tuesday with all the members present. A lot of accounts were audited and allowed. Since the first of the year claims for the killing of 35 wild cats have been filed and paid.

John E. Barlow, T. S. McNeel, J. C. Harper and A. R. Gay qualified as notaries.

N. C. McNeil was recommended for appointment as a notary.

Engineer Hill, of the State Road Department and Mr. Gray of the Federal Roads Bureau, were at court and went over the Campbelltown and Huntersville Road Project. The contract for macadamizing from Marlinton to Campbelltown with a tar bound macadam will probably be advertised for a continued term to be held March 9. The road between Marlinton and Huntersville will be allowed to settle thoroughly before being surfaced.

A new election precinct was created in the Edray District with the voting precinct at or around Onoto. Changes were ordered in the lines of the following precincts in Greenbank District, Durbin, Boyer and Bartow. The precinct at Burner was discontinued.

Court will meet in regular session on Tuesday, March 2.

Once in ever so many years this paper is called upon to announce that it is time to once again nominate and elect S. L. Brown to the office of County Clerk. It don't seem possible that six years should have rolled around so quickly, but this is the year, nevertheless. Our motion is to make his nomination and election unanimous. The longer he stays in office the better clerk he makes. The office was never in better condition than it is today. It is an office in which every one is vitally interested, and the one office that the citizenship of the county does business with every day of the year. Few farmers there are who have not been saved a lawyer's fee and maybe a lawsuit by Mr. Brown's familiarity with the land books and his never failing courtesy and obliging disposition in looking up land titles and other things that are not exactly in the routine of his duties as clerk. The voters of the county experimented once. Let's make it unanimous this year.

Local Weather Observer S. L. Brown reports the weather for January as follows—Coldest 6 below zero on the 3rd, warmest 50 above on the 9th, total rainfall 4.03 inches. greatest fall in 24 hours 1.95 inches on the 22nd. The total snowfall for the month was one inch. Rained on 9 days, clear 5 days, cloudy 14 days and partly cloudy 12 days. The average temperature for the month was 25.5 degree: sleet on the 7th, 16th and 21st. Dense fog on the 8th, 9th, 21st and 23rd.

As had been anticipated Squire Aaron A. Sharp, of the Huntersville District, is out for the Republican nomination for Assessor. He is a good man and if elected will make a safe man for the office. His experience in public office has been confined to the school board and justice of the peace, He belongs to that vote getting Sharp family. He is a farmer, about 40 years old, able and energetic.

E. G. Quackenbush, official court reporter, 20th Judicial Circuit, has come to Marlinton to make his home with us. When not engaged in court work he is open to calls as a public stenographer. Mr. Quackenbush's home is in Washington, where his family will remain until a house can be procured in Marlinton. He is an expert stenographer with long experience and has principally been employed in government service.

The flu is pretty well distributed over the town of Marlinton at this time. So far it is not being followed by pneumonia to the alarming extent of last year. To avoid it keep out of crowded places. When you get it go to bed and do what the doctor tells you to. Those who had the flu last year seem to enjoy a certain amount of immunity from a second attack. In another column is published recommendations to the state and local Boards of Health.

Word was received on Monday by C. E. Denison of the death of his mother, Mrs. Fannie Denison at her home at Vesuvius, Virginia. She had been sick with pneumonia. Her age was fifty-nine years.

INFLUENZA PRECAUTIONS

There is a recent tendency to a recurrence of influenza, several local outbreaks having been reported in this state and in a number of cities in other states. The following suggestions are therefore presented by the State Health Department for the guidance of the people and local health authorities;

1. All physicians should report to the Health Officer all cases of diseases suspected to be influenza.

2 Cases having symptoms of this disease should be carefully isolated. and the houses placarded.

3 The use of masks and the disenfection of hands should be practiced by those in attendance on cases of influenza or cases suspected of being influenza.

4 Steps should be taken to effect organizations for furnishing medical and nursing care for influenza cases in case of an epidemic.

5 Restaurants and soda fountains should be frequently inspected, and the silver and glass ware should be boiled or disinfected, or sanitary paper cups should be used.

6 It is not believed that much benefit will be derived from closing schools of the cities, as the children will be permitted to collect on streets and the danger of transmitting infection will not be diminished.

7 Individuals should endeavor to improve their vital resistance by careful attention to the laws of health, and nothing will contribute more to this than sleeping with the windows widely open.

8 Those sick with influenza should carefully be confined to bed and remain there for several days after all fever has disappeared. In this way no doubt many cases of pneumonia will be prevented.

9 Crowds should be avoided by all, as patients in the incipient stages of the disease may be present and in this way influenza is often communicated.

10 The closing of theatres, while it may diminish the chances of disseminating the disease, can not be urged unless all other public places are also closed, and the concensus of opinion among sanitarians is, that this is scarcely justified by the results to be expected. However, all persons can protect themselves by remaining away from theatres, and this is strongly advised in communities where an outbreak exists.

MATHIAS L. MOORE

Word has been received that Mathias L. Moore died at Knox, Pennsylvania on January 14, 1920 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ida Wilchins. He was born in this county and was the brother of the late C. L. Moore, who preceded him to the grave Sept. 9, 1918. He was just reaching his 80th birthday and seemed to be in good health until he was stricken with pneumonia in both sides, and quietly passed away. Before dying he spoke of his readiness and willingness to obey his Masters call. Mr. Moore served as a Confederate soldier, and much of his time was spent in Botetourte County, Virginia.

John P. Shue has sold his place near Callaghans. Va., and bought a place neas Keister, this county, and moved on to it. He is a native of Pocahontas county. Albert Cutlip, of Mill Point, Pocahontas connty, has also bought and will soon move to the place he now owns near Keister.—Greenbrier Independent.

Word has been received of the sudden death of Prof. Victor E. G. Emery at his home at West Union where he was teacher of science in the High school. Prof. Emery was principal of the Edray District High school at Marlinton last year.

INFLUENZA

The disease is epidemic at this time in this county, and practically all other parts of the United States, entire families being reported sick of the disease. It is a winter disease, and every season sees its return in a more or less severe form. The name "FLU" should be dropped from the vernacular, as it was under that name that the people of the world were terrorized in the great epidemic of 1918, the impression generally being fostered by the newspapers and the health authorities that it was some new and strange plague that afflicted a war-worn earth. A myth or hoodoo was thus created that did incalculable harm, fear of the disease lowering the power of resistance of many, who thus unneccessarily succumbed. It is literally true, in the writer's opinion, that many people when informed that they had contracted "FLU", turned their faces to the wall, and were soon no more.

The real dangers that follow influenza are pneumonia and pleurisy. These may largely be prevented by rest and warmth in the early stages of the disease. Stay in the house, preferably in bed, and keep the rooms comfortably warm both day and night.

Most adult people have had the disease at least once before. School children seem most susceptible, as it is probable that partial immunity, at least, is conferred by one attack.

The advice of an optimist is to keep the feet dry, the spirit cheerful, reflect on your past life and your future state, and, if your constitution is reasonably sound, expect to weather this attack and regain health.

N. R. PRICE, M. D.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

The local chapter of the Red Cross has delegated the undersigned as chairman of the nursing committee. There is need right now of a number of volunteer nurses to work in Marlinton in families where every member is down with influenza. This work will be paid for by the families if they can, and by the Red Cross where necessary. To those who have had more or less nursing experience, whether they work for their living or not, this is a call to duty. Let me know who you are, what you are willing to do, and experience you have had.

THE CARELESS SMOKER

(Apologies to Kipling.)

A fool there was and his pipe he lit
(Even as you and I)
On a forest trail where the leaves were tit
To become ablaze from the smallest bit
Of spark—and the fool he furnished it—
The day was windy and dry.

The forest was burned to its very roots,
Even beneath the ground,
With the flowers, the birds and the poor dumb brutes,
Old hoary oaks and the tender shoots
Which might have made logs but for such galoots
Allowed to wander round.

The lumber Jack has now passed on
His pay day comes no more,
And the screech owls haunt the camp at dawn
Where the cook's tin pan woke the men of brawn
But the mill is silent, the trees are gone
The soil and the forest floor.

A deadly sight are those hills of rocks
Which once were beds of green.
No hope for the human, no food for the flocks
The floods must be held by expensive locks
And the harbor is silted to the docks
The ships no more are seen

But the fool smokes on in the forest still
While the patient public pays the [illegible] bill
And the nation's wealth is destroyed for nil,
If the law doesn't get him, Old Satan will
When his smoking days are through.

HUNG JURY

The jury failed to reach a verdict in the case of State of West Virginia against Brown L. Galford, tried in the Randolph Circuit Court at Elkins last week. It is presumed that the case will be retried in Elkins at the September term. Galford is being tried for the killing of George W. Duncan in November, 1919, while Galford was serving as a Marlinton policeman. At the first trial Galford was sentenced to 15 years. The Supreme Court granted a new trial.

MAN KILLED IN GREENERIER

The body of a young man named Howard Moore was found on the river bank at the bridge a short distance from Anthony station Tuesday afternoon of last week. There was a bullet hole in his neck from a small calibre gun. and the man had been dead some hours.

On Tuesday of this week R. W. Iagram, of Anthony, gave himself up to Constable Fleshman, confessing that he had shot Moore. He is now in jail at Lewisburg. He is about sixty-five years old, and his daughter is the wife of the dead man. The couple had not been living together for a number of years. It is reported thrt Ingram and Moore had a fuss Sunday afternoon.

Howard Moore was about thirty years old and had worked on Cheat Mountain. He had recently returned from St Albans. During the late war he was a soldier.

J. W. Riley, of Arbovale, is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. W. A. Eskridge.

J. W. Malcomb returned today from Andalusia, Alabama, where he spent the winter.

Miss Opal Gum went to Huntington Saturday to enter Kesler Hospital to train for a nurse,

Miss Mary Eskridge returned yesterday from Blackstone College, having graduated.

Rev. E. B. Moore, of Huntington, was in Marlinton Wednesday, on his way to his farm on Back Alleghany.

J. C. Harper was down from Knapps creek Wednesday. His many friends will be glad to know that while he still walks with a cane, he has made a remarkable recovery from the very serious injuries he sustained in a log train wreck last fall.

FLYING MACHINES

Three big flying machines came down Stony Creek and went up Knapps Creek, Wednesday afternoon. They passed over Marlinton about 1:45 o'clock, headed due east, and disappeared in a big fleecy cloud bank over in Virginia somewhere. It is not known from whence they came nor whither they were going, but there is a coast to coast flight in progress and these machines might possibly be some of them. They were flying high when they went over Marlinton.

At a meeting of the County Farm Bureau last Saturday, it was decided that one of the best means of promoting better conditions and developing more prosperous agriculture was the organization of local farmers' clubs, which will meet once a month with the county agent for the purpose of discussing and bettering local affairs. County agent H. C. C. Willey has prepared a schedule of the first meetings which is published in this paper. This writer feels sure that the time is ripe for such community clubs, and that the farmers will attend and cooperate.

Ben Smith was before Squire McCarty Tuesday night on a charge of transporting moonshine. One hundred dollars and sixty days was his portion. An appeal was taken to the Circuit Court. He was one of the men who went to the bushes when the constables got an automobile and some moonshine on the Huntersville road Monday afternoon.

Notice to Taxpayers

In compliance with the new law and at the instance of the State Tax Commissioner, I give the following notice.

On or after July 1st I will begin to revalue the real estate together with the improvements thereon, as required by the acts of the Legislature 1921. All persons who own real estate in this county with improvements not assessed thereon, are requested to come to the assessor's office and have same placed on the land books for 1921, as all such improvements I find after commencing the re-valuation not on the land books I will be compelled to back tax for the years said improvements did not appear on said books for taxations, at the increased value of said property as provided by law.

The Tax Commissioner asks that the assessors begin now the preliminary work for the next year's assessment of property, as time was not given to make effective the provisions of the assessment bill passed by the recent legislature to any great extent in this years assessment.

This is in accordance with the directions of the State Tax Commissioner's general plan of bringing about a re-assessment of all real estate upon the basis of its "true and actual value."

The meaning of the above notice is that every real estate owner who has not given in the improvements on his land is required to appear at the assessor's office and list such improvements or suffer the penalty of having back taxes charged against him at the increased value of said property as required by law.

Notice

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that at a general meeting of the stockholders of the Mountain View Orchard Company, held at its office in the town of Marlinton, Pocahontas County, West Virginia, on the 24th day of June, 1919, a resolution was adopted by a majority in interest of the entire stock of said company, as follows:

RESOLVED: That this corporation, The Mountain View Orchard Company, discontinues business as a corporation and surrender to the State of West Virginia, its charter and corporate franchises, and after paying all its debts and liabilities, divide its property assets remaining among the stockholders. And to this end the board of directors will proceed, as speedily as possibly, to convert all the property, choses in action, and assets of this corporation into money and pay off and discharge all debts and liabilities according to their priorities; and after fully discharging all such debts and liabilities to divide and pay over all such assets remaining to the several stockholders of this company, pro rata, with their several holdings of stock. But no payment shall be made to any stockholders until after the publication of the notice of this resolution as herein provided.

RESOLVED FURTHER: That the president or vice-president of this corporation cause a notice of the adoption of this resolution to be published in the Pocahontas Times, a newspaper published near the place of business of this corporation, once a week for at least four weeks, and that he forthwith certify under his signature and the seal of this corporation, a copy of this resolution to the Secretary of the State of West Virginia.

Given under my hand 21st day of January, 1920.

L. M. McClintic,
Vice-President.

THREE MEN IN BOAT

Beverly, W. Va.
Jan. 26, 1920.

My Dear Andy:

Note the enclosed from our old friend, the Envious Turk—you remember he formerly lived in Pocahontas and was Prosecuting Atty. You remember also that he married Miss. Willie Cary, of Lewisburg. You observe that he is poking fun at Genl. Goff, Genl. Dana and myself on account of our marrying so late in life. If you desire you can publish this letter in your paper and make some of your characteristic comments, which are always instructive, original and entertaining.

With kind regards and best wishes,
Sincerely yours,
RANDOLPH STALNAKER,

Washington, D. C.
Jany. 21, 1920.

Hon. Randolph Stalnaker,
Beverly, W. Va.

Dear Ran:

In perusing the Sacred Volume as is my custom my eye fell upon the story of the Star of Bethlehem and "the Wise Men of the East." There were three of them and they are said to have gone bouncing about over the desert on camels at night. This did not seem to me very wise, when in modern times the "Wise Men of the West" (There are Three Wise, Men of the West) sit by an open wood fires rubbing their shins, and enjoying the fruits of their wisdom. These three wise men are Eugene Dana, Gen. Nathan Goff, and Hon. Randolph Stalnaker. Should I ever seek wise men, I will look west instead of east, because I know where the real wise men live.

Very truly yours,
R. S. TURK.

We thought to save the letter to print on the occasion of Maj. Stalnaker's golden wedding but tempus fugit and typos fergit, and we think it is a very pretty picture, the grouping of these three distinguished West Virginians, who exemplify so well the virility of the breed. Too good to lose. The Bible says that love is as strong as death. Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it.

When we think of our boyhood companion, Hon. Randolph Stalnaker, of Randolph Place, Beverly, Randolph County, we are irresistibly reminded of what the old Roman writer Terence said: It is possible that a man can be so changed by love that one could not recognize him to be the same person.

And by the way that is the first time that we have ever heard him admit that he was over twenty-one, though we knew that he was Secretary of State in '76.

O. Henry gives an account of a courting couple and their Christmas presents. They were poor. The woman had her hair cut off and sold and with the money purchased a watch chain for her lover. And the man sold his watch and bought some hair combs for his sweetheart.

Charles Dickens says that he was present at a church where there was a country wedding. When the bride groom came to sign the register, he made a mark, and the bride made a mark also, though she was the prize scholar of the village school.

And these scientists whose business it is to improve upon nature tell strange stories about beautiful young women coming to them to have their hair made gray.

Nature itself seems to take care of people in that as the wrinkles come the eyesight fades.

"For age is opportunity no less
Than youth itself, though in another dress,
And as the evening twilight fades away
The sky is filed with stars, invisible by day."

THE VENEREAL SCHOOL

The U. S. Public Health Service in cooperation with the West Virginia State Department of Health held a school of instruction in Charleston during the week of January 12th to 17th for the purpose of instructing a class of fifty physicians in the most up-to-date methods of treating venereal diseases.

The venture is reported to have been a great success. Nearly fifty physicians devoted the entire week to intensive study and close observation. We cannot help but think that the Director of the Bureau of Venereal Diseases has struck a wise chord in the scheme of disease control.

Educational propaganda, moving pictures and exhibits, detention homes and law of enforcement are all of great value, but the well trained physician who knows the disease when he sees it, and knowing, treats it properly is the ultimate means of its eradication.

Give us more such schools which will train more such men to do more such work in a more efficient manner. —U. S. Public Health Service.

ONE BIG METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Recommendations of the joint commission of the Methodist Episcopal churches north and south, that the two branches again be reunited will be submitted to the general conference for a final decision. A committee of ten was appointed to prepare the recommeddations for submission to the conferenee.

Under the new constitution of the Methodist church, there would be a supreme general conference composed of seven regional conferences. Six of these would consist of white members, averaging about 1,000,000 members each, and the other one would embrace the entire Negro membership of 303,000.

The general conference has governed the churches since their division in 1846. Regional and local conferences would have entire control of their respective regions except in general matters. Bishops will be chosen by local conferences subject to confirmation by the general conference.

A judicial council of sixteen members will review constitutional matters of all conferences and in fact, will be the final court of appeals. The merger recommendation provided that a general council shall be composed of 800 members chosen by the regional conferences in proportion to the membership. It will meet every four years.

It was said after the meeting had been adjourned that the northern church conference will meet next Mao in Des Moines, Iowa, to vote on the merger plan. The southern church will call a special session of its conference to vote on the unification.

Be Ready to Spray Apple Trees

Put your dormant spray on your orchard at the time the apple fruit buds are beginning to show green. This spray controls the aphis, as well as the scale and other insect pests and fungus diseases. Use lime sulphur in the proportion of one gallon to eight gallons of water.

Poultry Reports Show the Importance of Early Hatching

Nineteen farms reported for the month of December showed a total of 1997 hens laying 4197 eggs; total income $291.14; total expense $280.26 profit $10.00. The results show an average feed cost of 15 cents per hen and an average egg production of 2.2 eggs per month. Nothing brings out more clearly the necessity of early hatching than this summary of the difference between the average of the nineteen farm flocks and the report of the farm havings the highest average for the month which is as follows: Mrs. Julia Smith, Frew, Tyler county had highest egg production. Her 69 hens laid 372 eggs, or an average of 5.8 eggs per hen; total income $24.61, total expenses $10,63, net income $13.98 or an average of 20 cents per hen Mr. George Smith of St. Marys Pleasants county, has the highest profit for the month. His flock of 40 barred rocks gave an income of $19,80 or an average of 50 cents per hen, but this large income was practically due to sale of a portion of his flock.

COUNTIES PAY PRIMARY BILL

Men who contemplate running for the nomination or election to office at the State-wide primary in May or the general election to be held in November of this year will be pleased to learn that under the new election law passed by the Legislature in 1919 it will not be necessary for them to put up a fee to help pay the primary election expenses but that the county court of each county is to bear the expense instead of the candidates.

The primary election will be held on the last Tuesday in May. Two newspapers of opposite political parties shall publish the notice of the primary once a week for two successive weeks immediately before the primary. The polls will open at 6:30 o'clock a. m. and close at 6:30 p. m.

MIND YOUR MONEY

State Auditor J. S. Darst, who administers West Virginia's Blue Sky Law, has received information of considerable activity in the State by unauthorized stock salesmen, and makes the following suggestions to those who are requested to buy stocks or other securities in this State:

When approached by a stock salesman require him to produce a letter of authority signed by the State Auditor to sell the stock he offers, and if he has no such authority, wire the Auditor immediately, giving the name of the Agent and Company whose stock he is attempting to sell. If he has a letter of authority, remember that such is not even a recommendation that the company will be successful, but only a statement that the technical requirements of the law have been satisfied.

The law aims to compel every promoter to lay all his cards on the table. If the stock has been issued for intangible assets, or for property the value of which is not readily ascertainable, that fact must be clearly set forth in the subscription blank, in order that every signer may have notice of the true condition of the Company. Certain statements are required, and in general all papers having any thing to do with the condition, standing or purpose of the Company must be presented before the stock can be sold.

Another important feature is that the Auditor may require all stock issued for property or intangible assets to be placed in escrow and there held under such terms as he may prescribe. This prevents the promotor from placing stock on sale that has been given for certain supposed valuable consideration, and makes the value of his stock depend on the success of the concern.

Our law specifically limits the amount any stock salesman shall receive for selling stock to 10 per cent par value, which is a big protection. Before we had this law it was a common thing for the stock salesman to receive from 25 to 50 per cent for the sale of stock.

The law makes it a conspiracy to defraud in connection with the sale of stocks, or other securities, a penitentiary offense. It also provides that any person making a false statement, either oral or written, or conceals any figures concerning securities which he is offering for sale, shall be guilty of a felony.

It is our custom to place in the subscription blanks as many of these facts as possible in order that the prospective buyer may know the true situation. Then it is up to each individual to judge for himself, whether or not he wants to invest. Neither the Auditor nor any other living man can tell what the outcome will be. Of course, if it appears on the face of the papers that the promotion is insolvent or fraudulent permission to sell stock is absolutely refused as happens in many cases.

If you desire further knowledge than the subscription blank shows, write the Auditor, and he will gladly give you such information as he has. This is about all any law can do—it is then up to you. If it is an Oil Company only the drill can determine whether oil will be found. If it is a Manufacturing Company, the personnel of the management, everything else being equal, will determine the success or failure of it.

For these and many other reasons you should proceed with great caution before purchasing any stocks. If you are an employee consult your employer. or a business friend in whom you have confidence. Take your time, legitimate business will wait, investigate to your full satisfaction, and remember a man of means can afford to take a chance that a man with small means should not think of; because in one case the man may only lose a small portion of what he has, and the other can lose all.

Finally, use this office in every way possible. Each Company authorized to sell stock in this State has certain statements under oath on file here, and we are glad to furnish information.

J. S. Darst,
Auditor

NOTICE

My wife has left my bed and board and I will not stand responsible for any debt she may make.

This the 26th day of January, 1920

W. W. Cutlip.

Lay a bet on rolling 'em with

PRINCE ALBERT

the national joy smoke

ROLLING your own cigarettes with Prince Albert is just about as joy'us a sideline as you ever carried around in your grip! For, take it at any angle, you never got such quality, flavor, fragrance and coolness in a makin's cigarette in your life as every "P. A. home-made" will present you!

Prince Albert puts new smokenotions under your bonnet! It's so delightful rolled into a cigarette—and, so easy to roll! And, you just take to it like you been doing it since away back! You see, P. A. is crimp cut and a cinch to handle! It stays put—and you don't lose a lot when you start to hug the paper around the tobacco!

You'll like Prince Albert in a jimmy pipe as much as you do in a home-rolled cigarette, too! Bite and parch are cut out by our exclusive patented process. You know P. A. is the tobacco that has led three men to smoke pipes where one was smoked before. Yes sir, Prince Albert blazed the way. And, me-o-my, what a wad of smokesport will ripple your way every time you fill up!

Awaiting your say-so, you'll find toppy red bags, tidy red tins, handsome pound and half pound tin humidors—and—that classy, practical pound crystal glass humidor with sponge moistener top that keeps Prince Albert in such perfect condition!

VOL. XXXVIIII NO 45 | MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, JUNE 23, 1921 | $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

THE HIGH SCHOOL

The Board of Education of Edray District will submit to the voters of Edray District on July 21, the proposition to vote $60,000 in bonds for the purpose of erecting a dormitory and an addition to the District High School building.

This condition of affairs faces the Board and the people of the District as regards the fine high school maintained by the District at Marlinton:

The present building is full to overflowing. Last year the junior high school had to be abandoned because there was no room for it. This year a class of sixteen was graduated from the high school, while there were about 100 free school graduates, the greater majority of whom will seek admission to this High School this fall. Where can they be put? Whose child will be admitted and whose turned away?

Then the dormitory, the homes of Marlinton can take care of but few more boarders than they did last year. In fact, home after home took girls and boys as an accomodation to boost the school, rather than for what money there might be in it. The rate paid for board was as reasonable as it was possible to furnish it, but not as low as it would be in a district owned dormitory. And this matter of board money is a serious consideration for a man of moderate means with children to educate or the boy and girl who have their own way to make.

Two alternatives are before the Board. They can build for present needs by laying a heavy levy, and patch on something year by year at great cost and have nothing really adequate.

The other is a building for the future with money raised by a bond issue. Get something worth the money, and divide the cost of it through the coming years. Schools are not an experiment, and money invested in educating the girls and boys of the county is well spent.

DURBIN

N. B. Arbogast and S. H. Hiner motored to Staunton one day last week, and returned Monday. They report a fine trip.

Miss Virginia Hull and Miss Ernestine Hall were shopping at Cass last week.

L. Fenton and wife and Dr. G. F. Hull and wife motored to Minnehaha Springs last Friday night to the opening ball at the Club. All report a fine time.

Charles Saffell, the carpenter connected with the Ward Brothers, came Monday with a force of men to do the carpenter work on the new school house.

Mrs. C. Livesay and family are visitors at C. R. Beard's.

John Beard, of Beckley, was at C. R. Beard's last week.

Eugene Campbell, of Elkins, spent Sunday here with his son.

J. A. McLaughlin was calling on the merchants here Monday.

Howard Slaven, treasurer of Highland county, was in town last week.

Sheriff B. B. Beard was in town Monday on business.

The road is being repaired from the Hevener scales to Arbovale and travel is going by Pine Groye school house. Anyway, we are pleased to get better roads.

Town Sergeant S. R. Ruckman captured two fellows that had broke jail in Page county, Va., but had to let them go, because he did not have proof. Later the sheriff of Page county came, but it was too late, as the Sergeant could not hold the parany longer.

Mat Cavanaugh was in town last week on business. He reports a fine crop on his farm near Nottingham.

KENNISON

Misses Gladys and Netta Sizemore, of Shelbina, Kentucky, spent several days with their uncles, James and S. S. Workman's.

Mrs. Jane McCoy, of Beard, was the guest of Mrs. J. M. Downing, Monday.

Downing, Doc Waugh Joe Waugh, Gatrell, Lawrence, and Elmer Workman, McClellan Powers, Moncy Doss, Homer and Cleve Waugh She received many nice presents. All enjoyed the evening.

The mill at this place has closed down.

ARBOVALE

Buckwheat sowing is the order of the day.

We had rains Friday night and Saturday night which will do much good. The outlook is that meadows will be light; corn and potatoes are looking very well; wheat is good, but some smut in it.

O. G. Arbogast took his sheep to his farm on the mountain. On the way somewhere they ate some poison weed and fourteen of them died.

Bud Arbogast took twelve yearling cattle to his grazing farm on Buffalo mountain last Tuesday, and Friday he found five dead and three he did not find.

Saturday morning Billy Vandevander found one of his cows dead—had been struck by lightning.

Ben Arbogast is very poorly yet.

Dr. Lambert is sick at the home of his father, S. K. Lambert.

Rev. Mr. Donley preached a good sermon here last Sunday. He is going away to be gone afew weeks. Rev. Joe Burns will preach here during Mr. Donley's absence.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

The Pocahontas Farm Bureau held its regular monthly meeting at the Farm Bureau office June 18. Many important local and national problems effecting the farmer of today were discussed.

Farm Bureau Questionaire

Previous to this time, farmers, as a class, have depended upon the promises of candidates for various public positions to obtain suitable farm legislation, but have they secured satisfactory results from this method? No, they have found that the only practical way to solve the problems is to do the work themselves, and this is just what is being done.

The American Farm Bureau Federation has submitted to all county farm bureaus a questionaire to obtain opinions from the farmers themselves on current farm legislation.

Farmers present at this meeting had an opportunity to express their views on "truth-in-fabric" legislation enactment of a "general saels tax," "livestock and farm financing," etc.

Legislation that would compel clothing manufacturers to state the exact percentage of wool, shoddy, etc. in a suit of clothes, for example, would certainly tend to make clothiers put more wool in clothing. Consequently, the demand for wool would be greater and better prices for wool would prevail.

The Calf Club Project

Calf Club committee: U. H. Hannah, W. H. Barlow, F. P. Kidd, W. E. Poage, H. W. Beard, (ex-officio) Meeting June 28, at 1 o'clock p. m.

Farmers at this meeting voted unanimously to carry out a calf club project consisting of twenty registered Hereford calves. These calves will be purchased by a committee representing the Farm Bureau, the latter part of September or first of October, and assembled at Marlinton for disposal to boys and girls of the county.

Any boy of girl between ten and eighteen years on January 1, 1922, may secure a calf providing in the judgment of the live stock committee of the farm bureau he possesses the proper equipment and has the necessary qualifications. It is expected that there will be far more applications than there are calves. For this reason, it will be well for a boy or girl who intends to enter this work to apply to the county agent in writing for a calf.

State your training and experience in school, in club work, on the farm, in the home, etc., that cause you to believe that you can succeed with a calf. Give your equipment, available pasture, barn, stall room, feed supply, etc., that can be used in connection with a beef calf project. Such applications will be filed at the farm bureau office and will be considered by the committee in charge in the order in which they are received.

Each club member will be required to give his personal note for value of calf and payable on the last day of the county show on which date all calves will be auctioned off to the highest bidder. Each club member will be given the privilege of bidding on his or her own calf.

The farm bureau guarantees that each club member shall receive for his calf an amount equal to the original cost of calf plus cost of feed and pasture. Also, to award suitable prizes at the annual exhibit for the best shoiwng in calf club work.

Before the calves are drawn by the club members, each animal will be weighed by the committee in charge—judged, placed, and appraised by an animal husbandry specialist from Morgantown. This record including the name of the club member will be filed at the farm bureau office.

Each calf will be labelled giving the tatoo, number, weight and price of same and a duplicate of the label placed in a hat from which the club member will draw and take the calf corresponding to the number drawn.

Each member will be given definite instructions to follow and will be expected to do his own work.

All calves entered in the project will be insured.

Who will be the first boy or girl to apply to the county agent in writing for a calf?

Wool Pooling

The Pocahontas Farm Bureau has signed a contract with the W. Va. Farm Bureau Federation to pool wool. Any member of the farm bureau may pool wool through the county farm bureau.

KILLS A BEAR

Fred Galford, of Williams River, got himself another bear a few weeks ago. It was a big sheep killer and one of the smartest in the woods. His weight was estimated at 400 pounds, fat and fine. The fur was still in good condition and the hide measures five by six feet. Fred has been trapping a long time for this particular bear. His range was but a few hundred yards from Mr. Galford's house, and he had been killing sheep all around the neighborhood. This was an old bear, and had been in captivity some time or other, as some one had marked both ear, cutting an underbit out of each. Ten years or so ago, a number of cubs were caught on Cheat mountain and kept awhiler, and it may be this bear was one of those. It was a favorite pastime for this bear to spring the trap, rob it of the bait, leave his sign and go on about his business. Seven or eight times this happened. One time he sprung the trap by wallowing on it. A few hairs were left, evidently from his chest. Fred says a man ought to be able to think up something that even an educated bear don't know, so he kept on setting his trap. Beside every bear trap he puts some sticks, to guide the bear in as they are cautious about knocking anything down. At the far end he lays another stick, which they wont step over. A bunch of moss hides the trap. This was pie to this old bear. He made it a point to step over the stick and then would dig out out the trap. He never failed to eat the bait, and he never failed to leave sign to show his contempt. To circumvent him, Mr. Galford fixed up the place like he was setting a trap, but put the trap where the bear would set his foot when he stepped over the stick. This he did and things were then only tolerable like around there. He tore up trees and broke down brush and carried on generally. There was a heavy pole to the trap as a drag, but he soon broke that away, and he traveled all over Black Mountain. Finally he retired to a laurel patch, and waited for the men to come up and fight it out. There Fred and his father, John Galford, found him. Fifteen families of the neighborhood enjoyed a feast on bear meat.

NO TIME

By Anna L. Price

No time for Heaven, no time for God
From sunrise to sundown,
Incessant work just hurrys on,
In the country and in the town.

God works and He doth not hurry,
And He gave work to man
An inestimable blessing
Which was the Edenic plan.

Behold the state of savages,
Their lack of work and will,
Makes them as drones upon the earth
Which God gave them to till.

No time for prayer, or Bible verse
No time to talk with God
When he waits to help thee with thy work,
Or any special load

Jaded and tired at resting hour
No time to kneel and pray,
And very much I fear, no time
For church on the Sabbath day.

But man would make a work, a God
And gilds it o'er with gold,
Injures his health, consumes his time
And Heaven and earth are sold

Work was not meant to interfere
With the duties that we owe
To God and man, and that blest home
To which we hope to go.

God works and He remembers thee
If thou dost think of Him,
Thy soul's religion must be dead,
Or shallow, cold and dim.

The wise and prudent work for God,
Remembering Him and Heaven,
And they have not one bit more time.
Than unto thee is given

They work with God and work for God
Believing, make no haste;
Thou'll gain enough of this poor world,
And there shall be no waste.

Oh Time, intangible, stupendous,
Vast, boundless like the sea,
The gracious scaffolding of God,
Wide as Eternity.

Mrs. George Byrd died at her home in Marlinton on Wednesday June 15, 1921, after a long illness. About a year ago, she suffered a stroke of paralysis and her strength has been gradually failing. Her age was about 70 years. She is survived by her husband and one son. Burial at the Cochran graveyard on Stony Creek. The deceased was a native of Bath county, Va., a daughter of the late Charles Rorke. For many years Mrs. Byrd has been a professing christian, a member of the Methodist church.

To the people of Marlinton and vicinity, also for the attention paid by Dr. N. R. Price, we wish to express our thanks for their kindness and help to us during the sickness and death of our wife and mother. It seemed as though everyone wanted to lend a helping hand from the youngest to the oldest. It is a great pleasure to live in a chaistian land. May the Lord add many stars to their crowns.

George W. Byrd and Family.

Another new house in Marlinton. E. C. Bush is preparing to erect a seven room two story and a basement house on his lots on Lower Camden. W. J. Killingsworth and Son have the contract.

TURNER--GRIMES

On Wednesday, June 15, 1921, at six o'clock p. m. at the Presbyterian church of Dunmore, Ruth Bland Grimes and John Cambell Turner were united in marriage. This event marked one of the greatest social triumphs in this part of the state. Nothing that could add to the grandure or finery of such an occasion was omitted.

The wedding party proper assembled at the home of the bride Monday evening. That night a delightful marshmallow toast was held on an unmolested spot near-by. Tuesday morning the party went in cars to the Minnehaha Springs in the Allegheny Mountains, where they remained for luncheon. Early in the afternoon they returned to Dunmore from whence they were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Scofield at Raywood where a very delightful evening was spent at a dinner party.

Wednesday was the day that marked the climax of the series of delightful social events Long before the hour of the wedding many cars were parked at the little church and when the six o'clock hour had arrived fully half a hundred cars were packed in every close available spot.

It was a church wedding abounding in elaborateness. Extensive decorations were the order of the day. Promptly at six o'clock Mrs. R. C. Charlton sang Mavis. by La Fere. Following this the organ pealed forth those glorious strains of the famous Bridal Chorus in the Wedding March from Lohengrin by Wagner, while the bridal party marched down the aisles. Following the bride's maids down the left aisle was the bride escorted by the maid of honor, while down the right aisle the groomsmen marched followed by the groom escorted by the best man. Ring bearers and ribbon girls followed in order. A semi circle was formed in front of the altar. Then Mrs. Charlton very charmingly rendered that very beautiful wedding solo from Robin Hood, "Oh Promise Me." the ceremony was read by Dr. G. D. Smith, of Buckhannon. During the ceremony the organist, Mrs. Ruth Donley, played "The Melody of Love." The double ring ceremony was used with much impressiveness. The bride on the arm of the groom marched out followed by the bride's maids on the arms of the groomsmen, while Mendelssohn's wedding march was played. The wedding party was taken to the home of the bride where a delightful five course dinner was served. There were about seventy-five guests at the dinner.

The maid of honor was the sister of the bride, Miss Emma Grimes. The best man was Joseph Hoffman, of Wesleyan College, a former classmate of the groom. The other bridesmaids were, Jean Pritchard, Dunmore; Delphia Lee Bond, Clarksburg; and Dorsie Jane Geiger, Greenbank. The other groomsmen were: Amos Thornburg and Perry Emmet O'brien of Wesleyan College, Buckhannon, and Kyle Curry of Dunmore.

The young married couple leave in a few days for Beaconsfield, Iowa, where the groom is Pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church. The many friends of this happy couple hope for them a life filled with happiness, and abounding with the right kind of opportunities and always a good measure of health with which to imprcve them.

Dear Mother:

I got your letter sometime ago and was very glad to hear from you. I was also glad you were down to see Tone's.

I have not much to say, but that we had a flood here that mopped out the town almost. The business part of the town is clear gone, ever so many lives were lost. It did not only rain it poured, and it sure was an exciting time. We sat up nearly all night.

I was afraid you might hear it and be uneasy about me. But we are on safe ground. The streets and avenues were rivers. Several houses burned. It is terrible to see the wagons passing with drowned bodies.

There was a train of thirteen coaches with two hundred persons due here, and running into the flood water the coaches were turned over and all lost their lives.

I do not know whether this letter will reach you or not as no train can come in or go out.

I am so nervous I can hardly write, so you write me a letter soon. Do not send the money unless registered.

With love,
Mary.

PUEBLO

Mrs. Mary Sheets Burns, of Pueblo, Colorado. a survivor of the flood, writes her mother, Mrs. Carpenter, as follows:

1305 Orman Ave.
Pueblo, Colo.
June 7, 1921.

Many friends were surprised to receive announcement of the wedding of Miss Pearl Warner, R. N. of Elkins and Harry G. McLaughlin, of Huntersville, who were married in Canton, Ohio, June 11th, at the M. E. Episcopal church, Rev. Day, officiating minister.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Warner, of Elkins, and a former graduate of the Marlinton General Hospital.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos McLaughlin, of Huntersville, and is now employed by a Railroad Company in Ohio. Their future home will be made in Alliance, Ohio.

Much happiness and success is wished them by their many friends.

ALLEGHENY CLUB

Mr. Guy E. Greer, consulting mining Engineer, Paris, France, Ex-Officer of American Expeditionary Force in France and Germany. At present an International Official of the Reparation Commission, with officers in Paris, an expert in coal and a specialist in the economics of fuel distribution in Europe, will return to Paris on July 2nd, after having spent one month in the United States, four days of this he spent at the Allegheny Club, the guest of his cousin, H. G. Greer, of Marlinton, and Mr. Greer has no hesitation in saying that these four days have been the most delightful of his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Barlow and Mr. and Mrs. H W. Thrasher of Buchannon, on their return from an extended trip in the East, made a short stay at the Club.

J. A. Viquesney in company with James Kable and J. E. Woodson of Bluefield spent the night of the 17th at the Club.

One of the special pleasures of the week was the Annual Banquet and Dance held at the Club House on the evening of the 17th. At 7:30 P. M. the guests began to arrive and it was a beautiful sight to see the automobiles, fifty or more in number winding their way up the drive from the public road to the Club House, where they received a hearty welcome from the Club Committee. Promptly at 8:30 the guests were invited to the dining room and they were soon enjoying the bountiful dinner prepared for them. Immediately after dinner the sound of the drum announced the time was at hand for the dance. The music was rendered by the Thompson Orchestra of Richwood. About two hundred guests were present who were unanimous in saying that they had a most delightful time and that the opening was one of the best attended and the most successful in the history of the Club, and take pleasure in tendering their thanks to H. M. Lockridge, the manager, for his kindness, courtesy and hospitality extended to them. They wish also to thank the Thompson Orchestra for the delightful music rendered during the evening.

Wool Pooling

Arrangements has been made whereby the services of a wool grader can be obtained at any central point in the county for the purpose of grading and weighing wool. Such wool may be sold direct or on consignment If sold by the latter method, the executive committee of the West Virginia Farm Bureau Federation will direct the time of sale as market conditions may justify. All farmers interested in this plan may secure additional information from the farm bureau office. August 4 to 6 inclusive are the dates schedulee for this county.

CITIZENS MILITARY TRAINING CAMP

About thirty young men have applied from Pocahontas County for admission to the Citizens Training Camp at Camp Knox, Ky., for one months military training, beginning July 21. The latest applicants are, Guy McAlpin and Forrest L. Doyle, Stony Bottom; George Kershner, Clover Lick; Oden Welford, Warwick, Wilmer Roberts. W. D. Pontious, Clive Wooddell, Norvel McNeill, Marlinton; Ralph E. Conley and Robert Walker of Raywood.

Pocahontas County has probably made a better showing than any county in the state in making volunteers for the Training Camp, in proportion to population.

Our old friend John W. Tyler, of Frost, was in Marlinton on July 4th, and paid us a visit. He had been doing some repair work at the old Tyler homestead at Edray, and among other things he did was to turn a building inside out. A smokehouse had to be rebuilt, and the weather boarding, while of prime lumber and well preserved, was cupped like all lap siding will become in time. In putting it back on the same way, the nails spilt it badly, but by turning it over, it fit snugly, and was as good as new.

Antonio Gradiscen, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder at the last term of the Circuit Court of this county, committed suicide in the penitentiary by refusing to take any food of any kind. At the time he was sentenced he was very despondent and looked in a weak condition. He steadily refused food from that time on and his death occurred July 5th. At Moundsville forcible feeding was tried by the doctors but the prisoner gradually became weaker until he died in the prison hospital. Gradiscen was one of the men who held up and robbed camp 56 on the North Fork of Cranberry last March.

The board of Education of Little Levels District is considering the building of a large school house at Hillsboro for the grades. The growth of the High School and the establishment of a State Normal Course at Hillsboro for Pocahontas County by the State makes more room necessary.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. George McCloud, at Warwick, July 1, 1921, a daughter.

MC NEEL--SIPLE

A beautiful home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs Joe Siple, Hillsboro, June 22, 1921, when their daughter, Miss Nelle Parker became the bride of Mr. Henry W. McNeel, youngest son of J. S. McNeel of the Levels community. The parlor of the spacous home of the bride's parents was tastefully decorated, an arch being formed of flowers under which the bride and groom stood in taking their vows. Miss Rose Hill sang a beautiful love song accompanied by Miss Dice Smith who played the wedding march also. Misses Hallie Siple and Lucile McNeel then entered strewing roses in the path of the happy couple. Little Miss Nancy Siple followed bearing the ring in a rose challice. Finally came the bride, lovely in white organdie and veil, leaning on the arm of the bridegroom, and took their place underneath the arch of flowers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Johnson, and then the party were led to the dining room where delightful refreshments were served.

The happy couple left on the west bound train for points in Indiana and the middle west for a honey moon trip. It is understood that they will make their home near Staunton, Va.

Many out of town friends were present to witness the event.

Washington, D. C., June 27—Extravagance in appropriations, lack of a programme and the failure to make good election promises are the chief characteristics of the Republican legislative situation here at this writing. The charges are:

The Republicans promised to reduce Federal taxes, but are increasing them.

They promised to make a speedy technical peace, but the peace situation is up in the air.

They promised to revive business, but there has been a constant decline in foreign trade and continued depression of securities.

They promised a reversal of American foreign policies, but have adhered strictly to the policies of the former administration.

These charges are made and the proof furnished in large part by Republicans. Take for instance, the statement of Senator Borah (Rep., Idaho.) in discussing the Army Supply Bill. He said:

"I wish to ask our Republican friends on this side of the Chamber what are wou going to do about the question of economy? What is your programme? What is your plan? There is no provision anywhere for reducing expenses or reducing taxes. There is no programe to that effect. I should like to know, in view of the constant discussion of the question upon the part of Republican leaders that the taxes are now unbearable and that they must be reduced, when and where are they going to reduce them? Where is the programme?

Senator King (Dem., Utah,) interrupted to say:

"The senior Senator from Utah (Mr. Smoot, Rep.) stated that there would be an inarease, so I say to my Republican friend from Idaho that his party not only will not reduce taxation and not produce economies, but increase the expenses of the Government."

"That is not the kind of doctrine I wanted to hear, but I am afraid it is true," replied Senator Borah.

The operator of any vehicle is required to give immediately one-half the road to any other vehicle approaching from behind and signaling for passage.

The Board of Equalization and Review for Pocahontas County is sitting this week. The members of the board are M. L. Beard, R. S. Hickman and J. A. Reed.

HALCYON BIRDS

The fourteen short days which end the year were said by the ancients to be the halcyon days. On those days calm was fabled to fall upon the world, placid waters mirrored the sun by day and the moon by night, for no waves must disturb the halcyons, brooding on their floating nests. Such was the fable of the kingfisher of the Mediterranean.

Our kingfisher brings the halcyon days of early spring, dropping from the sky in April, springing its cheerful watchman's rattle call, and proceeding to dig its tunnel nest in the sandbank in early May. It has an entrance hole about three and a half inches in diameter, a foot or more beneath the top of the bank, easily known from any other hole, for in going in and out the kingfisher's long hind claws drag and leave two parallel marks in the sand that suggest trolley tacks. It is easy to find the entrance, not so easy to see the nest at the other end, for there is no nesting material, simply a hollow in the sand that may be twelve feet deep in the bank. It is possible, of course, to tunnel laboriously in as the kingfisher has done; more than one ardent naturalist has done this and more than one has backed out with bleeding face, for the bill of the brooding mother bird is long and sharp and she defends her home valiantly.

There is more enjoyment and more to be learned in watching the birds, especially when the half dozen growing young begin to eat their own weight in fish in a day. Then, from dawn till dark you may see the parent kingfishers watching from some stub or limb-tip on the bank, posing eagerly on swift wings in mid-air, then plunging with a resounding splash for some surface-feeding small fish. Sometime the bird goes well below the surface, to emerge immediately, shaking the water from its plumage and giving its triumphant rattle as it flies to the nest.

The kingfisher loves the sandy shallows, hence you may find him watching and fishing alongshore either on salt or fresh water. Mostly he frequents secluded coves where woods abound on shore and the works of man are not so plentiful, though he finds a convenient watch tower on the mast of a yacht or the spiling at the tip of a pier.

Onee in a while, too, he invades the city. "On October 13 I saw a curious sight on Boston Common," says Dr. Charles W. Townsend, in his valuable book on "The Birds of Essex County." "A belted kingfisher was flying over the frog pond, uttering constantly his rattling call, and was closely pursued by a domestic pigeon. The kingfisher doubled back and forth at least three times the whole length of the pond, the pigeon eagerly following at a distance of twenty or thirty feet. At one time an English sparrow, with his characteristic hatred of our native birds, flew viciously at the frightened kingFisher, who redoubled his racket. finally, the kingfisher alighted in a tall elm and the pigeon disappeared." —Our Dumb Animals.

Married, on Monday July 4, 19sl. by Rev. J. W. Pugh, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. J. W. Hevener, David Gragg and Miss Vella Calhoun, both of Pocahontas county. May Jesus always find a place in their hearts and home that their life may be bright and happy and in the end eternal life.

J. W. P.

W. N Moore left for Portland, Oregon, on Tuesday. He will be gone until September.

Misses Genevieve and Grace Wood are spending this week with their aunt, Mrs. Lee Moore, at Millpoint.

Mr. and Mrs. Matheny, of Monterey, Va., were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hiner a few days this week.

"WAIT" AND "HUSH"

The Philadelphia Public Ledger (Rep.) continues to chide the present administration for its policy in "drifting." Under the caption "Nobody Knows," it says editorially:

"In Washington nobody knows just what the inner circles of the Administrtien are doing about the three greatest of our foreign problems. There is silence that may mean anything or nothing.

"This is June 20. The Harding Administration came into power on March 4. More than a hundred days have come and gone since. We are in the fourth month of a new Adminictration pledged to action on peace, the limitation of armament and a world association of nations.

"What has been done? Just what are the accomplishments in these pledged matters?

"The House and Senate are having a tug-of-war ovhr the form and scope of a 'declaratory peace resolution.' The White House to all appearance is untroubled over that deadlock.

"The foreign policies of the Harding Administration retain their wrappings of uncertainty and their mists of vagueness. There is a wall of silence around them. Cryptic utterances are the rule The oracle when it speaks speaks as did the Oracle of Delphi.

"The pass words are two: 'wait' and 'hush.' But what of peace? Of the limitations of armament? Of the association of nations? Outside of the inner circle nobody knows.

"Is it possible the Administration inner circle itself does not know?

OBITUARY

William Clark Grimes was born in Pocahontas county, W. Va., on May 5, 1838, and departed this life at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Cavett, in Warren township, on June 17, 1921 aged 82 years, 1 month and 12 days. His parents were James and Mary L. Grimes. He was the last of a family of eight children to pass on.

On Feb. 23, 1860, he was united in marriage to Eleanor C. Weiford. To them ten children were born, two of whom died in infancy, and one son Granville R. died in young manhood. Those surviving are Mrs. Emma Foster, Mrs. Estes Shore, Mrs. Belle Cavett, and Mrs. Zephrine Agan, all of Lucas county; W. O. Grimes and Mrs. Alverda Hancock, of Marion county; and M. S. Grimes of Crystal Springs, Kansas. He is also survived by 22 grandchildren and two great grandchildren. Deceased was patriotic and loyal to his country and when he felt that he was needed to maintain her honor he bade goodbye to his young wife and two small children and volunteered to serve his country. He served in Company I, 3rd W. Va. Cavalry. In the fall of 1871 he left his native state and moved his family by wagon route to Iowa where he lived until 1918, when his companion left him to mourn her loss, and he has since lived with his children. He was converted in the winter of 1873 and was a charter member of the Coal Glen church, helping in the building of the present church, and he always had her interests at heart, and was ever a regular attendant at the church services until his feeble health forbade.

An eulogy of his life would be a waste of words for he has lived in this county for 49 years and his clean upright godly life speaks for itself. At a ripe old age he has gone to his rest. The sorrowing children and other relatives will have the sympathy of innumerable friends in their grief.

Largely attended funeral services, conducted by Rev. Duncan, of Columbia, were held at the Coal Glen church in Pleasant township on Sunday forenoon, June 19 at 11 o'clock, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Coal Glen cemetery. —Chariton Herald.

ANDREW PRICE, Trustee

Before deciding on your next tire have your dealer show you cross-sections of the various makes you are considering—so that you can measure the total thickness of the rubber and fabric used in building up the various makes.

You will find that Michelin Tires embody more of these m leage-giving materials. In the 34x4 Michelin Universal, for example, there is a solid though flexible mass of wear-resisting rubber and fabric almost an inch thick.

Every bit of the materials used is of the highest quality. Yet Michelins are moderate in price.

Mr. Farmer: Have you money to burn? If not, stop burning it. Figures provided by the National Board of Fire Under-writers show that 38,266 fires occurred in the farm buildings in the United States in 1918. This does not include uninsured buildings nor losses in Mutual insurance companies. The total loss to farmers was $18,166,701. Nearly seventy percent was preventable. This simply means that Amer can farmers burned up in one yea $12,711,399 or $34,875 each day i the year which could have been pre vented. $19,820 of the above fires were caused by lightning or 51 per cent. The National Board of Fire Underwriters state that exactly 100 per cent of fires occurred in unrodded buildings. Not one cent of loss was shown on properly rodded buildings. Why run the risk? You cannot afford not to have your buildings protected. I have been erecting lightning rods on buildings for 23 years and there has never been a building injured that I have rodded. I give the St. Louis Lightning Rod Company's guanantee with each job—agreeing to pay back the cost of the job if the building is injured by lightning.

THE FAIR

The Pocahontas Fair at Marlinton last Tuesday, Wednesday. Thursday and Friday was a great success in almost every particular. Tuesday and Wednesday it was rainy, but Thursday and Friday the weather was all that could be desired.

The big day of the Fair was Thursday, when the cattle and other live stock was shown. Fully three thousand people were on the grounds that day. Nearly seven thousand admission tickets were sold in the four days. The people generally expressed their satisfaction and pleasure with the Fair. Taken all together, it was the best thing of its kind ever attempted here.

The success of the Fair was due to the hearty co-operation of the people; to the ability and efforts of the manager. Z. S. Smith, who was ably assisted by A. C. Barlow, E. M. Richardson, County Agent Willey, C. K. Livesay, secretary of the Board of Trade and others.

Among the horsemen from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Brown Thompson, of Hot Springs; Hugh Wright, of Staunton; John Criser, of Hot Springs; Messrs. Arbuckle, of Lewisburg and J. W. Levisay, of Frankford.

Fifty or sixty head of fine cattle were exhibited. Shorthorns were shown by S. B. Nethkin, E. F. McLaughlin and W. McClintic, who was probably the most extensive exhibitor of various kinds of live stock at the Fair. Those having Herefords on exhibit were F. P. Kidd. Callison Bros., Charles C. Baxter, Levi Gay, and A. C. Barlow. The judges of the live stock were Frank Maxwell, of Buckhannon and Mr. Creech, of Morgantown.

The agricultural and horticultural exhibits were extensive and fine. Mention also should be made of the household exhibits ond the work of the boys and girlf clubs. A most interesting and valuable exhibit was that of nearly seventy different garden vegetables grown and shown by Rev. Fred Gray, of Cass.

A list of the prise winners will be published next week.

Neither fruit nor berries, but what a tomato crop there is. Everybody raised tomatoes this year, whether they trusted to luck or sprayed dilligently. But as usual there is no way of heading off those thrifty souls who in season and out religiously spread the bordeaux mixture. Now they come forward and say that while careless neighbor has tomatoes, the flavor is not so rare as the sprayed fruit. And it may be so, too. The two great trials of the tomato grower are the early and late blight. The early blight retards the growth and may eventually kill the vine, but does not rot the fruit. Naturally it keeps much of the fruit from becoming full size. Though ripening out red and fine, many people think the the flavor cannot compare with that produced on a vine of vigorous growth But what a mess the late blight makes in a tomato patch. It sure loves a shining mark. The blight is a fungus, and the spores are prevalent everywhere. Hot, rainy weather is favorable for the development and spread of blight. The present year has been dry and hot, and tomato plants have grown like weeds As a result cellar shelves are loaded down with canned tomatoes.

Those attending institute from Renick are: Misses Hattie Bruffey, Bessie Walkup, Edith and Lena Morrison, Bessie Murdock, Mary McClung, Gladys Callison. Messrs. L. L. Clingman, John Byrd, L. H. M Cristic.

Married, at Methodist Parsonage by Rev. F. B Wyand, August 10, 1921, Houston Davis Carpenter and Miss Myrtle Lillian Cross —August 17, 1921, Forrest Taylor and Miss Ruth Elizabeth Fertig —Charles Vaughan Fertig and Miss Jane Helen Mace.

The Hillsboro High school opens September 12. Prof. Vance will again be in charge, and a full faculty has been securred. State aid has been given this school to maintain a normal department, and a well trained teacher will be in charge. Efforts are being made to enroll every grade graduate is the district.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

The council was in session Tuesday night, and there being no objections presented to the estimate and proposed levy for the year the same was approved and ratified, fixing the town levy for the year in the total sum of seventy cents per hundred valuation.

The rate of twenty cents per hundred valuation was fixed for interest and sinking fund on $22,000 bonded indebtedness. The total bonded indebtedness of the town of Marlinton is $42,000, of which amount $20,000 is charged to the water and light plant which is looked to provide interest and sinking fund on that amount. As an aid in that direction there has been annually paid to the plant by the town out of its general fund, approximately $2,700, which is about the amount which would be paid for water and light service for the town. The interest on this indebtedness is quite a large item, and it is very desirable for the town to curtail its indebtedness fast as is possible.

S. S. CONVENTION

The Sunday Convention held at Mt. Carmel church August 13th, was —we think—the best ever held in the Huntersville district. There were about three hundred people present and the day was a very, very enjoyable one.

The mission of the Sunday School in general was clearly and helpfully discussed.

Reports by officers of the different schools in the district proved the past year to be one of successful endeavor, and the inspiring and beneficial addresses given by the various speakers show the possibility of greater progress next year.

The program included prominent Sunday School workers who came to us filled to overflowing with interest, inspiration and encouragement.

Those interested could not help but carry home with them helpful and useful ideas in regard to the betterment of Sunday schools.

Now, we the committee on resolutions for this convention adopt the following, Be it resolved:

That we appreciate the kindness of and thank the people of Mt. Carmel church for their hospitable entertainment during our stay with them.

That we express our deep and heartfelt thanks to the Almighty God our Father for the presence of our worthy, beloved and much appreciated chairman. Mr. J. C. Harper.

That we heartily endorse and favor Special Days in the Sunday School.

That we express to the speakers our deep appreciation and thanks for the inspiration given and interest shown in our behalf at all times.

That we see the need of a more spiritual atmosphere and a higher tone of moral training for better development in Sunday School work.

That we appreciate and thank the officers of each Sunday School in the district for their work and interest in behalf of these schools.

That we thank the ladies of the neighborhood for their bountiful and delicious display of good eats.

That a copy of these resolutions be recorded and a copy sent to the Pocahontas Times for publication.

Mrs. J. L. Herold,
Rev. C. B. Rutledge,
J. W. Grimes,
Committee.

Their Home A Ford

Far from tiresome is the summer tour of the Clarke Concert Party, and far from uninteresting, too. This trio of musicians, who will be heard on the second day of the coming Chautauqua, count it an unusual day when they live at a hotel, or use a railroad train.

For they travel in a Ford, sleep in the car, and cook their own meals when not too pressed for time. Four seasons they have lived this way, and during this time they have covered a large part of the United States and Canada.

In speaking of their mode of travel, Mr. Clarke says that they find that traveling in the car and living out of doors is much less fatiguing than living in hotels, and they find they can do much better work.

They sleep better, rest longer, and at the end of the summer season they find themselves in splendid shape for their indoor winter work. Of course, he says, it's hard on the "Lizzie," But when one wears out they stop in an agency and buy another.

This interesting group of very human folk will present a most unusually fine concert at Chautauqua. Both Mr. Clarke and Rachel Steinman Clarke are rated as among the best musicians in the Chautauqua field.

THE MINGO PANEL

Judge Sharp has interested himself in securing information as to the route of travel for the jurymen who will be summoned to Mingo county next month. These are the directions

Leave on the down train due at Marlinton at 4:35 p. m. on Monday evening, September 5. Buy ticket for Kenova, W. Va.; arriving there about 5 a. m. Tuesday; take N. & W. train at 7;25 a. m. and arrive at Williamson at 10:35 a. m. The distance from Marlinton is 323 miles.

COUNTY S. S. CONVENTION

The Pocahontas County Sunday School Convension at Cass on Saturday and Sunday fulfilled all expectations as the biggest and best county convention we have ever had. Nearly three hundred delegates registered during the convention, and the hospitable city of Cass entertained them all.

The speakers were Dr. Jno. I. Armstrong, of Lewisburg; W. H. Hill, of Clarksburg, in charge of the Young People's Division work of the State Sunday School Association, Miss Nancy F. White, of Huntington, Sunday School worker of the West Virginia Synod; Rev. F. B. Wyand and Rev. H. H. Orr, of Marlinton, and G. C. Hamilton, of Nottingham. The convention song leader was J. W. Lowther, of Pittsburgh. Mr. Tingle, of Baltimore, trained the young peoples' choir.

The attendance of county and district officers was a feature of the convention. All but two of the county officers were present and reported.

The next convention will be held on Knapps Creek, the invitation of the Mt. Carmel and Westminster churches and the Huntersville District convention being accepted with thanks.

The following officers were elected for the next year: President, S. N. Hench; vice-president, G. C. Hamilton: secretary, F. M. Sydnor; treasurer, H. Lee White. Divisional Superintents: Adult, L J. Moore; young peoples' J. A. Sydenstricker; educational, Luther Flynn; teacher training. A. C. Stillwell: temperance, Mrs. S. J. Rexrode; missionary, Mrs. E. J. Shaffer; elementary, Mrs. W. J. Yeager; Home department, Mrs. V. B. Mann; publicity, Calvin W. Price.

Harry Acord died at Wesby Chapel, near Greenbank on Sunday afternoon, August 21, 1921. He had attended morning services, taught a Sunday School class, and in the evening attended class meeting, led in prayer, and as he finished giving his religious experience sat down and died. His age was 40 years, and he is survived by his wife who was Miss Sarah A. Cassell and a number of children. He was the son of C. M. Acord and Mrs. Maggie Nottingham Acord.

Jesse Wiley is sick with diptheria.

COUNTY COURT

County Court was in session Tuesday with Commissioners W. H. Barlow and Dr. U. H. Hannah present. The Court ordered work stopped on Class A Project No. 79c, near Huntersville. This action was taken because the State has failed to pay its share amounting to more than $20,000.

Work on Class B roads stopped, on account of exhaustion of all road funds, until November 1.

The court decided it was unwise to divide the Greenbank District at this time.

J. W. Riley ordered to remove obstructions in old road near Arbovale.

Clerk ordered to have published the law prohibiting stock to run at large on public roads.

J. W. Goodsell appointed guardian of children of late, J. W. Lawton.

Sam Williams and E. M. Arbogast exonerated from erroneous taxation.

J. W. Yeager recommended for notary commission.

Court approved and laid the levies as follows: County, 30c. District roads, 15 cents in each district; County road levy 15c; bond levy in Greenbank District 20c.

So far during the month of August, County Clerk S. L. Brown has issued eleven marriage licenses: Arville B. B. Dilley 27 and Lettie A. Wiseman 22; Albert E. Harouff 27 and Mrs. Pearl Myers McNickell 27; Houston D. Carpenter 25 and Myrtle L. Cross 21; Milliard Hammonds 19 and Amanda Hammonds 29; Harry M. Gladwell 26 and Chloe A. McCoy 17; Dennis W. Perry 22 and Nina May Brown 18; Ferrest Taylor 22 and Ruth E. Fertig 18; Henry Perkins 25 and Hallie V. Ramsey 22; Lem C. Barrett 39 and Clidie Cutlip 24; Jake V. Malcomb 29 and Allie E. Bowers 17; Kenton S. Dickson 25 and Elsie H. Pritchard 21.

CHAUTAUQUA SUNDAY SERVICE

On Sunday night a union meeting will be held at the Chautauqua Tent, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. The Mendellsohn Orchestra will gave a sacred concert, and congregational singing, led by Rev. H. H. Orr. The address will be made by Rev. Walfred Lindstrom, D. D., of the Baptist Church There will be no admission charge, but an offering will be made.

Dr. Lindstrom is the superintendent of Pocahontas Chautauqua. During the war he was a chaplain with the 32nd Division. The public is invited to these services.

One of the fine things resulting from the county Sunday school convention held at Cass last week, is the Young Peoples' Chorus, which is now a permanent institution. The young people were trained by Mr. Tingle, a choir leader in one of the larger churches of Baltimore and their singing was a feature of the convention.

DIED

William Clark Clendenen died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. A. Pyles, near Seebert, on Monday, August 15, 1921. His age was 73 years, and he had been sick but a few days. His body was laid to rest in the McNeel graveyard.

Thus we note the passing of one of Pocahontas County's best citizens. He came from pioneer stock, the name Clendenen being identified with the State since the first settlements. His parents were Wm. Clendenen and Jane Cochran Clendenen. His wife was Elizabeth Auldridge who died some years ago. To them were born five children; Mrs. Thos. McCoy of Richwood; Mrs. M. A. Pyles, Ira, George and Charles C. Clendenen.

Died, W. B. Freeman, at his home home at Top of Alleghany, August 21, 1921. His age was nearly 70 years, and he had been in failing health for some time. He is survived by his wife and a family of grown children. Mr. Freeman was a native of East Virginia, and for the past twenty years he had lived on the Allegheny mountain.

Joseph C. Smith died at his home near Marvin Chapel on Friday night, August 19, 1921, of the infirmities of age. He had passsed his 86 year. Burial on Sunday afternoon at the Ruckman graveyard. Mr. Smith was a prominent and highly respected citizen, a leader in his community and in his church. By trade he was a tanner, and for many years operated a tan yard.

Mr. Smith is survived by his wife, who was a Miss Curry. Among their children are Mrs. Cameron Clark, of Culpepper, Mrs. Bosworth, of Huttonsville, Mrs. Kramer at home, and Marvin C. Smith of Hillsboro.

On July 28, 1921, Raymond Withrow, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Cleve Withrow, of Clawson. He was 13 months and 8 days old. Burial in the Clawson cemetery. This little boy was loved by all who knew him, and has returned to God who gave him.

On July 13, 1921, little Samuel Evan Carr, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Carr, died at the home of his parents at Clawson. He was a bright and happy child, aged 2 years, 4 months and 6 days. "Suffer the little children to como unto me, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

T.

Warwick W. Jackson died at his home at Clawson on Tuesday morning after a long illness. He had reached the advanced age of 85 years.

A notice of his life will be published later.

County Clerk, S. L. Brown, has issued 174 hunting and fishing licenses at $1 each so far in the month of August. The new law came in effect July 26. During the month of July he issued 72 licenses.

What Would a Wagon Be Without Wheels?

IT'S admittedly a foolish question. A wagon wouldn't be a wagon without wheels. It would be a sleigh or just a box. The wheels make the wagon go. They are, therefore, the most important part of a wagon. And they stand the roughest usage of any part of the wagon. They carry a double load — a load on the hub and a load between the rim of the wheel and the ground. To stand this strain they have to be stronger than any other part of the wagon. And the hub must be the strongest part of the wheel — it is the foundation of the wheel.

Weber Wagon hubs are made of the best grade "A" material, and are shaped with great care by expert workmen. The Weber hub is equipped with a collar that keeps grease from working in between the skein box and hub. This prevents loosening of spokes by the action of pressed-in grease. Weber wheels are also provided with extra large skeins and because of the wide bearing surface the skein box cannot cut into the skein.

When hauling heavy loads, you can always depend on Weber wheels. Let us help you Weberize your hauling.

FARMERS' WEEK

County Agent H. C. C. Willey is holding Farmers' meetings over the county this week. A good meeting was held on Beaver Creek Monday night, and the Teachers' Institute was addressed Tuesday morning.

The speakers assisting Mr. Willey are Mrs. A. T. Karickhoff, of Easton Farm Womans' Club, of Monongalia county; Mrs. L. E. McClung, president of the Farm Womans' Club in West Virginia; J. T. Johnson, of Wood county; Mr. Wright, a Hereford cattle breeder of Mineral county, and Mr. Pritt, of Monroe county.

There will be a meeting of the guarantors of Chautauqua at the office of W. J. Yeager on Thursday night to check up the ticket sales. Buy your season ticket before Friday night. The number is limited.

Come into the garden, Maud,
For the black bat, night has flown,
And the grass and weeds are taking it,
And I am here alone;
Doggone it Maud, come on and work,
And help out with the hoeing.

That does not rhyme so awful good but it is better than the effort to make stood rhyme with blood as occurs in the original poem.

For a long time, we have promised ourself to make a full and detailed report about our favorite outdoor sport of gardening and now is as good a time as any. We find it very difficult to talk about it for no sooner do we open up our heart to a friend on the subject but what his eye begins to wander and turn in and he wants to talk about his own silly garden and that is no interest to us. When anyone comes around our house, he should be prepared to talk garden and talk intelligent but not take up all the time. Then another thing, gardeners are such awful liars, and they magnify so much.

We try to be truthful. The other day a man asked us about our onion crop which is safely harvested and put away for winter. All summer we pulled and eat this succulent, delicious, edible, underground, coated bulb of a biennial herb of the lily family noted for its acrid volatile oil, and quite a few were left over to mature and hang up to be used as a medicine and not as a beverage. And so the man got to boasting of his onion crop and wanted a report on ours and so we were ready for him for we said that if we had had some more we would have had a bushel and a half, and that is enough onions for any family.

Then there was another man who thought to cross-examine us when we commenced to babble about gardening and when he found that we had no okra in the garden he threw off on us and made us out an imperfect gardener and something of a fraud and we were helpless before him and the fountain of information dried up and we were made very miserable. We had it on the tip of our tongue to say that none of the best families up our way indulged in the raising of okra, but we did not know how he would take it, so that repartee was lost. And he raved on about his okra and the day was spoiled for us. The trouble is that we did not know what okra was for when we came to look it up in a book we found that it only grows in warm countries and how did we know that this was going to be a warm country this summer in time to grow okra? It strikes us that we have done without great beds of okra for a long time and that we have never missed it.

The political economists have about figured out that gardeners never cause the government any uneasiness and that the way to keep down the revolutionary spirit is to have plenty of gardens and if every restless man took to gardening that there would be no uprisings to overthrow the peace of the country. Down in the coal fields there has been either a riot or a revolution, and it was time to read the riot act and call out the troops, and load the gun. It is well known that the coal mines are woefully short of gardens, the mines being driven into the sides of bleak mountains and the houses grouped around the mouth of the mine. So having no gardens to wile away the time and to ease the anguish of the torturing hour, the miners go on the rampage and cause a lot of trouble and uneasiness.

And to support this view, attention is called to the condition of the industry in the northern part of West Virginia, where the mines are sunk in the heart of a smiling agricultural country. There we never hear of great armies of miners assembling with rifles to overawe the authorities. So the time may come when the steep hillsides of southern coal fields will be terraced from top to bottom, and instead of the clash of arms, word will come of giant pumpkins escaping from their moorings and rolling down mountain sides and sweeping everything before them. Sad enough no doubt but involving no moral turpitude. Regrettable incidents but involving only the ordinary risk of life in the rich mountain section of West Virginia.

Modern governments now pay a great deal of attention to history. England has an official historian who is one of the best paid hirelings of the government. His duty is to search out the facts of long gone ages and tell the cabinet what effect in the past certain movements now duplicated had in those days so that the administration may shape a course to avoid the danger. Not long since we had a president who was also a great historian and he turned from studying history to making it and he circumvented so many well laid schemes that a powerful opposition arose to him and they turned him out, but even that was no surprise to him for he had long counted upon it, knowing that was what had always been the result in the past.

In the year 284 A. D. Diocletian, a soldier, the grand-son of a slave, became one of the series of barrack emperors of Rome, the greatest country the world ever saw except the United States. Diocletian reigned for twenty-one years and established a strong centralized government. Under him the legislative power was lost and the law of the land was the edict of the emperor. He seemed to succeed and he thought that he was making Rome permanent by reason of a form of government known as centralized despotism, but it was the beginning of the end for from that time Rome declined and fell apart and ceased to be a great power. Among other things, Diocletian declared that the ruinous cost of living was due to combinations of capitalists to raise prices, and he accused these trusts with being actuated by raging avarice and an unbridled desire for plunder. We hear a good deal about these expressions today. Diocletian by edict fixed the highest price it should be lawful to ask for each of some eight hundred articles of daily use such as wheat, leather, cloth, butter, eggs, pork, beef and the like. Among other things he issued an edict by which the most terrible of all the prosecutions of the Christians was commenced.

In 305 A. D., Diocletian decided to quit while the quitting was good and retired to the country where he passed the rest of his days. After him came confusion and civil war, and Diocletian was pressed to assume the government again during the disorders that followed, and he wrote from his rural retreat: "Could you come here and see the vegetables that I raise in my garden with my own hands, you would no more talk to me of empire."

The vegetables of that day were beans, peas, lettuce, raddishes, melons, cucumbers, onions, turnips and cabbages. The modern gardener could have put Diocletian to shame by asking a report on his potatoes, tomatoes, and that giant cereal, the roasting ear, to say nothing of some fifty or sixty other roots and herbs.

It was the American Indian who composed the grand symphony, the grand sweet song of gardening, when he found out the three sisters that dwelt together in harmony: Corn, beans and pumpkins. He planted them all in the same hill, taking care that each seed should be in a space to itself, and this combination has never been improved upon The three crops come on together and all flourish from the same ground.

Rome fell finally from the rabble of the cities. They declared that they would rather starve in the cities than flourish in the country. Tiberius, in 125 B. C. and other rulers saw the danger and organized back to the land movements which partially succeeded, but under weaker rulers, free bread, and free amusements sapped the strength of the race, aud they at length decided that it did not matter who ruled over them and the northern barbarians came down and slew and took possession. When patriotism in the common people turned to sneers, the country fell to pieces. The cities were burned; their wives and daughters taken; they were killed or became slaves; and the dark ages came upon the world. Christianity shone with a constant light during these centuries and at length another and a greater civilization was brought about to be again threatened by the indifference of the rabble.

Then as now the philosophers tried to wake the pleasure mad crowd to the danger of a life of entertainment.

Martial wrote in 150 A. D. of country life where a man can be rich with the spoils of grove and field, unfold before the fire his well filled hunting-nets, lift the leaping fish from the quivering line, draw forth the yellow honey from the cask, while his own eggs are cooking over a fire that has not cost a penny.

And that old general, Similis, the old soldier, who at the age of sixty-nine resigned his high office and spent his last seven years on a farm, caused the following to be carved upon his tombstone: "Here lies Similis, who existed seventy-six years, and lived seven."

But such discussions as these get us nowhere. They have Moses and the prophets, and the grandeur that was Rome, and if they do not listen to these they would not pay attention even if one rose from the dead.

And about all that we actually know about Roman gardens except by hear-say was the garden that a certain Roman neighbor raised a few years ago and the town cows broke in and eat it all up and he sued the Goths and the Vandals and some others testified before a jury of barbarians and he lost his case and lost his garden and had to pay the cost of the suit, since which tims he has not been strong for gardening.

It is the twenty-second crop that we have raised off of our garden and taking it all in all it is the best garden that we have had. We had some twenty odd varieties of vegetables and none have proved total failures. Even the pumpkin vines in a dry season have brought forth fruit abundantly and have reached a stage where they seem to be safe. It is true that one pumpkin is about all that an average family can get away with but they seem to insist on that. One time somebody broke into our garden and stole some pumpkins and we have wondered for a long time what they wanted with them. Maybe it was some boy that wanted to make a lantern for Halloween. A pumpkin is a strange thing to steal.

Melons do not do very well here. It is too high and cold in the average year. They look pretty good but do not taste right. They belong to the lowlands. Cucumbers do well and it seems to us that we have finally got at the secret of raising them for we had more than we knew what to do with this year. Cucumbers have two enemies, the little yellow bug that eats the leaves when they are young and tender and the worm that attacks the roots of the plant and it is likely that you lose the crop between the two. But cloth covered frames will protect the young plants when they come up from the flying bugs though when you take them off the hot sun seems to set back the growth. Some of the neighbors fight these bugs off by spraying and swearing at them, but the frames are all right if you take them off soon enough and do a little spraying immediately after. But the worm that attacks the roots under ground is a harder problem. For some years we have been getting sulphate of ammonia, which one old gardener calls high-life, and this will make plants grow visibly. It is big medicine for if it is allowed to touch the leaves of the plant it will burn them like fire. In appearance it looks like yellow salt. It is for top dressing alone and is to be thrown near the roots of the plant on top of the ground. This year at the time when the worms usually begin to work on the roots of the cucumbers we stirred a little of this in each hill and the plants grew so fast and the ammonia so discouraged the worms that the danger was soon past and we had a full crop.

Now as to that precarious exotic, the tomato. That is the most prized of all the products of the garden. It belongs to the night shade family and that is the reason that it was once thought to be poison. Its use as food dates from 1830, and it comes from South America. Old men in this county can remember when it was raised for curiosity and children were cautioned not to eat them because they were poison.

It has probably caused more anxiety than all other vegetables combined. We have come to the stage where we are ready to give out some theories on the subject. It belongs to a hot dry country and here we are handicapped by rich soil, wet summers, and the forcing of a luxuriant growth. Nothing is easier than to bring the tomato to the stage where the large green fruit appears on the vines, and then instead of turning red, they turn black. Last year out of two hundred plants we never got a ripe tomato. It was just about as profitable as the venture of the old hen which tried to hatch out chickens from a setting of green apples. The season was warm and wet.

This year the season was dry, and we had a hard time giving away the crop. We tried to follow the old rule of eating what you can and what you cannot eat can. We canned for next winter, and then the next winter, and then the next winter, and then quit. We came within an ace of not putting any out in the garden at all. In fact we had taken a vow not to when they went to the bad in 1920. But we just automatically planted about 150 plants and they bore a hundred fold. With the greatest labor and pains we cleared a patch on a poor hillside and put out about a hundred plants there and the sun beat down on it with an intensity not known heretofore. They came through pretty good and there were a lot of tomatoes in the new ground which seemed to taste a lot better than the ones that grew in the garden. We had some very big specimens in the new ground which is the steepest piece of land in cultivation today in the entire world. We had one very fine one for that kind of ground. It would have weighed over a pound and we were going to take it up town and exhibit it for size and symmetry to a few doubting thomases who had been guying us about the venture on the rabbit ridge. When the big tomato got ripe it was without a flaw and any connoiseur would have been delighted with the sight of it especially if he knew where it came from. So we gathered it and just as we pulled it from the vine it slipped out of the hand and rolled down the hill and landed in the road at the foot of the hill and it was a total loss. There were some other big ones there too, and while the crop was not so big yet it showed that it could be done. We are more convinced than ever that it is the proper way to raise tomatoes in a wet season.

The few cabbages that we tried on the hill side were eaten by the rabbits and the turnips look like the sun was going to burn most of them up. So the idea is to raise all the vegetables in the garden and go to the wilderness for the tomatoes. We noticed the literature on the back of one of the packets of seed where it said that tomatoes ought to be watered slightly once a month, and that is the secret of that crop. Usually it rains here in the summer about every other day and that causes them to have too much blood.

We have never been able to enter into spraying contests with the proper enthusiasm. We believe in a certain number of bugs in the garden. We are used to them and would not know how to garden without them.

And we are not convinced that spraying is one of the essentials. We find nothing in the Bible about spraying a garden, though to hear some of them talk you would think it was one of the ten commandments. We believe in watching a garden all day and setting up with it of nights, but but we cannot get all wrapped up in taking a squirtgun and playing a joke on a bug who thinks he has a constitutional right to be there.

We desire to extend our remarks on some other subjects at another time, As to potatoes after they are dug. And especially on the Use of Weeds in Relation to Humus.

JUDGE KELLER

By Hon. William Gorden Mathews.

I believe that it is seldom, if ever, that a message of greater sadness has come to the bar, to the citizens and to the people of the Southern District of West Virginia, than that bearing the not unexpected news of the passing of Judge Keller, on yesterday morning.

I feel, as I know the members of the bar feel, that with him passed a judge who, without flattery, might well be termed one of the great nisi prius judges of America. But it is not, for the moment, of him as a judge, able, learned, competent, courteous, as he always was, that I feel the blow which has fallen. To me, and to those of us who saw much of Judge Keller, in Charleston, it is Keller, the man with the kind smile, with the warm hand clasp, with the ever present and unfailing interest which he took in his friends, in people, and things, who has passed from us forever, leaving behind, it is true, a memory that is and always will be fragrant; but the human grasp of his hand, the smile of his lips are gone, and we have left only such inspiration as we may derive from his life and his services to us and to the state, largely rendered in this court room.

Just as I came to this meeting, my attention was called to a newspaper clipping as to certain services held in memory of the late Chief Justice Wiswell, of Maine, and the opening sentence was so impressive to me, that I desire to read it:

"At times we are strikingly reminded that close beside the borders of life, set with all its blooms, flows the river of death, into whose forbidding waters no man may step and then return, and no man who has once entered, may send answer back from the further shore.

"When it comes to one who is frail with sickness or weary with the hardships of life, the fingers of death are soft and even welcome, but when it overtakes, as it did here, the strong man in harness, it must give us pause in order that we may cast a glance at the life, at the character, at the career of him who has left us."

Mr. President, both of the alternatives suggested in that quotation, are applicable to Judge Keller.

The blow which resulted ultimately in his death, fell upon him when he was actively and vigorously in the harness, possessed, apparently with every qualification, physical and mental, for long and useful service, discharging smoothly and flawlessly, the judicial work for which he was so well adapted, and upon him, while there in the harness, fell the blow. After eighteen months of suffering, of pain, and what must have been, I am told, great physical anguish, came death, and I cannot but believe, as I know we all hope, that when it came, he found its fingers warm and tender and welcome, and relieving him from that long waiting, for the call for which he had come more nearly to express impatience, than perhaps he ever did about anything in his life.

I agree thoroughly with what Mr. Price has said, and measuring my words and speaking deliberately, it is my belief, that I never had the privilege of appearing before a more able nisi prius judge, in or out of the State of West Virginia, or in my opinion, one who was so well equipped as was Judge Keller.

He had, in the highest degree, that vague thing which is termed judicial temperment, probably more properly termed poise.

Judge Keller could not be rushed off his feet, by the reasonings or arguments of counsel even when backed up by an array of citations until he had digested and analyzed them all, and reached his own independent conclusions. He seemed to have an almost uncanny ability to get right at the heart of things, to strike the determinative factor, when everybody else seemed hopelessly at sea.

Even with his increasing deafness, which afflicted him to some extent, from the time that he first went on the bench, perhaps on account of this handicap, which he fully recognized, he did, I am sure more preparatory work, than any trial judge that I have ever known.

I have been struck, over and over again, at the opening of a case, with the marked familiarity which he would display as to the written technical issues which were presented and involved, perhaps by a dozen or twenty special pleas filed, and it would be perfectly manifest, that he had read and was thoroughly conversant with every paper connected with the case, and had read and studied, with the most pains-taking care, everything that was written or printed in connection with it, pleadings, depositions, affidavits and exhibits, so that, from the commencement of the suit to its conclusion, there would be no issue that would be a surprise to Judge Keller, in the development and progress of the case; and when a point arose upon those issues, or upon the admissibility of any testimony or of any deposition, he would always it seemed to me, be ready to rule instantly, and to have the authorities and the reasons which demonstrated the correctness of his ruling, at his fingers end.

It has never been my experience to know a judge who occupied the bench as long as Judge Keller, who discharged the strenuous duties of his office during the same period, who was fortunate as to be so absolutely and entirely free from any shadow of sinister criticism.

I do not think the man lives in West Virginia, who ever thought, or ever said, that Judge Keller, in any of his decisions, or actions as a judge, was or could be governed by anything except his desire to decide a case according to the law and the evidence.

I have never heard criticism of Judge Keller, as unfortunately, I have heard of so many judges, as to the motives that actuated him, or his being susceptible to any outside influencer or power, political or otherwise; and it seems to me, that for him to have occupied the position he did with the bitter controversies that he had before him during the whole of that time as he had, and to have escaped even the breath of that sinister character of criticism, is perhaps, the highest tribute to his memory which could be adduced.

I feel, speaking for myself, and I know for everyone who came in contact, with any degree of intimacy, with Judge Keller, that we have lost a truly great judge; that we have lost one of the great judges of our country; that our state has suffered irreparable loss, and that the Federal judiciary of our Nation has suffered a loss which it can with difficulty if at all, wholly repair.

I believe, that could Judge Keller, before his calling came, and before he left us, have summoned before him in this court room, that vast concourse of litigants, whose cases he had heard, tried and determined, and the lawyers who had tried those cases before him, and asked of them, as did Samuel of old, "Who is there that has stood before me to whom I have not striven to do equal and exact justice," that not one voice in that vast concourse but what would have joined in the reply made by the Hebrew people to the Royal Judge of Israel, "There is no such man."

Samuel Howard, of Richwood, was in Pocahontas last week for the purpose of stirring up some interest in the matter of opening up the old Pocahontas and Nicholas Turnpike from Hillsboro to Richwood. A. L. Craig, the realestate man, of Richwood, raised the sum of $500. in his town to open the road on the Nicholas County side. The work has been completed to Dogway to about two miles from the Fallen Timber. From this point to Lobelia is a distance of eight or ten miles, a part of the way being a sled road and the rest but a bridal path. Mr. Howard reports the old pike on a good grade, and it can be made a passable highway for automobiles by cutting out the down timber, slashing and brush. This road will put Marlinton about twenty miles nearer to Richwood than by the present route to Renick and over the Coal Knob. The grade is also much easier.

DICKSON--PRITCHARD

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Mt. Carmel church, on Knapps Creek, at high noon, August 24th, when Miss Elsie Pritchard became the bride of Mr. Stewart Dickson.

The church was tastefully decorated in evergreens and potted plants and lighted by numerous candles. Mrs. Elmer Moore sang, "I Love You Truly," by Carrie Jacobs-Bond, just before the ceremony. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The flower girls, Virginia Barnett and Catherine Swadley, in white organdie, strewing flowers in the aisle, and opening the gates leading to the altar. The groomsmen, Messrs. Niel Pritchard and Ward Harper, followed by the maids, Miss Mary Pritchard, sister of the bride, and Miss Audrey Swadley, niece of the groom; the groom and his best man, Mr. Roy Dickson. The maid of honor, Miss Blanche Pritchard, sister of the bride, preceded the bride, who was given away by her mother.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Palmer Eubank, the bride's pastor, the ring service being used.

The bride was beautiful, in a gown of white georgette over white satin, with veil caught with pearls. She carried bride's roses. The maid of honor and bride's-maids wore pink organdie gowns and white picture hats, and carried pink and white sweet peas, effectively carrying out the color scheme of pink and white.

A five course luncheon was served to the bridal party at the home of the bride, just before the ceremony.

Mrs. Dickson is the daughter of Mrs. E. A. Pritchard of Knapps Creek a very charming and popular young lady. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Collingwood A. Dickson, of Trimble, Va., and a veteran of the World War.

The number of beautiful and useful presents received attest the esteem in which the bride is held.

Following the ceremony, the young couple left amid a shower of rice and good wishes, for a tour of eastern and northern cities. After Oct. 1st, they will be at home at Crabbottom, Va.

Relatives from the Virginia side attending the wedding were Mrs. C. A. Dickson, Mrs. C. H. Swadley, Misses Audrey and Catherine Swadley, Messrs. William, Robert and Roy Dickson, and Mrs. Bertha Boswell Varner.

Before deciding on your next tire have your dealer show you cross-sections of the various makes you are considering—so that you can measure the total thickness of the rubber and fabric used in building up the various makes.

You will find that Michelin Tires embody more of these mileage-giving materials. In the 34x4 Michelin Universal, for example, there is a solid though flexible mass of wear-resisting rubber and fabric almost an inch thick.

Every bit of the materials used is of the highest quality. Yet Michelins are moderate in price.

THE BIG MEETING

Dr. Theodore Copeland, of Dallas, Texas, commenced a three weeks' evangelistic campaign in Marlinton last Sunday morning in the big tent near the high school. Large crowds are attending and the interest grows.

Dr. Copeland is a minister of the Southern Methodist church, and has held pastorates in some of the larger cities of the South, including Birmingham, New Orleans and St. Louis serving some of the larger churches of his denomination. While the work of the resident minister appeals to him he felt that his duty was on the firing line of christian endeavor, and for a number of years he has devoted his time and strength to the work of an evangelist. He is happily fitted for this duty. His ability as a pulpit orator, his kindly disposition, his magnetic personality and his passion for soul winning brings a ready response from people whenever met,

Dr. Copeland is in demand in the larger cities as well as in the towns. This fall he will hold a meeting in Washington, and before he came to Marlinton he was at Clifton Forge and Ronceverte.

It is not the idle, curiosity seekers who are attracted by Dr. Copeland's preaching. It is the souls in earnest—the regular church goers—and those who know they ought to give heed to higher things who attend service after service, and make up the big congregations that are crowding the tent. He has a message for you and he is delivering it. Come and receive it.

D. H. Humphreys and family who have resided in Marlinton for many years, left on Tuesday morning in their automobile for Monroe county where they will reside on the farm they came from about seventeen years ago. Mr. Humphreys has been connected with many interests in the town during his residence here, the greater part of the time being connected with the Union Tanning Co. in charge of construction and repairs. His first work in Marlinton was in the construction of work of the Tannery and during the many years of service, he proved himself a valuable man, and useful in every department of work. As a citizen of the town, as a neighbor, and employee of the Union Tanning Co., he will be greatly missed, and the best wishes of the community go with him to his new home.

R. D. Silva, of Woodland, Washington, was a caller at this office Wednesday morning. This is his first visit to his native county in ten years. Although 84 years of age, Mr. Silva made the trip of over 4,000 miles in an automobile. It took over a month to come and all but one night was spent in the open. At Farmington, Washington, Mr. Silva met up with D. L. Barlow and his party as they were visiting the Pocahontas colony in that community. At the home of Peter Barlow there was a reunion at which there were 27 natives of Pocahontas present. Mr. Silva is accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Silva and their children, George and Myrtle.

Chautauqua closed at Marlinton last Thursday night. As a whole the program was very satisfactory. The attendance was greater than ever. Chautauqua is assured for next season, the list of guarantors numbering more than fifty names. Next year's program will cost over twelve hundred dollars, a decided increase over the cost of the one this year.

Local Observer, S. L. Brown reports as follows on the weather for the month of August: Average temperature for the month 61.95 degrees; hottest 84 on the 2nd; coldest 38 on the 27th; total rainfall 3.36 inches, greatest .68 on the 6th; rain fell on 12 days, 3 clear days, 8 cloudy and 20 partly cloudy. Thunderstorms on the 2, 3, 6, 11, 17 and 20. No snow nor frost.

County Court was in session on Monday with commissioners Barlow and Williams present. Dr. Hannah was absent, on account of being called to New York by the serious illness of his sister, Mrs. Luke. J. W. Yeager qualified as notary public. A lot of accounts audited and ordered paid. Condemnation proceedings ordered through lands of Snoden Tracy for public road near Boyer.

On Tuesday morning forty-six of the men summoned from Pocahontas for jury service in Mingo, answered to their names at Williamson. Fifty had been summoned, but one, Harry Acord, had died, and another, E. F. Curry had moved from the County. A jury was probably struck on Wednesday.

A number of cases of scarlet fever have been reported in the West Union neighborhood. Three of the family of William VanReenan at Onoto have the disease.

Ernest Jackson caught a big bear on Williams River last week. He set his trap somewhat near the falls Williams River, and the second night the bear was caught.

MINGO JURY

The twelve men selected to try the Williamson case are the following jury selected Thursday morning:

Uriah Kramer, Emory Adkison, Clark Young, Sterling McElwee, Frank Roch, C. P. McNeil, Fred Wade, Gilbert Wade, Sandy Audridge, A. W. Lightner Frank Moore, Cecil Sheets.

OBITUA

John Theodore Rogers, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Rodgers of Buckeye, was born Sept. 4, 1905 and died in the Marlinton Hospital July 25, 1921, aged 16 years 10 months and 21 days.

A few weeks prior to his death he got one of his hands severely cut and went to the hospital for treatment and for a time got along nicely; but soon other troubles developed and on the morning of July 25th he succumbed to a complication of diseases.

A few hours before his death he told his mother and others who were at his bedside that he was prepared and ready to go and asked his mother to meet him in heaven.

Funeral services were held at the home of his parents on July 26th, with Rev. C. A. Powers of the Methodist Episcopal church in charge, and his remains were laid to rest in the McNeill cemetery. The deceased is survived by his father, mother, three brothers and two sisters, who with many relatives and friends lament his departure.

But when the sun in all his state
Illumed the eastern skies,
He passed through Glory's morning gate,
And walked in Paradise.

A friend.

The flying machines were flying back to Washington from the war zone the last days of the past week. The electrical storms of Friday and Saturday caused them to seek safety on the ground by the dozen. A big bomber, carrying a crew of three men, with a spread of ninety feet, spent Saturday night in the Levels, near the colored church on the Seebert road. The report is persistent that another rooted on the Gay Knob on Elk Friday night. A big ship was wrecked Saturday and fell in the Black Forest, near Poe, Nicholas County. Of the five men it carried, four were killed and the fifth perhaps mortally injured. They were not found until Monday, forty-four hours after the catastrophe. They were caught in a severe electrical storm. Other ships of that squadron landed at Seebert, Williamsburg, White Sulphur, Beckley, Pt. Pleasant and Fairmont.

Percy Y. Brown, of Bluefield, is conducting the song service of the union revival meeting now in progress in Marlinton. He is an artist in his line, and his efforts are greatly appreciated by the large congregations which gather nightly in the big tent. In addition to being a professional singer and musical director, he is a graduate of the Moody Bible school. His services are in great demand in evangelistic meetings, and the local committee is to be congratulated upon securing him.

Order Of Publication

State of West Virginia:

At Rules held in the Clerk's office of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County on Monday, the 5th day of September, 1921, the following order was entered:

State of West Virginia Plaintiff
vs In Chancery
John Smith and Ben Smith
Defendants

The object of the above entitled suit is to have a certain automobile, to wit, a Ford touring car, Motor Number 405771, West Virginia license number 40717, declared a common and public nuisance and abated as such for the reason that the said automobile has been used to bring and carry excessive quantities of intoxicating liquors into this State and from one place to another within this State, in violation of the provisions of the prohibition laws of this State; and to have an order entered in said proceeding, directing the Sheriff of this County to sell said automobile at public auction and to pay the fund, arising therefrom, into the general school fund of this State and for general relief. And it appearing by affidavit filed in this cause, that John Smith is a nonresident of this State, it is ordered that he do appear here within one month after the date of the first publication hereof and do what is necessary to protect his interests in this suit.

A Copy, Teste:

MINGO TRIAL

(From Williamson Daily News)

Emory Adkinson, lumber inspector

Fred Wade, farmer.

Clark Young, farmer.

Uriah Kramer, concrete bridge builder.

Sandy Auldridge, veterinarian and farmer.

Gilbert Wade, farmer and lumberman.

A. W. Lightner, blacksmith.

Frank Moore, farmer,

Sterling McElwee, farmer.

C. P. McNeill, farmer and truckman.

Cecil Sheets, sawyer.

Frank Rock, cook.

This is the personnel of the jury selected in circuit court this morning for the trial of Reece Chambers and Fred Burgraff, charged with the murder of J. W. Ferguson, Baldwin-Felts detective, in the Matewan shooting of May 19 last year.

The introduction of testimony will begin with the opening of the afternoon session of court Monday at 1 o'clock.

Eight names were stricken by peremptory challenges of state and defense from the list of 20 of those who filled the box at the opening of court this morning at 9 o'clock, and were excused from service. They are Paul Overholt, I. R. Beard, T. S. Dulaney, Strickler Hoover, Frank King, J. Buckley, Elbert N. LaRue and Mead Arbogast.

Two men were held for use in the event of an emergency. They are Miflin Gilmore and Charles Ray.

The postponement of trial until Monday as a result of the death of Dr. J. A. Saunders, of Herndon, Wyoming county, in an automobile accident near that place last night. Dr. Saunders was a nephew of former Judge J. M. Saunders, one of counsel for the State and also a brother-in-law of Judge James Damron, another of counsel for the state.

There was evidence of general satisfaction with the jury as a whole after the 12 men had been sworn for the trial of the case. Court attaches believed the panel was very satisfactory to counsel for both state and defense.

The defendants were both in good spirits throughout the routine of motions, examinations, questionings and objections yesterday and today, and seemed to feel that they were going to have a square deal at the hands of their peers.

All the jurors are from Pocahontas county. They were summoned under the new enactment providing for calling jurors from another county when it appears impossible to secure an impartial jury in the county in which an offense has been committed.

The constitutionality of this law was attacked by John J. Coniff, of counsel for the defense at the morning session of court yesterday. Five or six points were set out in Mr. Coniff's motion to squash the order summoning the Pocahontas men to Mingo county. His motion was overruled, and exceptions were filed to the ruling of the court.

Seven of the 12 men who will try this case are farmers. Three of these six have other lines one being a veterinarian, another being a truckman, and a third being also a lumberman.

Pocahontas is a farming and lumber county. The men of that county are stalwart, hardy sons of the Alleghany foothills, and a combination of the mountaineer and yeoman types. The county of Pocahontas has a singularly fine record as one which lawlessness is at a minimum. Those of its citizens who engage in the work of cutting and sawing timber lead a life akin to that of the pioneers who came across the mountains to western Virginia in early times. They camping at the mill sites for long periods of time and cut themselves off temporarily from the more thickly populated settlements.

Those engaged in farming live near the towns which lie along the Western Maryland and Cheaspeake & Ohio Railroads, where there are convenient shipping facilities and good markets.

Marlinton is the county seat. Bartow, Buckeye, Cass, Clover Lick, Durbin, Hillsboro, Huntersville, Millpoint Minnehaha Springs, Raywood, Seebert and Woodrow are important towns.

Durbin is the junction point of the Elkins-Durbin branch of the Western Maryland railroad and the Greenbrier branch of the Chesapeake & Ohio, and is one of the county's most important shipping points.

Marlinton has two newspapers, the Times and the Journal. It has one state bank, the First National Bank and the Bank of Marlinton.

Durbin and Hillsboro each have a state bank—the bank of Durbin and the bank of Hillsboro.

Minnehaha Springs is a small but popular summer resort.

While Pocahontas is one of the larger counties of the state, it has only four magisterial districts—Greenbank, Edray, Huntersville and Little Levels. Two justices and two constables find it easy to enforce the law in each of these bailwicks.

A remarkable fact brought out in the examination of the talesmen drawn from Pocahontas county is that nearly every man examined proved to be a reader of one of the county newspapers. The Pocahontas Times, edited by Calvin W. Price, is a Democratic newspaper published at Marlinton for the last 40 years, while the Journal, Republican, also published at Marlinton, has been in existence for the last 11 years.

Pocahontas is an old Virginia county, formed in 1821 from parts of Bath, Pendleton and Randolph counties. It was named from the Indian princess Pocahontas, whose name is inseparably linked with and of the first beautiful romances of American history.

The town of Marlinton has an altitude of 2,131 feet, making the elevation nearly 1,500 feet greater than that of Mingo county at Williamson.

A corps of out of town stenographers and typists are here handling a report of the proceedings in the "second trigger trial." There are M. L. Davis, Captain Reuel Sherwood, Boyd Cain, Alva Moore, Mr. Haynes, Mr. Ford and Miss Moore. All are experts in their work, and the words are hadly out of the mouths of court, counsel, jurors and others until they are transscribed and back on the tables for the convenience of counsel.

Following are thumnail sketches of the men summoned from Pocahontas county to serve in the Chambers-Burgraff trial, now beginning in the circuit court of Mingo County, as obtained from hearing their examination by the court with reference to their qualifications.

Clark Young, 28, lives near Marlinton and is a farmer. He said he knew about the case. He was not opposed to capital punishment. He knew only what he had read in the newspapers about the Matewan case, and had not made up an opinion. He had no connection with the union miners or the Baldwin-Felts detectives or bias for or against either. He had no occasion to be interested one way or another, he said, and could give a fair and impartial verdict. He was not related to anyone connected with the case. He had never served as a juror. Had been employed as a scaler for a lumber company and before that as a telephone lineman. Had not discussed the case. He had seen accounts of the shooting but not the trial, and had no well developed opinions that could not be removed by evidence. Was not in the state at the time of the "trigger trial" at the January term of court, being at that time employed on an orange plantation in Florida.

Strickler Hoover is 41 and lives at Huntersville. He is married. Has worked in the woods for the last ten years Said he was not opposed to capital punishment: was not related in any way to anyone connected with the case, had no connection with the miners, union or any detective agency and was not biased either for or against these interests or against any coal concern. Had never worked where there was a "regular union." Had been asked to join a union, but had not done so. Stated emphatically that he was "for right and justice between man and man." Had not read account of trouble at Matewan or the trial following it. Was a subscriber to a county newspaper, but was away from home much of the time and did not get a chance to read it. Had not talked about the shooting with anyone. Was employed as day laborer and engaged in making skidding roads for logs. Had never served on a jury.

Frank King is sergeant of the town of Marlinton and manager of the munscipally owned water and electric company. Is 39 years old and married. Has been 28 years at Marlinton. Had read the newspaper reports but had experienced no feeling of bias. Was not related to any of the persons concerned in the case Said he was not opposed to unions, but could not say that he approved of them. "As I understand it," he said, "if a man wants to work, he cannot do so unless he belongs to a union, and I am opposed to that, but if a man wants to join a union that is his business." He said, however, he would not let that influence him in serving as a juror. He had followed pretty closely the accounts of the recent Matewan trial in the newspapers, but had not been influenced or biased by the reports as published. This he said was his first jury service.

Mead Arbogast, 28, lives at Marlinton and is married. Had been in the lumber buisness three years, operating in Pocahontas county. Was not opposed to capital punishment. Had read the newspaper accounts of the Matewan shooting and subsequent trial and had formed and expressed some opinions, but these opinions, he said, were not such that they could not be removed by evidence. Said he sold some mine supplies to the Consolidation Coal Co.—such as props and crossties. Was sensible of no opinion at this time, whatever he might have thought after reading accounts of the shooting and the trial which followed.

J. Buckley, of Buckeye, is a lumber inspector, so employed for 18 years. Is with the Marlinton Lumber Co. Had worked for the National Furniture Co. at Wheeling, and had been connected with the work of airplane construction in time of the world war, working for the government. Had no feeling of prejudice, and could return a verdict in accord with law and justice. Had not read of the shooting, but had read accounts of the trial at the January term of court. Was not unduly interested and had not discussed the present case with anyone.

Gilbert Wade, Minnehaha Springs, is a farmer, 37, and single. Not opposed to capital punishment, knew nothing of the charge against the men accused, and had no preconceived opinions, prejudice or bias Felt he could give a fair and impartial verdict based on the evidence alone. Had not discussed the case with anyone, and felt that he could do exact justice between the state and the defendant at the bar. Had farmed practically all his life except some time spent in the lumber industry, in which he had served as manager for a producing company for three years. Did not remember of reading of the shooting, but had read accounts of the trial at the January term.

Sandy Auldridge is 40 and a farmer and veterinarian. Never had any connection with the miners' union or the Baldwin-Felts detective agency. Had no prejudice against either. Had devoted himself exclusively to his farming and his veterinary work and paid little or no attention to the published accounts of the shooting in May of last year or of the trial at the January term of court. Had read the account of the shooting, but the impression received at the time had long since been effaced. Read the Pocahontas county papers and the Charleston Gezette. Not in any way connected with the coal interests. Had jury experience in his home county.

Uriah Kramer comes from Marlinton and is a concrete bridge worker. Knew nothing about unions or the Baldwin-Felts detective agency. Was not opposed to the extreme penalty. Had read newspaper accounts of the shooting and the trial following, but had formed no opinion nor become sensible of any bias. Not related to either of the defendants or to anyone else connected with the case. Had never been asked to join a union. Might have received some temporary impression from newspaper accounts, but if so it had entirely passed away. His brother, a farmer, had also come to Williamson as a juror. Had not discussed the merits of the case with anyone.

Fred Wade, 42, is a farmer living at Seebert. He is married. Said he had no connection with the United Mine Workers, any coal company or the Baldwin Felts detectives. Felt he could weigh the evidence submitted and give a fair and impartial verdict. Owns his own farm. Formerly worked on a sawmill. Had read his county newspaper but it had carried no account of the shooting or the trial in January. Had no positive convictions on the subject of unionism, but believed any man should have the right to join a union if he so desired.

U. S. Gilmore lives near Woodrow. He is 40 years old, married, and a farmer and logging contractor. Said be had no feeling of bias in connection with the case, was not connected with any of the interests involved in the industrial trouble in Mingo county, and was not related to either Furgerson or Chambers or Burgraff. Had never belonged to a union. Was not opposed to capital punishment. Was "opposed to unionism as he heard of it in Pocahontas county," where he said a union had been formed by the woodcutters, but had fallen through.

Miflin Gilmore and Charles Ray were held tentively after a brief examination by the court In the event of their being needed to complete the panel they will be examined by counsel. Gilmore is 34, and is a resident of Marlinton. He in common with Ray, who lives near Marlinton and is single, knew nothing of the case except as he had read of it in the newspapers and had formed no hard and fast opinions. Neither of the men is related to the defendants or to anyone else connected with the case.

Egbert W. LaRue, of Hillsboro, in the life insurance business. He is 24 years old and married. Said he was opposed to capital punishment, knew nothing except what he had read of the Matewan shooting in the newspapers, and had formed no undue opinion. Had read the headlines of the daily newspapers but in doing so had become sensible of no bias or prejudice. Had formerly been a clerk in the employ or the Warren Lumber Co. at Hillsboro.

W. A. Brill, of Cass, is 51, married, and a merchant. Had formed a strong opinion with regard to the Matewan shooting, and felt that it would take strong evidence to overcome that opinion. He would take that opinion into the jury box, he told the court, and hold to it until sufficient evidence had accumulated to outweigh it. His opinion had been formed from a reading of the newspapers and from what he had heard concerning the affair. He was excused.

A. W. Lightner, of Buckeye, is a blacksmith and married. Knew nothing about the United Mine Workers or the Baldwin-Felts detectives except what he read in the newspapers. Had lived all his life in Pocahontas county and never belonged to a labor union. Said he owned his shop. Had not charged his mind with any of the facts in the case at bar or of the indictments which followed it early in the year.

C. P. McNeill, married, lives at Buckeye, and is a farmer and truckman. Had no feeling against capital punishment where it was warranted by the evidence. Had read of the case at bar, or the incidents which brought it about, but had formed no opinion in the matter. Felt he could give a fair and impartial verdict in accord with the evidence. Had seen jury service before. Not related to one connected with the case.

I. R. Beard is a farmer, 49, living near Marlinton. He stated that he had no opinion, prejudice or bias in the case. Had heard of the shooting and other circumstances in connection with the troubles in Mingo county. Had read the New York World and the Pocahontas Times, but did not remember of reading of an account of the shooting. Declared he had a free and open mind and could render a verdict according to the evidence.

Paul Overholt stated that he is a merchant at Marlinton. Is 26 years old. He had talked with relatives of George Gunnoe, former Matewan school teacher, and in this way had formed some opinions regarding the Matewan shooting and the industrial troubles in this county. Said his opinions would require evidence to overcome, but that they could be affected by the testimony of witnesses.

Harry L. Byers, 28, a bank clerk at Marlinton. employed by the First National Bank, is married. Was not opposed to capital punishment, but had an opinion that could be changed by evidence. He had got his information from relatives who knew of conditions in Mingo county and who were at Matewan at the time of the shooting. He was excused from service.

T. S. Dulaney is 50 years old, married, a contractor, and lives at Woodrow. Said he knew nothing about unions and had no feelings in the matter." Knew nothing of the case at bar, and was not opposed to capital punishment. Had heard little or no discussion of the case, and when asked if he could go into the jury box and give a fair and impartial verdict, answered with an emphatic "Absolutely."

Page Sutton, of Hosberman, is married and a farmer. Had conscientious scruples against capital punishment and felt that he could not join in a verdict sentencing a man to the gallows. Hence he was excused from service.

F. M. Sydnor, of Marlinton, buys and sells coal at the Pocahontas county seat. He said he had been nine years in the business. He said he bought coal in the Kanawha and New River fields, which are organized territory. He was temporarily excused.

Frank Moore, single, lives at Huntersville. Had no feeling for against anyone connected with the Matewan trouble, and thought he could give a fair and impartial verdict. Had been in Pocahontas county practically all his life, but worked in the redwood forests of California. He is a lumberman,

Cecil Sheets. sawyer, lives near Marlinton, is 30 years and single. Had no prejudice and was not related to anyone concerned in the case at bar. Had do feeling for or against union labor.

Frank Rock, cook, married, Marlinton, had read of the Matewan case in the newspapers and to a certain extent might have formed and expressed an opinion. Was sensible of no opinion in the case at bar as it affected Burgraff and Chambers, and could give a fair and impartial verdict.

John H. Beverage, 35, of Bartow, is a farmer, and member of a religious organization which does not believe in capital punishment. Thought the guilty should be punished, but felt that he could not meet the extreme penalty in the face of his religious beliefs. He was excused from service.

Emory Adkinson, Raywood, 41, is a lumber inspector. Had lived at Raywood practically all his life. Had read the daily newspapers but had formed no opinion regarding the merits of the case at bar. Had not discussed the case and felt that he could render a true verdict. He had never served as a juror exept in a justice's court.

Sterling McElwee is a farmer living at Minnehaha Springs. He had read accounts of the Matewan shooting and of the Hatfield trial, but had no undue opinions and would carry no such opinions into the jury box. Had no feeling against the coal operators, the miners or the Baldwin-

THURSDAY, SEPT. 15, 1921

There is not much doing, politically speaking. Some think that is a good thing, but others claim that the new administration has not fulfilled its undertakings and are complaining about it. The President is out with a statement showing progress, but the trouble with it all is that nobody knows what effect new things will have upon the welfare of the country.

The country as a whole is in the moulting period and is not very active. It is in the process of shedding the accumulations of past years and owing to the decrease in values what one man loses another does not gain. It is a general marking off of paper profits and it may be for the good of the country in the long run. It is a blessing that the crops are good. The corn crop is just about the biggest that was ever seen and corn is king in the United States. It means that many cattle will be wintered. In a scarce year they would have been destroyed and it is important that the live stock holdings be built up for the United States has had to import much meat. No body should starve this year. People take the same sensible view of the food situation as did the young princess who said she did not see any sense in persons starving—she would eat bread and cheese before she would starve.

The only solution that we can see to the unemployment of working men is to create a system of public works sufficient to engage every able bodied man who is willing to work. As it happens roads are badly needed and that one item alone should take care of all surplus labor of a hundred years to come. The Roman Empire was forced to build roads for the purpose of keeping the working men busy and that government built thousands of miles of paved roads in a day when there was no use for them other than to march on, or to carry rich persons litters. These litters were luxurious affairs in which the passenger reclined at his ease and could read and write while being carried forward at a swift pace by picked and trained teams of eight men to the litter, who trotted along very cheerfully.

Now there are automobiles and there must be roads to accommodate them. The automobile is the greatest economic blessing of the age. It keeps men busy.

In some countries they have the unemployment doles where they pay men for being idle. This is a frantic effort to keep the population in cities. It is highly important to force men back to the country when the cities become too large for the country which supports them. And roads and automobiles make the operation of weaning men from city life comparatively painless.

It is not likely that any one now living will ever see extraordinary high wages again. The laboring men of the country had it and could not keep it. They deprived themselves of great incomes at the request of their esteemed employers. The employer is the one who does the thinking for himself and his men, and the men are always at the service of the boss. They vote as he requests them to vote. And they laid down their livings because they were asked to do so.

The League of Nations is now in session and pretty soon a sort of offshoot of the League of Nations called the disarmament council is to meet in Washington, to see if they can agree to lay down arms and go to work at peaceful pursuits. Hughes, Root, Lodge, and Underwood are to be our representatives. They are able men but each and every one is a politician, and a politician has been described as a man who would circumvent God. They potter around and do nothing. They believe that if they put off answering a letter for a month that it is a wise system, for by that time the letter will not need any answering.

Swift tells of one politician who had been working for eight years upon a project for extracting sunbeams out of cucumbers, which were to be put into vials hermetically sealed, and let out to warm the air in raw inclement summers.

When one remembers that the cost of one battleship would cover the State of West Virginia with roads, it is time to express a fervent wish and hope that the board will decide to do without battleships.

In the old days, wars were often settled by one man on a side fighting out the quarrel. This was the case in the warfare of Greeks and Trojans, of Jews and Philistines, and of Vandals and Alamans. Heroes came forth from the two sides and the result was taken to mark the powers of the opposing war-gods and decide the victory.

And there went out a champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, of Gath, whose height was six cubits and a span, to-wit, nine feet and nine inches high.

And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, Why are you come out to set your battle in array? am I not a Philistine, and ye servants of Saul? choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me.

If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us.

And the Philistine drew near morning and evening and presented himself forty days.

And David intimated unto the king that every man has his gifts and he refused to take armor and sword but went forth against the Philistine with a sling and five smooth stones from the brook, and the sling proved to be an equalizer, and David smote Goliath in the forehead with a stone, and Goliath fell upon his face upon the earth, and David did not do a thing unto him save to cut off his head and bring it into camp.

And for some time in the middle ages it was the custom to require the princes to fight out any war between themselves and not require the common people to expose themselves to the slaughter.

This day and generation may not be able to reduce war to a combat between two men, but it is certainly going to agree that hereafter when there has to be fighting to be done that it must be done by much smaller armies and navies than were recently deemed essential.

What the meeting in Washington is going to do could have been better settled by the League of Nations, but that is a matter of opinion. The great point is that they are going to meet to talk it over, and the old saying is that a woman or castle that parleys is about to surrender.

The late war in West Virginia has smoothed his wrinkled front and when they set out to count the dead and wounded they did not find any. One old soldier who had fought in the Phillipines said that when the natives had an insurrection that they were very apt to come in sight of a mountain and stop a long way off and fire at the mountain and not at any body. And this kind of warfare was called the combat formal. It was not dangerous to anyone.

The troops have been mostly sent home and proceedings are on foot to prosecute certain members of the army of the miners.

When the war broke out many airplanes were sent over the mountains to take part in the hostilities and this county was on or near the line of travel and it was a common sight to see them high in the air on their way to the front. And the first news that we had that the war was over was the fact that many of these airplane were seen going east again.

As it happened, the mountains gave birth to some squally weather just in time to interfere with the safe passage of the air men. This is the incunabula of storms and as Mr. Kipling remarks: "If one intrudes on the Heavens when they are balancing their volt accounts; if one disturbs the High Gods' market-rates by hurling steel hulls at ninety knots across tremblingly adjusted electric tensions, one must not complain of any rudeness in the reception."

And when you come to think about it, birds are rarely seen in the air when there is a great wind.

Wild geese come down when the weather is not right for them, and that is what the airplanes had to do on Saturday a week ago, when a powerful wind, rain, and thunder storm raged in these mountains.

The rain was very welcome for this country has been on the ragged edge of disaster the whole year on account of the drought. On that Saturday springs were lower and weaker here than they had been for just forty years, and the river was foul.

But it did not suit the navigation of the air. The airplanes "buffeted right and left by laterals like the pinions of angry angels," looked for landing places and were happy to find them. One came down in a field in Greenbrier County and was safe and there rode out the storm and went on her way next day rejoicing. A man came by and told the soldiers that he had a good field some miles away that they were welcome to alight in any time that they might be passing that way, but the aviator told him rather rudely that Uncle Sam's aircraft came down on anybody they damned pleased. That is probably true in the main, but on that stormy Saturday it would have been more correct to say that they came down any where that they could.

The air is pitted, elastic, charged with krypton vapours that are dangerous to disturb. The air pits badly, with blowouts, vortices, and laterals, that can whirl a most powerful machine about like a leaf in a whirlwind. Living as we do in the shelter of the hills we give no thought to the tumult of the air a mile or so over our heads. Once about forty years ago the tip of a cyclone reached down and drew a line a quarter of a mild wide on the mountain tops the whole length of the county and in that strip not a tree was left standing, and the sign of its fury is to be seen today though none knew at the time that the gash had been cut in the forrest.

There are holes in the air. In these spaces the air seems to be lacking. Anyway it is so thin that the propellers cannot bite on it, and that seems to have been what happened to the plane that fell on the head of Twenty Mile creek in Nicholas county bringing death to four of the five brave men of the crew. The airship went into a place where there seemed to be nothing to support it and dropped to the earth and the place could not be found for two days.

There are two reports from the head of Elk River that lack confirmation. The first was that on the breaking out of the Mingo war, an airplane was seen to cross Elk Mountain close down with soldiers sitting on the wings. And the other was that on Saturday after the war that a great airplane came out of the wulli-wa to the sod on the top of Elk Knob and roosted there all night like a great bird.

The only fatalities in the war then are those caused by the elements. A thunderstorm in the mountains is dangerous to airships. The air men respect the mountains and do not navigate over them when the conditions are unfavorable if they can read the signs aright.

Some airmen dropped in unexpected in the Levels as the saying is. Out of the clouds and darkness of the Cranberry bog country a machine with a wing spread of ninety feet swooped down Stamping Creek and turned like a bird and alighted in the fields on the M. J. McNeel place, which by the way is the old John McNeel clearing, one of the oldest in the State of West Virginia. It was not for us earth bound souls to cross-examine the daring men of the air, but we will always wonder if the pilot picked out that ideal landing or was he just cast there by the storm. If he had picked the State over he could not have found a better place to land.

These army men had seen the companion plane fall but they probably considered that such is war, for after enjoying the hospitality of the Levels over night, they winged their way out of there by the gap at the end of Droop Mountain and were seen no more.

The Pocahontas jurymen were much pleased with their trip to Mingo County. They found Williamson to be a fine city and they were treated with great kindness and politeness. Forty-two of the forty-six were examined on the voir-dire, which means that they were sworn to answer questions, and from that forty-two, twenty men were chosen to make up the panel to inquire into the indictment charging murder of a detective. Four jurors were left over unexamined when the list was made up. A reporter to a daily paper says that it is the custom in Mingo county to place twenty men in the box from which a jury of twelve is selected. That Mingo custom is good, when it is one of the most binding laws of the land that twenty men are to be listed, and from that list the state is to strike two and the defendant, six names.

The city of Williamson was quiet and there was nothing unusual about the place except that men did not gather in groups in the streets but kept moving about their lawful occasions. There were a number of State policemen in uniforms and some of the new malitia, and right in front of the court house was a big car with seven men in it who looked peaceful, but the impression was made that in case of a hurry call that the car could move off to any point with great speed and expedition.

When the twelve men had been selected the court kept them for the purposes of the trial and two other jurors to be used in the case of an emergency and sent thirty-two men back to Pocahontas county to be at the call of the court anytime during the term, the Judge saying that there might be one chance in a hundred that they would be recalled to Williamson.

The counsel for the defendants were insistent to know if the jury had been drawn fairly and with a strict observance of the law. No question about that. The officials here do not try any short cuts and there has never been any suspicion aroused by the conduct of the courts in this county. It is a land of steady habits and we attend to our public duties seriously, and we are not subject to hysteria in the court house. And while a good many of our officials from time to time have not proved themselves to be supermen, yet at the same time this county has never elevated a crook to office.

In the drawing of the Mingo jury there was one thing that made it a case in which the law of chance was to be strictly observed, and that was that the greatest of care was to be taken for it did not suit any of our busy men to go to that far country to attend to court duties. Therefore it was like the draft, where it was speedily realized that if a man dropped out of his turn that it meant that the burden fell upon some other county man. And that was the case here. No man was to be called upon to go to Mingo, except when the lot fell upon him by a most careful drawing.

During the time that our men were there, a case of Mingo justice occurred. One night a negro assaulted a young white child, and within twenty four hours the criminal had been indicted, tried, and sentenced to be hung.

Everything comes to him who waits long enough. For twenty-odd years this town has been praying for a lot sale so that there would be some interest in life to the people who lived here. It was like a lot of boys shut up in the barn on a rainy day with nothing to trade. This large town has been built by men who had to go through the painful process of getting a lot every now and then from a land company that parted with land like it was as precious as their life's blood. Last week some hundreds of lots were thrown on the market during a three day's auction and now there are all sorts of places for habitations to spring up and the next building boom will see a great deal of activity in this town. The sellers last week realized a good many thousand dollars on the sale and we venture the opinion that they will find that the result of the sale will be that what they have left is worth more than all their holdings before the sale. We are not so particular about the town getting so much bigger for it is big enough for us as it is, but it always did gall us to think that a land company held a monopoly of the building land and that it did not know or care enough to make use of it. Hereafter people ought to be able to get up a lot trade as easily as they trade horses.

Farm for Sale

About 250 acres, 6 miles west of Rightown, Va., in the Blue Grass District of Highland County, 13 miles east of Bartow, W. Va. Near the Staunton & Parkersburg Turnpike, and near and directly in front of the North Fork Lumber Co. Railway. Practically enclosed with rail and wire fence. About 150 acres in pasture, meadow and fields. Good sugar orchard of about 500 trees. Three apple orchards and an abundance of fruit. Half mile from school. Two dwelling houses, two practically new frame barns, grainery, smoke house, poultry house, wagon shed and shop. Cut 20 stacks of hay last year. This is good land and lies well, much of it is level and smooth. 100 acres of good hardwood timber. Will sell at a bargain as a whole or will sell one half of it.

MISS ALICE C. CLARK

Many friends of Miss Alice Clark, even in her own community, were shocked to hear that on August 4, 1921, that she had been called from her earthly home at Hillsboro, W. Va., to the reward which God had reserved to bestow upon his handmaiden. So insidious had been the disease which took her away, and so bravely and unmurmuringly had she struggled against it that very few realized that she was so near death's door, and when the end came it had upon the whole community the startling effect of accident.

Miss Alice was one of nine children born to Samuel T. and Annie Lewis Clark. Her father was for many years a deacon in Oak Grove Presbyterian church and her mother died in the faith, and when she made a profession of her faith in Christ she united with the church of her parents October 25, 1896.

Almost all her life she belonged to that most useful band of self-sacrificing servitors of the public, the teaching fraternity. She literally wore her life out in this calling, teaching when her strength was insufficient, and yet never abating one whit of the energy that characterized her years of sound health. She had already perfected plans to take charge of a school the coming winter when death ended all her earthly purposes.

Miss Alice was very quiet and retiring in her tastes and habits but yet the fact that she had taught so much gave her a scope of influence that will be felt for many years on the great number whom she had trained in the school room and who have been taught to value the ideals of life which she inculcated. Out of the school room she loved her home and the domestic duties it involved and the opportunity which it gave her for reading, of which she was very fond. Her most intimate friends and relations alone, perhaps, were able to look beneath the exterior of reserve and modesty and appraise at their true value the qualities of mind and heart that were hers To them the tenderness and devoted affection which she bestowed upon a mother who was a semi-invalid for many years before her death will always shine out conspicuously in their memory of her. Thus, to them she seemed to fit into the home that they occupied togethor and become a very part of it. They will miss her from these earthly walks, but the Bible which she had so well worn has pointed her to the heavenly places in Christ and that is far better. "Behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me."

HEALTH EDUCATION

Any program for the eradication of human contact disease, such as tuberculosis syphilis, and gonoccus infection, which are so difficult of prompt recognition, so insidious in their onset and methods of transmission, and so successful in their development of carriers, must include education as one of its outstanding features.

It is just as reasonable and practicable for the community to plan twenty years into the future in a campaign against disease, as it is to plan a thousand miles of new paved road, or commodious buildings to house our public officials. Our public officials are very alert when the dollar mark appears, and are very vehement in their declarations to save the public purse and protect human life from immediate danger. The barriers which will protect us from disease twenty years from now are given little attention. We refer to sex education, right methods of thought, religious and ethical training and adequate environmental portection against exposure.

If such means and measures have their greatest influence, work must be begun in early childhood and continued until the individuals concerned are fully established in homes of their own as adult citizens. The task of promoting this phase of preventive measures must eventually fall to the trained educators, although all public and health officials can be of very great assistance.

—U. S. Public Health [illegible]rvice.

Cra[illegible] Healing Springs, Va.,
September 5, 1921.

In a n[illegible]. The Times eight years ago I stated that the principal productive crop of this locality was water—mineral water—and a second trip with observations haven't worked any changes in crop relations.

Nearly every Pocahontas resident is familiar with the trip to Ronceverte, and practically every mother's son and daughter of them is well aware of the fact that Ronceverte is comparable to a hive of bees; they sting and one gets stung wherever you go, and get stung badly. The marked difference in bees and Ronceverte is that bees have drones—they don't work—while Ronceverters all work—work on the stop overs to perfection.

Referring to colored folks, they are not supposed to be very fast workers and their movements are generally hindered by indolence, but on the tedius eastbound as the crest of the Alleghany has been crossed to Alleghany, Virginia, it is wonderful how quick they become in getting into the Jim Crow cars as per the Virginia law in segregation. Their flight reminded one of the troop unions going to the front in the W. Va. mine war while the negroes moved to the front under the Virginia law.

The railroad officials at Clifton Forge must be members of the haymaker's union from the way they pitched passengers into overcrowded passenger cars. Strap hangers on street cars are no comparison to the conditions on the James River Diuision. A passenger car generally accommodates perhaps fifty persons but under the able management of the Clifton Forge "higher-ups" a car will hold 250 persons at a time with always room at the top.

A more delightful spot for recreation and water drinking cannot be found to equal Craig Springs. Located up in the Alleghany mountain adjoining Monroe county, it is an ideal spot. At the crest of the human wave some 500 people were accommodated at one time this year, but now the crop has dwindled down to about fifty. During the month of August the hotel register recorded arrivals as far south as Miami, Fla., while Chicago was the most northern point registering. The accommodations are good, food ample, cottages and hotel rooms suiting all tastes, while the rates are above zero and upward to—Tell the Pocahontas boys who got the Mingo draft order not to pick a casket yet. On Saturday I saw four long troop trains going to the West Virginia Balkans with men, guns, Red Cross and mules—the latter for close range firing.

Kenney Dilley.

REPUBLICANS DENOUNCE TAX BILL

Here is an extract from the speech of Representative Oscar E. Keller (Rep., Minn.)

"With the Nation in the midst of the severest financial depression of history; with thousands of factories closed; with freight cars idle; with farm produce rotting in the fields because prices will not defray the cost of transportation; with bank failures and bankruptcies increasing; and, most serious of all, with 5,735,000 men unemployed as winter approaches, I want to protest against the hasty passage of an unscientific, illy-conceived, privilege-written revenue bill, which is going to still further depress the purchasing power of the people by imposing upon small producers and consumers an additional burden of $600,000,000, which has been lifted from 5,000 millionaires well able to pay it out of their war profits.

"We have adopted a patchwork, makeshift revenue scheme that places the entire burden upon production in such a way that taxes are absorbed in higher prices and then passed along to the consuming public."

Before deciding on your next tire have your dealer show you cross-sections of the various makes you are considering—so that you can measure the total thickness of the rubber and fabric used in building up the various makes.

You will find that Michelin Tires embody more of these m leage-giving materials. In the 34x4 Michelin Universal, for example, there is a solid though flexible mass of wear-resisting rubber and fabric almost an inch thick.

Every bit of the materials used is of the highest quality. Yet Michelins are moderate in price.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

The State Exhibit of Boys' and Girls' 4-H Clubs will be held at Charleston October 14-15, 1921.

The expenses of transporting the exhibits to an from Charleston will be paid. Club members attending the exhibit will bear their own expenses. All entries must be made not later than October 1, 1921.

This is th state contest and it is hoped that all club members who are interested will furnish county agent with name and address.

The final drawing of calves for the Registered Hereford Heifer Calf Project will take place at Hillsboro Monday, October 10th at 2 o'clock p. m.

Before disposal takes place these calves will be judged, placed, and appraised by Mr. B. F. Creech, animal husbandry extension specialist of the state. Notes will be taken on each individual calf relative to future development. This should be of interest to local breeders. The public is invited and urged to attend.

Ten heifer calves will be furnished to boys in the country. Prizes amounting to over $100 will be given at the annual exhibit..

HEALTH EDUCATION

I have just returned from attending teachers' institutes in nine counties where I made talks on public health. Dr Henshaw, State Health Comissioner, and others representing the State Department of Health have been busy attending other institutes and doing the same thing. The attitude of those with whom we came in contact, which includes almost every school man and woman in the state from the State University to the smallest district school, convinces us that there is a place in the common schools for health education.

The Dentists of the State have loyally helped in this brief campaign, and I believe that a foundation has been laid for the actual teaching of practical sanitary measures and disease prevention in our schools. County Superintendents, Boards of Education and teachers themselves have assured us of this and only await the proper encouragement and help from those who are better prepared to direct it.

This help will be gratefully furnished by the State Department of Health, but can only be partially successful without the support and cooperation of all physicians and health offcers. If your school happen to be among the very few that have sanitary inspection, it is your duty to observe imperfections and suggest remedies. If there is no one whose specific duty it is to look after these matters, we hope that you will consider it your duty to do so, and not only suggest and secure proper sanitation of the school house and grounds, but use your influence as a physician to stimulate the teaching of these things inside the school itself.

Many of the best and busiest physicians of the state have already promised this cooperation, I therefore have no hesitancy in asking all of you to do the same. The next decade is certainly going to be one of radical changes in health education and in disease prevention. Are you going to be on the band wagon or stand on the ourb?—F. F. Farnsworth, P. A. Surgeon, U. S. Public Health Service Director.

STOPHOR GIVIEN LIFE SENTENCE INSTEAD OF DEATH

(Charleston Gazette)

James Stophor, under sentence to be hanged Thursday at the Moundsville penitentiary for complicity in the murder of two foreigners in Pocahontas county, yesterday was granted a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment by Governor E. P. Morgan.

The executive order issued by the governor in this case is the first of its kind since he entered office last March

Stophor was convicted of murder in the first degree at Marlinton and the jury returned the verdict without recommendation. He was sentenced to be hanged by the trial judge, Andrew Price.

Intervention by Governor Morgan was a result of efforts on the part of the condemned man and recommendations by a majority of the jurymen and the trial judge. The prosecuting attorncy, A. P. Edgar, notified the governor that he wonld not resist the man's effort to save his life, "in view of all circumstances in this case.

Stoplor and a companion held up and robbed a lumber camp near Marlinton and killed two men. His companion was sentenced to life imprisonment and shortly after he entered the Moundsville prison he died of a self-imposed hunger strike, in protest against the conviction.

The executive order issued by Governor Morgan is as follows:

"Whereas, James Stophor, convicted of murder in the first degree, and without recommendation in the circuit court of Pocahontas county, at the June term thereof, 1921, and sentenced by said court to be hanged on the 16th day of September, 1921, and

"Whereas, the date of the execution of the said James Stopher was fixed and set for Friday, September 16, 1921: and

"Whereas said James Stophor on August 30. 1921, filed the petition praying for commutation of his original sentence and upon the presentation to me of the statements of a majority of the jurymen who sat upon the trial of the case of the state of West Virginia against James Stopher, and who recommended said commutation to life imprisonment and upon recommendation of Andrew Price, the trial Judge, that said sentence be commuted and upon the statement of A. P. Edgar, prosecuting attorney of Pocahontas county, "that in view of all the circumscances in this case I do not feel I should resist this man's effort to save his life."

"Now, therefore, I, Ephriam F. Morgan, governor of the state of West Virginia, with the authority duly conferred upon me as such governor, duly considering the statements of said jurymen, trial judge and prosecuting attorney, and as an act of mercy, do hereby direct and order that the said prisoner, James Stophor, instead of being executed on Friday, September 16th, 1921, and in accordance with the sentence of the circuit court of Pocahontas county, West Virginia, aforesaid, shall be confined in the penitentiary of the state of West Virginia for and during his natural life.

"And I do hereby direct and order the warden of the penitentiary upon receipt of this executive order to enter the name of the said James Stophor as a life prisoner upon the records of the penitentiary, and I do hereby further order and direct that this commutation of sentence to life imprisonment be observed by the warden of the penitentiary and his successors in office the same as though it were the original sentence of the circuit court of Pocahontas county, West Virginia."

WOODROW

Mrs. J. Luther McNeill still continues very sick.

Mrs. Foley Morrison and children have been quite sick but are better.

James N. White, who spent the winter in Florida, has returned home. Also his son, Page White, who has been attending school at Buckhannon is at home to spend a short time after a spell of flu followed by pneumonia.

Charles Galford, of Edray, was visiting relatives here a few days ago.

Forrest Kellison, of Buckeye, spent Saturday night and Sunday in this part.

John Galford and son Andrew were at Marlinton on business recently.

Frank Jordan spent a few days with his family. He has a position at Slaty Fork with the W. Va. Spruce Lumber Co.

W. E. Baxter was at Marlinton on business recently.

Senator E. Hough and son of Wellsburg, were here on business.

Williams & Pifer has bought S. D. McClure's timber and expect to operate the coming summer.

Dick Smith, the veteran hunter, who found it necessary to give up his business in town in order to devote his whole time to the profitable business of trapping, came on to a veritable mine of fur the other day. He was chasing a fox, and noticed a place where the snow appeared to have melted away. He knew the sign at once. Digging away the stones and earth he opened a den where a whole colony of skunks were hibernating. The animals were so stupid that he took them out one by one and gave them painless death before they knew they had been disturbed. There were a baker's dozen of them, most of them jet black, and each in prime condition. The day's work will net over a hundred dollars.

Porter Kellison of Swago, asks for the Republican nomination for Sheriff of Pocahontas county. He is native born and a farmer by occupation. He started poor, but by industry and handling his business well he has become a man of affairs. If he ever lacks anything of making a sheriff it will be too few votes. He has never sought public office before, though the school board job has been inflicted on him a number of times. He always did his duty as he saw it without fear or favor.

Our good old colored friend William Alexander Wilson paid us a visit Tuesday morning. At the county fair last fall he carried off the prize for the best bunch of clover hay. This clover was grown on newly cleared land in the flat woods, land considered practically worthless a few decades ago. The clover grew so long and heavy that it was too thick to be cut by a machine and scythes had to be used.

Beaver Creek—The flu is raging in the neighborhood again.—Kennie Underwood and family are able to be out again after an attack of flu.—Mrs. Wallace Underwood is able to out again after an illness of Lagrippe. Also the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Dency Sharp is improving nicely from whooping cough and pneumonia.—Mrs Kate Syms has closed her school on account of the flu.—Walter Perkins, from Georgia, is visiting his sister, Mrs. P. M. Underwood.

A friend of ours from Cheat Bridge calls our attention to the fact that we inadvertantly left out the name of Sullivan Kelley in the list of heroes from Pocahontas county who made the supreme sacrifice, published two weeks ago. Private Sullivan Kelley was the son of Benjamin Kelley of Duabin. Did we miss any others?

The town of Lewisburg has opened a community house, and dedicated it to the memory of the John A. Preston. This is the first place in West Virginia to take this advanced step. There are others which will do likewise.

Clarence Shinaberry of Cloverlick, was a visitor at this office on Tuesday. During the late war he saw eighteen months of military service, three months in America, eight in France and seven in Germany. Though in battle a number of times he escaped without a scratch. He got home last August.

URIAH HEVENER

Uriah Hevener, aged 32 years, died at the Marlinton Hospital on Sunday afternoon, February 22, 1920, of gangrenous lungs following a severe attack of influenza and pneumonia. For more than a week he had been very ill at his home near Boyer, and surgical operation becoming necessary he was brought to Marlinton Sunday morning.

Mr. Hevener was one of the prominent and influential citizens of the county, and few men will be more greatly missed. He was a progressive farmer on a big scale, owning the second largest farm in the county.

Mr Hevener is survived by his wife, a daughter of H. C. Skaggs, of Lewisburg, and their three little children; his mother, and his half brother, John R. Hevener; and three half sisters, Mrs. June Summerson, and Mrs. H. H. Slaven, of Virginia, and Mrs. Lou Post of Upshur county.

His body was buried with Masonic rites on his farm, beside the grave of his father on Tuesday, services being conducted by his pastor, Rev. Monroe, of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Hevener was the son of the late Uriah Hevener, his mother before marriage being Miss Nancy McLaughlin. At the death of his father, though young in years, he took over the management of a large estate, and with remarkable judgment and foresight was making a great success.

Like his father, Mr. Hevener was a friend to every one in distress or in need of assistance, and the deserving man was never turned away empty handed. He was public spirited to a remarkable degree, and any movement toward the betterment of church, roads, schools and whatever else was a benefit to the community had his unstinted support.

GONE TO REST

In kind remembrance of Mrs. Caroline Collins, who died at Hosterman, on Tuesday February 10, aged 78 years, her health had been failing she suffered with heart trouble, and her death was not unexpected, but she has gone to that Happy Home Above where pleasure never dies. He body was laid to rest in the Hosterman graveyard, on Wednesday Feb. 11th. The funeral services was conducted by Rev. W. M. Pugh.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. Yea, saith the Spirit that they may rest from their labors.

Rev. J. M. Walker, Pastor.

Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.

At 11 a, m. Rev. F. P. Allen, the newly elected business manager of West Virginia Synod will preach. He comes to hs in the interest of the Presbyterian Progressive Program. Let every member be on hand.

It is expected at the Sunday night union services at the Methodist church that Mr Allen will present "World Conditions" through stereoptican slides. It will be a treat for us all.

Remember next Sunday morning is the set-time for turning in "our self-Denial for Foreign Missions." The self denial offering of the Ladies Missionary society last week is a distinct challenge to the rest of the church membership to do their very utmost for this great Cause. Let us give until we are proud of our offering to Foreign Missions.

A. M. Tressel, Deputy Revenue Collector, will be at Marlinton on Friday, February 27, to assist any one in filing income tax reports.

Rev. L. B. Franck will preach at Clover Lick Sunday Feb. 29th at 7:30 p. m.

Dr. F. C. Allen returned on Wednesday from a trip to Baltimore and Washington. He reports a heavy snow in the East on Tuesday.

NEWS CULLINGS FROM WEST VIRGINIA

Charleston.—Inheritance taxes in the sum of $516.45 were collected by the state tax commissioner from the estate of John Thiel, late of Marshall county, and $284 from the estate of V. N. Jones, of Tyler county.

Wheeling.—Judge Robinson refused to sustain a demurrer interposed by attorneys for George P. Morris, indicted here in connection with the failure of the Home Builders' Union and the case was set for trial January 28 in Ohio county criminal court.

Charleston.—Thirty-two fatal and 2,009 non-fatal injuries to workmen in West Virginia industries were reported in December to the compensation department; 25 of the fatalities occured in coal mining districts. The largest number of non-fatal injuries occurred in metal working industries, the total being 772.

Clarksburg.—Federal agents swooped down upon a counterfeiting den in the Glen Elk section of the city, arrested two men who were jailed and confiscated a complete counterfeiting outfit, which had been turning out spurious $5 and $1 bills. The identity of the prisoners is unknown and they refused to give their names.

Charleston.—A little girl, 11 years old, who has been at the Davis Child Shelter for sometime, was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Tyree, of Huntington. Mr. Tyree is a deputy state tax collector. He visited the shelter and was attracted by the little girl. He returned with Mrs. Tyree and they decided to take the child to their home in Huntington.

Martinsburg.—The West Virginia State Horticultural Society, upon opening its twenty-seventh annual meeting here, went on record as favoring the inspection of apples, peaches and other fruits grown in this state at their various points of shipment, as a means of relieving the growers of responsibility for the condition of such fruit when placed on the market.

Charleston.—An attempt by the police department to break up the practoce of small boys in the east end and other sections of the city of stealing milk and fruit, etc., from refrigerators, was inaugurated and resulted in the arrest of Lee Stamper, who raided refrigerators in Arlington Court and Maple Terrace, and drew a 10-day jail sentence in Police Court.

Charleston.—Dr. E. D. Stephenson, president of the State Board of Control, announced the letting of contracts for beef or the various state institutions for the first three months of 1920 The average price paid was about two cents a pound above the contract price three months ago. The total amount of beef purchased was about 90,000 pounds, or 30,000 pounds a month.

Charleston.—Writ of error and supersedeas were granted by the Supreme Court of Appeals in the suit of Florence Helm versus the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Company from Brooke county, the defendant being the petitioner. Damages were given the plaintiff in the Circuit Court because of an explosion in her home in February, 1918, after lighting a gas stove.

Williamson.—The powder magazine of the Randolph mine in the suburb of Williamsport blew up. James Childers, the mine foreman, who was near the magazine when it exploded, was killed and another employe was seriously hurt. The cause of the explosion has not been determined and the loss is said to be heavy. The explosion shook the town and windows were broken.

Charleston.—J. W. Alderson, 67, of Hinton, former member of the West Virginia Legislature, representing Summers county, was killed by being thrown from a horse. He had been on a mountain near Belleport reservoir, and returning home was thrown from his horse, and his skull fractured. He died shortly afterwards. He was a member of the Legislature from 1914 to 1916.

Charleston.—The first arrest for violation of the health ordinance since it was made known that the administration would no longer tolerate the keeping of hogs within the corporate limits of the city came when A. J. Holden who is said to be maintaining a number of porkers in sixth street, was taken on that charge. He appeared in police court and Judge W. W. Wertz placed the case on the open docket, pending the removal of the hogs from the city.

Charleston.—A fund of $5,000 for investment, the proceeds to be given annually to the student submitting the best treatise on a public question, has been donated to the West Virginia University by James F. Brown, of Charleston. Announcement of the gift came in a letter, received by M. P. Shawkey, president of the State Board of Education, from Frank B. Trotter, president of the university. The subjects upon which the students will write will be specified by Mr. Brown and the university authorities will have charge of making the award.

Wheeling.—The jury in Circuit Court returned a verdict for the defendant, in the $1,500 suit styled Auto Funeral Service Company against Brice B. Sloan. It was alleged by the plaintiff that the defendant ran his automobile into one of their cars some time ago in the out-the-pike section, badly damaging the machine. The case was tried before Judge J. B. Somerville.

Wheeling.—It was announced at the Board of Education meeting by Robert H. McKee, the well-known and popular representative from Madison district, that Madison school is the largest in the state, having an enrollment of 1,040 students. Mr. McKee also incidentally stated that there were more than 10,000 books taken from the Wheeling Public Library by readers last month.

Charleston.—Dr. J. M. Williamson, treasurer of the State Board of Control, resigned his position on the board several months ago and does not seek reappointment, according to a statement made by Governor John J. Cornwell. His resignation is effective March 1. Dr. Williamson was formerly mayor of Moundsville, and was appointed by Governor Hatfield in 1913. His successor has not yet been named by the governor.

Charleston.—Attorney General E. T. England said that he and associate counsel will appear before the United States Supreme Court at Washington to present briefs and petitions in the two cases in which Pennsylvania and Ohio are to ask that the Steptoe law, passed by the West Virginia Legislature, requiring gas companies to furnish consumers in the state with gas before piping it outside, be declared unconstitutional.

Wheeling.—Health officers in a score of cities are searching for men who attended a meeting of railway trainmen in Baltimore recently, as the result of the discovery of several cases of small pox among the visitors. Dr. C. Hampson Jones, commissioner of health of Baltimore, has sent special delivery letters to the health officers of cities from which delegates came to the meeting. Parkersburg and Grafton were among them.

Morgantown. — Governor John J. Cornwell roundly scored the radical elements of the country here when he addressed one of the greatest crowds of farmers and towns people at commencement hall that this city has ever had. He made a stirring plea for the farmers of West Virginia and the country as a whole to realize that they can no longer merrily produce corn, oats and potatoes but that they are a vital part of the nation and that they must educate themselves in the problems of the day in order that they may intelligently carry on their work as balance wheels of our national machinery.

Charleston.—The total value of all high school property in West Virginia at the beginning of the present school year was $7,984,152, according to the annual report of L. L. Friend, state supervisor of high schools, this representing an increase of nearly $500,000 more than the previous year. The cost of maintaining these schools during the period was $5,182,472, of which $938,547 was expended in salaries to 1,015 teachers, of whom 334 were men and 681 women. The per capita cost of high school education in the state last year, based on a total enrollment of 16,168, was $73.13. Of the total enrollment 6,559 were boys and 9,609 girls.

Charleston.—Between $200,000 and $350,000 a day will be added to the cost of running the mines in Northern West Virginia alone, under the 14 per cent increase, according to figures compiled by the Northern West Virginia Coal Operators' Association. The increase, which sounds small, will entail a heavy expense on all operations which is not apparent at first. It means, it is estimated, that the additional expense to coal operators in Northern West Virginia alone, because of the fourteen per cent increase, will reach from $8,000,000 to $9,000,000 a year over and above present expenses, none of which can, of course, be added to the price of coal.

Morgantown.—Representatives of 38 counties of West Virginia voted here to affiliate the West Virginia Federation of Farm Bureau with the American Bureau Federation. The counties represented were: Brooke, Grant, Dodridge, Wood, Marshall, Lincoln, Summers, Webster, Pocahontas, Randolph, Kanawha, Hardy, Marion, Morgan, Braxton, Greenbrier, Ritchie, Monroe, Jackson, Taylor, Hampshire, Wayne, Mineral, Pleasants, Ohio, Roan, Jefferson, Barbour, Gilmer, Berkeley, Upshur, Lewis, Putnam, Mercer, Raleigh, Monongalia, Harrison and Hancock. Six hundred farmers have been attending the Farmers' week meetings which closed here with an address by Governor John J. Cornwell.

Elkins.—A desperate attempt on the life of Coleman Stalnaker, a constable who has been very active in the enforcement of the prohibition laws, was made when a bomb or other high explosive was set off at the front door of his home on First street. The concussion was so severe that the front porch was wrecked, the plastering blown from the front rooms and almost every window in the house broken. All the windows in St. Brenden's Catholic school across the street were broken, as well as many in almost every house in the block.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the People of Pocahontas Co.:

To you, friends, I come with a very important message that is of vital importance to you.

IN MEMORIAM

Died at her home in Huntersville, February 17, 1920, Opal Jaunita McComb, eldest daughter of Ida B. and H. M. McComb, aged 22 yrs. 9 months and 7 days.

Opal lay sick for about three months before her death, so intense was her suffering and so vain the hopes of her recovery that the many anxious friends by the bedside were almost glad when her release came.

The passing away of Opal removes from our community one of its best and brightest young girls, she was not only loved by her parents but the bright face and her gentle nature had won the love of all who knew her, this was evidenced by the beautiful floral offerings and the number of friends who followed her weeping, to her last resting place.

Only those who have passed through similar bereavement can know how deep the shadows fall upon the house where she once lived.

Opal joined the Presbyterian Church when Mr. Rashall was pastor, being then quite young but she remained faithful unto the end. A touching incident was the little boys and girls of her Sunday School class who carried flowers as the last tribute of love and respect for their teacher.

Strange as it seems to me that a life so full of hope and promise should be cut off in the very beginning but the Loving Father doeth all things well.

May God's tender consolation and strengthening grace be daily found in the broken hearts and may her father, mother, brothers and sisters all be led by her hand to that home where Opal has gone.

Her Schoolmate,
Lucille Carey

VOL. XL NO 8 | MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA; OCTOBER 6, 1921 | $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

BIG FIRE IN MARLINTON

Big Warehouse of Marlinton Supply Company Burns this morning

About one o'clock this morning, Thursday, the big warehouse of the Marlinton Supply Company, T. D Moore, proprietor, with a big stock of feed, flour, groceries and dry goods, was destroyed by fire. Mr. Moore's dwelling was also greatly damaged. The loss is between twelve and fifteen thousand dollars. Insurance $2,000. The dwelling of J. Luther McNeil was also damaged by fire and water.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but there is suspicion that it might have been set to cover a robbery.

A little before one o'clock Mr. Moore was aroused by the light of his burning store. The alarm was given promptly and the town awakened by the big whistle at the power plant. The hose companies from the Tannery, uptown and downtown came immediately. There was a big water supply from the tanks and the pumps with the big Tannery pumps held in reserve. Three big streams of water soon but the fire under control and saved the big store and warehouses of the Peoples Store and Supply Company, and the nearly dwellings. Fire Chief D. W. Williams and his experienced fire fighters are being highly commended for the effective way in which they handled the situation. Had it not been for a good water supply all the buildings at the west end of the bridge would have been destroyed.

Town council met Monday night, and routine business transacted. The street committee, of which S. B. Wallace is executive officer, has made a particularly good record during the past year in the impoving and maintaining of streets and side walks and putting in new sewerage, considering the amount of money available.

The season has been marked by a general wide spread epidemic of sore throats. The town of Marlinton has had a large number of cases during the past few months. Vaccination against the disease is being generally practiced on the school children, and it is not thought at this time that it will be necessary to suspend the schools. A number of cases of scarlet fever have been reported in the West Union neighborhood, but as yet no cases have appeared in Marlinton.

KILL THE GROUNDHOG

The Groundhog Sunday School is one of Pocahontas County's biggest obstacles in Religious Education. Many of our Schools are closed during the winter months, or perhaps speaking more correctly, are open only a few months during the summer. A plan has been launched to remedy this condition, and we are challenged to push it in our County.

The proposition is as follows:

Any Sunday School in Pocahontas County that will remain open until after Christmas, and hold a Christmas Service, devoting the offering to some charitable purpose, like the Near East Relief, or any other you may choose, and will then convert themselves into a Home Department, having supplies for 1st Quarter in new year ordered in advance for the purpose, and distributing them to each member of the Sunday School, together with Home Department envelopes for record of performances of the duties assigned, and offerings made, for the support of the school, will be recognized by the county as well as the State Association as an Evergreen Sunday School and as having a Home Department.

At the close of March, 1922 on the last Sabbath, the records will be brought to the opening session of the Sunday School and work resumed. Any additional information concerning this plan will be gladly given by your county president. S. N. H.

The Stansberry's closed at Minnehaha, October 2, and took train on Tuesday for Sarasota, Florida, where they will open their hotel October 15. They were accompanied by Julien Lockridge. The Stansberry's are experienced hotel people, and though they arrived late at the Springs they built up a good custom and enjoyed a profitable season. May 7th, will see them back at Minnehaha Springs for a really good season.

The disposal of the calves for the calf club projects will be at Hillsboro on Monday, October 10th, beginning at 2 o'clock p. m. Mr. F. B. Creech, beef specialist of the Extension Department, will be on hand to judge, place and appraise. An invitation is extended to the farmers to come out and learn something about their own game. About a dozen pure bred Hereford calves will be distributed among the boys and girls of the county.

Married, at Edray, Wednesday, September 27, 1921, Dr. Stanley Hays and Miss Gayre Eloise Mann Rev. C. A. Powers, officiating minister. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mann, and a popular school teacher. The groom is from Junior, Barbour county.

CIRCUIT COURT

October Term of the Circuit Court convened on Tuesday morning with Judge Summers H. Sharp on the bench. Tuesday and Wednesday was taken up in hearing criminal cases.

Asa Ryder, aged about 19 years, confessed to stealing an automobile, and was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. One August night at Chautauqua in Marlinton Anderson Barlow found his car missing. The next morning it was found at Dunmore with young Ryder in it.

Granville Madison confessed to breaking and entering R. H. Auldridge's store at Millpoint one night last summer and stealing some store goods. He was sentenced to 2 years in the penitentiary.

In his confession Madison implicated Jim Astin. Astin pleaded not guilty, stood trial, was found guilty and he also was sentenced to 2 years in the penitentiary.

On Wednesday the cases of State against Granville Madison, Ben Syms and Forrest Syms was tried. They were charged with robbing the warehouse of the Clifton Forge Grocery Company at Marlinton. Madison confessed, but the Syms boys stood trial.

As we go to press, we hear the jury returned a verdict guilty against them.

State v Warwick Scott, whiskey case, $50 and three months in jail,

State v Phil Flenner, pistol case, $50 and 6 months.

State v Brown Arbogast, nollied.

CHENEY CONCERT COMPANY

The Cheneys, having made music their life study and profession, have builded a reputation as soloists and artists that is enviable. The title of the "Return Date Party" has been rightfully given them.

Programs of violin, viola, cello, cornet, piano and vocal solos, ensemble numbers, duets and trios of the various instruments; mixed quartets, organ chimes played by entire company, vocal solos with chimes accompaniments; character impersonations, Isish Ballads, National Airs and Folk songs.—Refinement, Humor and Entertainment diversified to produce the best in programs.

This company will appear as the opening number of the High School Lecture Course, Monday night, Oct. 10th, at eight o'clock. Single admission 50 and 75 cents.

Season tickets for the five numbers of the course are on sale at both drug stores. Adult's Season Ticket, $2.00 Young Peoples, $1.25.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. William Perkins, near Marlinton, September 30th, a daughter.

YOU MIGHT MEET A FOOL

On the road at the foot of the rockies is a sign that reads: "Danger—Sharp Curve—You might Meet a Fool." Such a sign is calculated to make a driver sit up and take notice. The latter sees at almost every sharp turn a notice to proceed with caution, or to blow his horn, and comes to be a little impressed by them. He has confidence in his ability to avoid running into another car. But if there is a fool in the other car the efforts of the most skillful driver to escape a collision may be futile.

There would be far fewer automobile accidents if every driver would bear constantly in mind the possibility that there may be a fool ahead, not only on sharp curves, but on stretches of straight road. It is unwise to assume that each car on the highway is in charge of an experienced driver who knows the traffic rules and will obey them. You may think that inasmuch as you are keeping on your side of the road there is no danger in running your car at high speed. But you might meet a fool who will not stick to his side of the road.

The fool whom you might meet is not necessarily another driver. He may be pedestrian. Bearing in mind all the time that there are slowwitted folks in the world, who may be found in all places, and that there is a possibility that you may encounter one, you will not be likely to meet with mishaps as if you took it for granted that all persons are levelheaded and know enough to keep out of harm's way.—Exchange.

Editor of Pocahontas Times:

At least, some of the automobile dealers in your town tell people that as soon as the mail their application for license, they can legally operate their cars on the public highways of this State.

I have read over carefully both our new road laws and the old, that had been in force since 1917, and can find nothing to justify this opinion. Both laws state plainly that both plates must be attached to the car before it can be operated upon the highways. No exception is made in the above mentioned cases.

It seems to me you could do the patrons of your paper and the public a splendid service of stating this fact in your paper.

I am prompted to write this because I find this impression so general. A fellow thinks when he has a dealer's authority for it, it must be correct.

If you wish to read over the new road laws you will find nearly all of the most practical part of it included in sections 75 to 102.

I consider the new road laws an excellent piece of legislation and would be delighted to see it rigidly inforced.

Yours truly,
J. W. R. S.

Hillsboro.

Note:—The tax commission has very wisely ruled that if the purchaser of r new car of a person who has lost his license tag will apply for a tag through a local traffic officer, a receipt will be given him and he can run his car until the proper tag arrives—Editor.

Davis & Elkins beat the W. Va. University freshmen team at Elkins Saturday by a score of 40 to 0. The bright particular star of the game was Clare Haupt, of Marlinton, a freshman at Davis & Elkins. Clare graduated at the Edray District High School last year. Between his second and third years at high school, force of circumstances made it necessary to give the German Empire a trimming, and Clare volunteered for the job and fought with the Marines. Two other stars for Davis & Elkins were Sterl Wooddell and Hull Yeager. These are Marlinton boys, and both of them played on the College team last year. Among those attending the game from Marlinton Satureay were Hubert Slaven, Guy Bambrick, John Besling, Cliv Wooddell, Clark Carter, Cra r Richardson, Arnott Yeager, Mil O'Ferrell, Wm. Rodgers, Arden Ki ingsworth, J. E. Buckley, and E. M. Smith.

WANLESS

Mrs. India Cassell is ill at this time.

The dry season cut our fall pastures short. A small hay, oats and wheat crops; corn is very good: potatoes is a fair crop. Calves sell for seven to twelve dollars a head. Very little work to get at any price; road work has helped out in the county very much this year. We are getting down to mormalcy. We will not mention the sale of other stock as the storyas related is about the same everywhere.

Chestnuts are fair crop for this season.

We heard wit great delight of the prosperity and morals of the people of Stony Bottom. We say Amen! This is no Jona to the last administration. Selah.

We notice from the woolly worm that the black on both ends indicate a hard winter and the most is in front, We would not be surprised as our extremes seem to run together.

Dr. U. H. Hannah, E. H. Williams and Frank Echols were at Charleston last Satrday to talk over things with the State Road Commission, relative to State Highways in Pocahontas County. It seems that the projects from Buckeye to Millpoint, and from Huntersville to Sunset have been ordered built while the project from Sunset to connect with the Greenbank district bond road at Dunmore is under consideration by the Commission.

EDUCATIONAL JOTTINGS

BY COUNTY SUPT. G. D. McNEIL

At last accounts but three teachers were needed to fill the vacancies in the schools of the County. These vacancies are at Spruce, Mt. Zion, and Yew Glade.

The Department of Health seems to have combined with the Department of schools in an effort to compel teachers and school officials to improve conditions about the school buildings. The State proposes to pay a bonus to the districts in which rural schools are brought to certain standards, but these standards are such that they cannot be met without some attention being given to sanitation and school efficiency. The proposed bonus is attractive, and, were our schools standardized, the state would pay about twelve thousand dollars a year to the county, but under present conditions we have but two standardized schools.

In order to merit the hundred-dollar bonus given to second class schools, the school must have a first grade teacher, properly arranged windows containing at least one-sixth of the floor space, and toilets constructed according to requirements of State Department of Health.

Complete explanation of the method of grading whereby the standard of any school is determined was given in The Times of September twenty-second. Each of the four districts have some schools which could be standardized with an outlay of two hundred dollars, and the State would pay the cost of the improvement in about two years, after which the yearly bonus would be clear gain to the district.

The State Education Association meets at Huntington, November 3rd, 4th and 5th. So far, Pocahontas has few enrollments in the Association. Should any teacher desire to attend the Huntington meeting, it will be necessary to get an identification card before the ticket agents will sell the cut rate ticket. The County Superintendent has these cards and issue them to members desiring to attend the meeting.

THE POCAHONTAS TIMES

Entered at the Postoffice at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

CALVIN W. PRICE, Editor.

THURSDAY OCT. 6, 1921

We dug the potatoes and they turned out mighty well considering. On a piece of ground measuring one hundred and forty-four feet by twenty-four feet we raised eighteen bushels. This is a tract about the size of a town lot and the yield was equivalent to about two hundred and twenty-five bushels to the acre. And the yield was uneven. In the center of the patch were many hills that gave up at the rate of six hills to the half bushel and in one instance five hills filled the half bushel. At one end of the patch the water birches on the river bank shaded the ground and there the potatoes were few in the hill and at the other end next to the front yard where the ground was hand spaded and the potatoes planted with great care and labor, they were small and few in the hill. If the patch had been uniform we would have gotten forty four bushels One hill had thirty potatoes in it, large and small, though we do not consider that the best hill by any means. If the patch had held out at both ends with the same sort of growth that occurred in the middle, it would have been equivalent to five hundred and fifty six bushels and one peck to the acre.

May be you do not want to read about potatoes and other things in the garden? Well, see if we care! We got a right to talk about something we are interested in once in awhile, we reckon.

A few centuries ago where we now sit surrounded by all that aggravates and contaminates civilized life, the rude savage bragged about his vegetables that he raised on the same plot of ground that we now potter about upon. We know that for we pick up all manner of tools that he lost while he lived there. But we have been there some time ourselves. We are not sure that we have mentioned it before but the last generation that has appeared upon the scene at our house is the seventh that has lived on that home tract. Be ye also steadfast. Moving does not run in our family. None of them ever got rich there, but at the same time through all the changing scenes of life they have not been sold out entirely, and right now we have good enough credit at the stores to bust a man, for store accounts grow while you sleep, as the saying is, so if we are going to boast may be we had better be about it for tomorrow we may be in the big road.

Of course the great change in landscape has come in the last thirty years in which a large town has been built all around us and brought in many, many good neighbors, and some others that would steal the fillings out of your teeth.

In the dear dead days, now gone beyond recall, (thank Heaven,) we raised what we eat, and eat what we raised, and if the crop failed, we did without. But in those days, there was one piece of ground running along the river bank from the bridge to the mouth of the run, containing about five acres, that we could always count on getting some kind of a crop, no matter what the season. There was not so much of a gamble in that land. It is in that stretch of land that now wield a wicked hoe. The road on one side of the lot and the river on the other. And the mountain, just across the road. It is a great combination. The mountain, wooded, the cleared land sloping sixteen rods to the river flowing behind the fringe of trees. Trees which have such a killing effect on that end of the garden, and which we cannot bring ourselves to cut for the glimpse of the river behind the trees is such a fine sight. One time they said that everyone ought to name his homestead like they do in England, and after much cogitation we named the place. We were reading Bret Harte at that time and he had a word that he used a good deal. A word that is used in the far west from the Spanish. It is the word "falda," or as we would say, "the foot of the mountain." Literally, the place that the level land turns up the mountain side like the hem of a woman's skirt, in the old days when women wore skirts that were skirts. So we called the place where we live at, The Falda, and it is a good name for the place, and someday we are going to tell the rest of the family that the place has done been named. About that time, we were in a large West Virginia city, or at least at large in a West Virginia city, and there met up with an agreeable travelling man who was selling fine stationary, and to promote his trade, we yielded to a momentary impulse to give him an order for expensive stationary, and he took us down for a lot of high priced stationary on which was to be engraved the name of the castle, "The Falda." This he sent in, and shortly after we got back to the falda, here came a letter from the printing house saying that the order had been sent in, out would we please verify the copy? So seeing a way out, we did not answer the letter and that was all of that. It is a good name but the pronunciation is rather uncertain, sounding something like welder.

A good deal of this land is wasted to give room for the house, but enough is left to raise vegetables on, —in size between a garden and a patch,—a little large for a garden and not quite big enough for a patch.

And there is connected with the history of this garden a peculiar case of retribution. In those days, thirty-six years ago, the old place had two miles of the river front, yet the only land that as a boy we ploughed wet was a few furrows in this garden where we toil all summer and the lumps are still there to torment us.

In the five acres that we were speaking about lying between the bridge and the run, we used to get a few loads of corn and a few bushels of wheat, worth not more than a hundred dollars in any one year. But this year there are nine gardens in that stretch of ground, to say nothing of eight houses that take up room. And those were gardens! We estimate that a low price to set on the value of those gardens this year would be twenty-five hundred dollars. Take our effort—it seems to us that it was worth at least five hundred dollars cash money, for the old order changeth, and if there had not been food to eat out of the garden, the seneschal would have sent up-town and bought and bought. So it is a case of root hog or buy. It takes money to travel with a delicatassen.

We hear that in Ireland, that a good supper is a pot full of potatoes set in the exact middle of the table where all can reach and take out and salt. Persons filled up with such a supper feel just as fit as if they had dallied with the whole menu from canteloupe to ice cream

In a former article, we extended ourselves on one of the deadly nightshades, to-wit, tomatoes, until we had no room to speak of other things. The tomato season lasted this year at our house from the garden from the 15th day of July, to the 1st day of October, with a few stray plants still bearing, which is an unusually long season for that uncertain crop. They have finally decided that the tomato is a fruit and it is a good thing for fruit is fruit this year, and that is about the only kind of fruit that is being passed around the table.

Today we desire to take up another member of the nightshade family, and a more deadly one, the potato.

Like the tomato, the vines do not make good forage for stock, and when a potato, or tuber, or internode grows above the ground it turns green and is poisonous. Probably in its wild state all potatoes grew above the ground and were not fit for food, and it is only by growing under the ground that they have become of any use to man. Therefore it has become the custom of many of our best gardeners to bury the potato so deep and to hoe it up so dilligently that it is well nigh smothered and when they excavate the mounds in the fall they find that the crop is not there. We advance the theory that shallow planting is the thing, that is comparatively shallow planting, and that they ought to be hoed up just sufficiently to give tubers a covering from the sun, and that the right amount of earth is indicated when the potatoes crack open the surface of the earth just before they reach their greatest dimensions. In this case some will be exposed and but it is much better than to bury them so deep that the crop is a failure.

In our family some are for digging in the seed potatoes so that the plant expends all its energy in escaping from the earth and it never gets a chance after that for the man with a hoe comes by and covers it up again. These are the dilligent and industrious gardeners, and they have fine looking hills but no big yield. But for us we belong to the school that believes in shallow planting and just for the sake of argument this year in the same ground we tried both ways, and the shallow planting was a great success and the deep careful planting was a failure.

Another thing, some want to drill their potatoes and others have them in hills. We tried that too, and the hills were fine, and the drilled potatoes were about half a crop. So we are ready to assert at this time until we have reason to change that potatoes ought to be planted in rich ground in hills four feet apart each way and planted shallow, that is, about as deep as a good deep planting of corn. And it is no bad idea to work the ground thoroughly after they are planted and before they come up.

We know by experience that potatoes planted this distance apart in hills will soon cover the surface of the earth with vines so thoroughly that there will not be room to walk between the rows, much less do any cultivation without moving and disturbing the vines to a very considerable extent. So the weeds and grass is bound to take them if your land is weedy.

And we lay it down that without vines you are not going to have potatoes.

When you plant potatoes you do the same thing as when you plant a willow tree by sticking a branch in the soil. The piece of potato that you put under ground has a bud on it called an eye. From this bud a branch grows that at first feeds on the starch and other stuff that is in the potato and finally takes root and the green leaves appear above the top of the ground. And between the root and the leaves, and under ground if planted right, the vine puts footh branches which thicken at the ends and become tubers or potatoes, and these grow small or large according to the chances or the season, freedom from disease, and whether the vines are plentifully supplid with carbonic gas. They say that they are going to grow potatoes as big as pumpkins with carbonic gas and the Germans since the war ceased have become so expert in the use of poison gas that they now have great fields piped for this gas with which they have raised the greatest crops ever seen on the face of the earth. They feed the gas to the plant as it needs it.

The idea is to increase the carbon, the main solid constituent of plant life. The presence of an adequate supply of carbon is indicated in the growing crop by deep rich green in the leaves, or what we call good color. If this color be absent the poorest farmer knows that the plant will not yield.

It is not likely that the time will come when the fields in these delectable mountains will be piped in squares below the plowline to let gas out at each hill as needed, so the thing to do is to use natural means of carbon fertilization. One scientist has said that the volume of carbon in the air greatly exceeds all that is stored in the earth in shape of coal or contained in the vegetable matter growing upon the surface of the earth. And this carbon is present in the purest mountain air, to say nothing of such coal burning centers as Grafton and Ronceverte where you can chew it out of the air.

If then the soil is fecund or as we say fertile, there is a constant evaporation of carbonic acid gas which the leaves of the plant take up and retain the carbon and breath out the useless vapor, and this feeds the grain, fruit, seed, or tuber and there is something at the end of the season to harvest.

In our garden with the intensive cultivation, there is only one way to supply the plant with adequate quantities of gas, and that is to stir the surface of the soil so that it is free from incrustation. Take the cabbage with its immense growth. There is but one rule and that is to work the ground every day that the soil is dry enough. Of course rain prevents incrustation, and hence the proverb, more rain more rest.

If the top of the soil is loose the under surface carbonic acid gas rises freely towards the leaves and feeds the plant. In the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, is a statement that experiments show that in a period of seventy-eight houre that three times the amount of gas was emitted from a surface continually broken, as was given off from an incrusted surface.

So you see there is a catch in it. It means that the ground must be worked by the sweat of your face, and that all the good that scientists can do is to tell you to grow callouses on your hands with a hoe handle and and you will have a good crop.

But mark the observation there must be some sort of life or humous in the soil or this gas will not be given off and this brings us to the defense of the weed.

We are for the weedy garden in the fall and consider all other kinds to be as whited sepulchres. Work your garden twenty or thirty times until the crop is raised and then let it go down into winter with a heavy growth of weeds on it. Fall is the time for weeds my fellow citizens and it covers the earth as a mantle and insures a good crop for another year. It is all right to sow rye or wheat and it looks mighty pretty when you get a good stand and the best gardeners use this plan, but after they have got it done they have a poor imitation of nature's way of keeping life and health in the soil. They go to great trouble to make the garden as bare as a tennis court in fall and the next year being dilligent they have to build it up again, whereas if they would let the weeds take it, they would have, with one tenth the trouble and expense, a better garden plot for the next year. In today already walks tomorrow. When you get a whaling big crop off of a bit of ground let the warm fall days provide a fit and proper covering to keep the earth alive for another year.

We know gardeners who would as soon see a snake in the garden as a weed, but we belong to the school that holds that weeds ere necessary to the life of the soil, for you have either got to have weeds to keep life in the ground, or some expensive equivalent.

Of all the weeds in the garden we prefer the fall grass, a sort of mysterious growth that mats on the ground and looks like it would make a good crop of hay. This year it has taken the place, and when the potatoes came to be dug, it was like taking them out from under the sod. But the potatoes were there, and the grass indicated along with the other weeds that it was just as good or better for another crop next year.

Another thing that we want to say about potatoes while we have this space, for we may not get another crack at the subject any ways soon, and that is that in this country the early potatoes do much better than late potatoes. And we have a theory about this, and that is that it is the nature of the crop, and that the potatoes bolong to the forepart of the season. Look at the trees. Some will put forth leaves at one time and and others much later, and if man tried to change the season for a tree, he would probably kill it. Potatoes are nothing but a kind of wood. And in the spring they are going to grow whether they are in the barrel or in the ground. Plant potatoes late and you have a bit of wood that has either been growing in a sickly manner or been gradually starved by exposure to the air. It is no wonder that it is attacked by disease. It was half dead when planted.

It might be that potatoes that have been carefully kept in cold storage would be in a healthy condition to plant, but the chances are that the potatoes that are kept around the average house will deteriorate with every warm day until they are put in the ground to reproduce. If a potato is left in the ground over winter it will come up at a certain time early in the season and that is the natural season for potatoes.

Order Of Publication

State of West Virginia:

At Rules held in the Clerk's office of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County on Monday, the 5th day of September, 1921, the following order was entered:

State of West Virginia Plaintiff
vs In Chancery
John Smith and Ben Smith Defendants

The object of the above entitled suit is to have a certain automobile, to wit, a Ford touring car, Motor Number 405771, West Virginia license number 40717, declared a common and public nuisance and abated as such for the reason that the said automobile has been used to bring and carry excessive quantities of intoxicating liquors into this State and from one place to another within this State, in violation of the provisions of the prohibition laws of this State; and to have an order entered in said proceeding, directing the Sheriff of this County to sell said automobile at public auction and to pay the fund, arising therefrom, into the general school fund of this State and for general relief. And it appearing by affidavit filed in this cause, that John Smith is a nonresident of this State, it is ordered that he do appear here within one month after the date of the first publication hereof and do what is necessary to protect his interests in this suit.

A Copy, Teste:
D. C. Adkison, Clerk.
A. P. Edgar, Attorney.

WASHINGTON LETTER

After a month's unearned holiday, Congress is again in session with practically all its important work yet to be done, and President Harding, refreshed by new golfing and cruising experiences, has returned from his latest vacation.

The tax revision bill as rewritten by the Senate is just reported in that body and will be the subject of long debate while business feverishly waits. The Republican campaign promise to reduce taxes, therefore, has not been kept, and, according to Senator Smoot (Rep., Utah,) an authority on taxation, will not and cannot be kept. The tax bill in its present shape, is no more satisfactory than it was as it passed the House and is certain of the opposition of some Republican Senators.

By general consent the tariff bill, through which the Republicans were going to restore prosperity at once, must wait perhaps until the very last According to the newspaper recognized here as President Harding's mouthpiece, many returning Congressmen are of the opinion it ought to be passed up altogether or at least until the disarmament conference is over. This economic monstrosity, known as the Fordney Tariff bill, has been riddled by House and Senate Republicans as well as Democrats until it will no more hold water than a seive, and yet enough blind partisans were found in the House to pass it. It is not satisfactory to anyone except the profiteering big manufacturers. Bankers and other business men oppose it and the greatest merchant perhaps in the world, the head of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, has shown that the "American valuation" clause would destroy what little foreign trade there is left in merchandise.

Among the big measures yet to be acted upon is the war loan funding bill introduced by Senator Penrose, which empowers the Secretary of the Treasury to do anythiug he pleases with $10,000,000,000 foreign loans and to be the sole jndge of the transactions he may enter into in funding the debt This, as has been pointed out by Senator McKellar (Dem., Tenn.,) and Senator Underwood, the Democratic Senate leader, is an unprecedented and unwarranted grant of power which no one man ought to have or ought to be willing to accept. It is the most sinister and the most dangerous measure ever introduced in any session of Congress and is sure to result in acrimonious debate, but the Republicans are in an arbitrary, stiff-necked mood and ready and willing to employ the steam roller whenever it becomes necessary to override the minority.

The railroad funding bill, the Panama tolls bill and the maternity bill are all measures which await action and are provocative of debate.

The separate peace treaty with Germany, which is sure to create divisions in the votes of both parties, will have precedence probably, and it is predicted that it will be fought as bitterly by the Bitter enders as was the peace treaty of Versailles.

In the meantime six million persons are idle and the American troops are still on the Rhine.

It would seem, therefore, that we are yet a long ways from normalcy.

WILLIAM H. McCLOUD

William H. McCloud died at his home near Marlinton September 23, 1921, of organic heart trouble. He had been in good health. When he went to bed he said he had a slight pain in his breast, but he went to sleep and slept until about two o'clock when he made a slight noise which aroused his wife. She called him but he did not answer; she became frightened and awoke the eldest daughter and they did everything they could think of but could not arouse him. He never got his breath after his wife first heard him, nor awoke out of sleep nor struggled or made a move, but was gone in the twinkling of an eye.

He was born near Cloverlick February 23, 1864, and died September 23, 1921. aged 57 years and 7 months. He is the son of Stephen and Nancy McCloud. His brothers are Clark McCloud and Jim McCloud; his sister is Mrs. Jim Bird.

He was married to Mary Irvine to whom were born tvelve children—Bernard, of Ohio; Mrs. Virgil Gibbert, Spring Creek; Edward, Slaty Fork; Mrs. Mamie Dilley, Adrian; George, of Warwick, and seven unmarried—Eva, John, Lena, Grace, Goldie Norman and Jessie.

He believed in the Dunkard church but never united with it. He was a good neighbor and was liked by all. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

A loving one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled
A place is vacant in our home
That never can be fillad.

God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon his love has given.
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in heaven.

THE WOMAN'S CHANCE

The disgraceful orgies of some of our celebrated moving picture stars, which are now being described in newspapers all over the country, will not impress the public with a high standard of female morals in the screen craft.

The present age is distinctly one of opportunity, possibility and responsibility for the woman. Will she make good or prove a failure? If she gravitates to the level of her men companions she will no longer have a just contention over a double standard of morals, and race degeneracy will take on more than double speed and race extinction become a certainty. If she maintains her moral standard and aids and encourages man in his upward struggle, she will save the race.

During the last half century, the double standard of property rights, industrial opportunities, educational advantages, political rights and religious privileges have been crumbling under the irresistible tread of human progress. When none of these rights and privileges were hers, woman was powerless to help bring about a single standard of morals. The possibility and power has now come and the women of the next generation will have to prove themselves equal to their task or accept the responsibility for its failure.

It takes two to play the game of the social vices and evils. Young men usually have sense. They know right from wrong. They respect and admire the woman who bravely defends the truth.—U. S. Public Health Service.

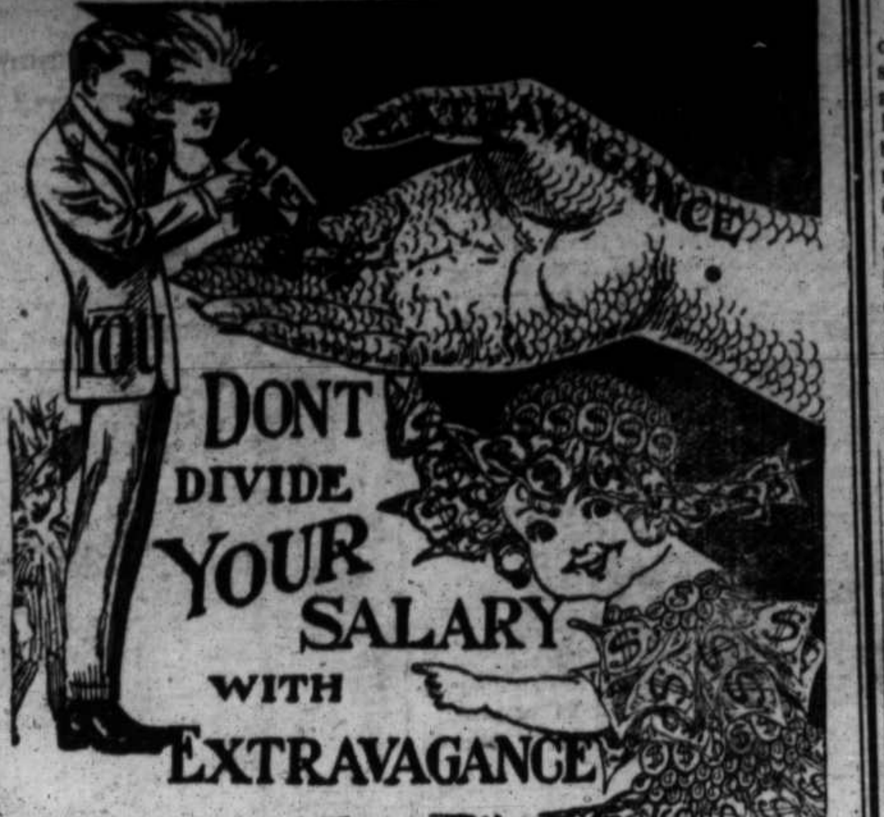
FOR SALE: Registered Hampshire bucks, yearlings and February lambs. See B. P. Welford & Son, Hillsboro, W. Va.



Supose you take time to figure out what became of your last month's salary. How much of it was banked and how much of it passed out of your hands for things you could have done without?

All of the "Captains of Industry" we read about today are men who early in life learned to bank their money instead of spending it foolishly.

Saving, like spending, is a habit, and right now is the time for you to trade a bad one for a good one.

Beard A dinner was served in her honor at the noon hour, those present were her only living son, M. L Beard, her only two living first cousins, Mrs Nannie Beard and M. J. McNeel, and her life long friend, Mrs. Wm. H Auldridge.

In the afternoon a reception from two to five was given by Mrs. Beard to her grandmother, at which a number of friends and relatives were invited. Delightful refreshments were served in the spacious parlor of the home, after which a cake, beautifully decorrated with ninety candles was brought in and cut by the guests The candles were lighted by Mrs Beard's son, M. L. Beard, a grand daughter, Mrs. J. C. Johnson, and a great grand daughter, little Miss Martha Beard, a daughter of the host, three generations, which with the guest of honor, made four generations of direct descendants present together and at the same time on this happy occasion. The guests were entertained with old time familiar songs and music on piano by Miss Dyce Smith and Mrs. Johnson.

Those present were M. L. Beard, Mrs. Nannie Beard, M. J. McNeel. Mrs. W. H Auldridge, Mrs J. C Johnson, Mrs. H. W. McNeel, Mrs W M Irvine, Mrs. Henry Beard, Mrs Geo. P Edgar, Mrs. J. K. Marshall, Miss Minnie Beard, Mrs. Lanty Mc Neel, Mrs. Harry Harper, Mrs. T S McNeel, Mrs. R H Auldridge, Miss Dice Smith, Mrs. J W R Smith, and Mrs A C Stillwell.

Mrs Beard is a remarkable woman for her age—ninety years young. She attends all the services of her beloved church, reads the daily newspapers and takes an active interest in all the affairs of the neighborhood and country.

The evangelistic services conducted at the Presbyterian church by Rev J McD A Lacy will continue this week and close on Sunday night. Mr. Lacy is preaching with great power. and great interest is manifested by the large crowds which attend every night.

Rev. J C Johnson and M L Beard, delegates from Oak Grove church attended the meeting of Synod of West Virginia at Lewisburg on Wednesday.

A large crowd attended the distribution of the Hereford calves to the boys and girls of this county at Twin Maples, the stock farm of F P Kidd last Monday at which twelve beautiful heifer calves were distributed to twelve boys and girls of the county. Among those from a distance were Mr. Creech of the West Virginia University, Dr. U H. Hannah, W. H. Barlow, J. A. Young. Pat Gay, A. C. Barlow, Jacob Cogar, L V Gay, F K. Moore, Van Buren Hevener, Calvin W. Price and Neal Nottingham.

DURBIN

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Hammen of Cass, were visitors at Dr. C. B. Collins' over Sunday.

Miss Calhoun. one of Durbin's teachers, is at Mrs. Laura Livesay's for the winter.

On account of the furnace our school will not commence for two or three weeks.

The citizens of the town of Durbin have built 260 feet of cement side walk which improves our town wonderfully.

The Durbin Mercantile Co. have built a porch to their store building

T. L. Williams, of Hortsville, Pa., is in town. Mr. Williams says he likes Pennsylvania fine. He expects to sell his farm near Greenbank.

O. G. Arbogast and Carl Arbogast, of Arbovale, passed through Durbin on their return from a visit through Pennsylvania and the western counties of this state.

R. C Vanosdale has opened a restaurant in the grocery store in the Burner building, known as the Star Restaurant.

Robert Kramer got two fingers mashed at tannery Monday

Among the sick are Mrs. C. R Beard, Mrs. Howard Burner and Ed Burner. All are improving.

Asa Wright from Dodridge county, is moving in the Curtis house; Albert Ash, of Burner, is moving in the Wank house, and Berlin Townsend is moving in the I. O. O. F. building.

G. W. Cochran invited his neighbors to an old fashioned brush cutting last week. About 16 men came and downed a lot of brush. Chicken, cake and other good things to eat, and all enjoyed themselves in a good old fashioned way.

G. W. Sharp, our State Game Warden, passed through our town last week on his way to Elkins and other points west.

Dave Gragg, the mill man from Hosterman reports not enough water to make steam for a potato mill and he has shut down till rain comes.

MARLINTON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. Harvey H. Orr, Pastor.
11:00 a. m. Sermon—"How do you hear?"
6:45 p. m Christian Endeavor.
7:30 Sermon—"What Elijah Learned."

At a meeting last Thursday afternoon, the women elected the following officers for the Woman's Auxilliary of the Presbyterian Church. President, Miss Virgie Sydenstricker; Vice president, Mrs. Andrew Price; secretary, Mrs S N Hench; Treasurer, Mrs Burton Wilson. The organization is yet to be perfected but with this good start there is no fear as to the outcome.

The Cheney Concert Company entertained a good audience at the High School on Monday night. This is the first number of the Lyceum course under the auspices of the Edray District High School and it was a particularly strong and pleasing number.

In token of his appreciation of the efforts of the Volunteer Fire Department in saving his store and warehouses in the big fire last Thursday morning, Ira D. Brill, proprietor of the Peoples Store and Supply Company, presented a check for $50. to Fire Chief Darley W. Williams, for the members of the Department.

Born, to Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Wyand, Thursday, October 6, 1921, a daughter.

Fire Notice

As you have been apprised through the Times and other sources of the extreme misfortune that I met at midnight of the 6th of October, loosing through fire my store houses and entire stock of goods, residence, and near whole destruction of household equipment, and practically no insurance to cover my losses, I request that all those who owe me on open account or otherwise will comeforward and settle at once. I am in extreme need of this money, as my resources consists almost entire of these outstanding accounts. My friends who have not this money at hand might borrow to pay me as I have done in so many cases to accomodate them. Thanking you for your past patronage and pleasant business relations, I am

Yours respectfully,
T. D. MOORE, Propr.,
Marlinton Supply Co.

P S On the part of myself and my wife I wish to express our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the many acts os kindness on the part of our friends since our loss, to the Volunteer Fire Department for their efforts on the night of the fire.

Notice

All claims due the Marlinton & Elk Mutual Telephone Company has been placed in the hands of A. E. Smith for collection. Now some have paid and some have not paid for two or three years, and yet expect service. It is thoroughly understood that the rule of the company is that you pay as long as you are hooked to the line and when you are not getting satisfactory service you are at once to sever from the line and pay up back dues. Now we are forced to collect or we will be disconnected from the switchboard. It is up to you whether we have a telephone line service or not Let us all work together. Don't say, I will not pay unless I get good service. Who is going to work for nothing? If you want the job come on: you are the fellow we are looking for.

Mr. Smith will treat you right. He will give you ten day's notice to come forward and pay your dues, or will give you 4 months time by you giving your note with interest and good security so we can take the note to the bank and get the money. What could be fairer than this. I am your friend your friend and you can't help but say it. You have elected me against my protest as the one to see that our line is kept up. Now do come along and help me to make it a line that is a credit to our county. We think that everyone will see this in the right light and pay their account in the specified time. No other company will keep you on without pay, neither can this one exist much longer without pay. So don't expect James Gibson and a few others that have paid in advance to keep the line up for you when you get the same service. Now we are expecting a good report from Mr. Smith in a few days.

Thanking you in advance for coop-erating with us, I remain yours very respectfully,

L. D SHARP.

TRESPASS NOTICE

All persons are notified not to trespass in any way on the land of Biron Boggs, passing through, hunting or fishing on the land where James Hedrick lives.

VOL. XL NO 12 | MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA; NOVEMBER 3. 1921 | $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION

CLERK POST OFFICE

Place of Employment, Marlinton, W. Va.

Place of Examination, Marlinton, W. Va.

Date of Examination, November 19, 1921.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces that on the date and at the place named above an open competive examination will be held for the position of clerk in the post office at the place first specified.

It is expected that a village carrier will be appointed in the delivery service by selection from the register established as a result of this examination.

From the eligibles resulting from this examination it is expected that that certificates will be made to fill existing and future vacancies in the position of clerk. Should city delivery be established at the office for which this examination is held during the life of the register resulting from this examination, the register may be used for regular or substitute carrier appointments, in the discretion of the department, or a new examination may be held, in which latter event the register from the new examination will be combined with the existing clerk register, including those eligibles who may have declined appointment as substitute clerks.

Salaries.—Clerks in the offices of the first and second classes are divided into five grades, the salaries of which are $1,400, $1,500, $1,600, $1,700, and $1,800 per annum, respectively. Clerks will be promoted successively, after one year's satisfactory service in each grade to the next higher grade until they reach the fifth grade, salary $1,800 per annum. Promotions will be made at the beginning of the quarter following the expiration of a year's satisfactory service in the next lower grade. Clerks of the highest grade are eligible for promotion to the supervisory positions in their respective offices.

Sex.—All citizens of the United States who meet the requirements, both men and women, may enter this examination; appointing officers, however, have the legal right to specify the sex desired in requesting the certification of eligibles.

Unless they are the wives of soldiers, sailors, or marines, serving in the recent war, or of injured soldiers, sailors, or marines who themselves are not qualified for any position, married women will not be examined, even though they are separated from their husbands and are supporting themselves.

Age.—Applicants must have reached their eighteenth but not their forty-fifth birthday on the date of the examination. Age limits do not apply to persons entitled to preference because of military or naval service. Eligibles resulting from this examination who were under 21 years of age on the date of the examination will not be certified for filling vacancies in the position of assistant postmaster.

Retirement.—To be entitled to retirement with an annuity, employees must have reached the retirement age and have served fifteen years. The retirement age for mechanics and for post-office clerks and carriers 65 years, for rail-way mail clerks 62 years, and for other positions 70 years.

Physical requirements.—Applicants, both male and female, must measure not less than 5 feet 4 inches in height in bare feet. No male applicant who passes the examination will be eligible for appointment who does not weigh at least 125 pounds without overcoat and hat. The height and weight requirements are omitted, however, in the case of men entitled to preference because of military or naval service. It will be inadvisable for other applicants whose normal weight is less than 125 pounds to enter the examination.

The Post Office Department has advised the Commission that no person who has any of the following named physical defects will be appointed as clerk in the Post Office Service: Hunchback; defective hearing, sight, or speech; blindness in one or both eyes; asthma, if recurrent; loss of arm, hand, leg, or foot; seriously crippled arms, hands, feet, or legs; fallen or misplaced arch of foot; harnia (rupture); congenital weakness of the abdominal wall or such weakness caused by wound or operation. Other physical defects may debar persons from this examination when in the judgment of the Commission such defects would render them unfit to perform the duties of the position for which the examination is held. Physical requirements may be omitted under certain conditions in the case of injured soldiers, sailors, and marines.

Subjects and weights.—Competitors will be examined in the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated:

Subjects.

1. Spelling (twenty words of average difficulty in common use.) 10 weights.
2. Penmanship (the handwriting of the competitor in the subject of copying from plain copy will be considered with special reference to the elements of legibility, rapidity, neatness, general appearance, etc), 20 weights.
3. Copying from plain copy (a simple test in copying accurately a few printed lines in the competitor's hand writing), 20 weights.
4. Letter writing (a letter of between 100 and 125 words on some subject of general interest. Competitors may select either of two subjects given), 20 weights.
5. Arithmetic (simple tests in addition, subtraction, multiplication, division, common and decimal fractions, ordinary weights and measures U. S. money, and simple percentage), 30 weights.

Total - - - 100 weights.

Photographs.—Applicants must submit to the examiner on the day of the examination their photographs, taken within two years, securely pasted in the space provided on the admission cards sent them after their applications are filed. Proofs or group photographs will not be accepted. Photographs will not be returned to applicants.

Applications.—For application blank (Form 2327) address, Local Secretary, Board of Civil Service Examiners, Marlinton, W. Va., post office or the district secretary at the address below.

No application will be accepted unless properly executed and filed with the district secretary in time for him to arrange for the examination. The medical certificate attached to the application form should not be executed.

Preference.—Applicants entitled to preference because of military or naval service should attach to their applications their original discharge, or a photostat or certified copy thereof, or their official record of service, which will be returned after inspection.

Secretary, Fourth Civil-Service District,
Address, Old Land Office Building, Washington, D. C.

WATTERSON IN AN ADIEU

Col. Henry Watterson, veteran journalist, former editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal and during the Civil War publisher of the Chattanooga Rebel, has written a characteristic letter to the committee in charge of the forthcoming reunion of the United Confederate Veteran in which he expressed regret at not being able to attend.

"I wish it were possible for me to attend the coming Confederate reunion. It is not possible, so you must take the will for the deed.

Perhaps it is as well that I may not look upon the thin gray line soon to disappear forever from the scenes of this world, for it might put too great a strain upon an old man's tenderest sensibilities.

"My love to the old boys. It cannot be long when when we shall meet on that beautiful shore, and when we meet, be sure the bonnie Blue Flag will be flying at the fore, and the bands will be playing Dixie on parade, whilst the pretty girls will be distributing the Chatanooga Rebel to groups of ragged red-nosed angels who have not forgotten the rebel yell."

N. C. Cummings, of the State Tax Department, was in Marlinton last week, giving information about the gross sales tax law. This law went into effect July 1. If you do $10,000 worth of business a year, a report must be made. A tax of $2 a thousand is charged on all business in excess of ten thousand dollars. Mr. Cummings left a supply of blanks at the Bank of Marlinton.

Carl Meadows is home from the army.

"YOUR TEETH"

Filling Materials

By Rhea Proctor McGee, D. D. S. M. D., Editor "Oral Hygiene"

Who invented fillings for teeth and what the first fillings were made of will always remain a mystery.

We know that this work has been done from ancient times, but in recent years there has been such an alarming increase in caries (decay of the teeth) that the prevention of decay and the repair of carious teeth has become an important subject to everyone.

There are three general classes of filling materials; plastics, silicates and metals.

The plastics are the various forms of dental cements and guttapercha.

The silicates are a form of translucent cement that is an imitation porcelain. The colors of the teeth can be matched accurately and this material will last well, preserving the tooth and avoiding unsightly disfigurement that would be present if a metal were used in the front of the mouth in a large cavity.

The metals used as filling materials are gold and amalgam which is principally silver.

Tin and platinum were used for some years but they are now obsolete. A metal is used where there is a great strain on the filling.

Amalgam, which is an alloy of silver made into a paste with mercury, is the most widely used filling in the world. It has done splendid service and is used is those cavities where appearance is a secondary consideration.

Gold is considered the most permanent of the fillings. There are two ways of using gold; one is by malleting pure gold foil into the cavity and thus making the filling in the tooth that it is to protect, the other way is to make the filling outside the mouth from a very accurate wax pattern of the cavity. This is the most modern method and is called an inlay.

NEAR EAST RELIEF

Charleston, W. Va.—Dr. William E. Smith, State Director of Near East Relief, with headquarters in Charleston, has just returned from Morgantown, where at the invitation of Mr. Nat T. Frame, Director of Agricultural Extension, he spoke to the officers and members of his staff. This is the report brought back to Charleston "I never looked on a fairer set of people than those present at that meeting. Uncle Sam has nothing to fear as to the work of farmers and results from such as these."

Director Frame and his entire staff were interested in West Virginia's Grain Campaign and executive secretary, Mr. J. B. McLaughlin, of the Farm Bureau Federation, was appointed to represent the Agricultural Division in the Near East and incidentally to get its grain proposition over.

Farmers, take notice, get ready for your call. The kiddie is crying for food and we can not wait.

They say a bushel of grain will put ten pounds of fat on a hog. It will keep a kiddie alive between two and three months. If it rests between the lean hog and the starving kiddie, the kiddie will win out every time. That is what the toilers on West Virginia farms will say through out the State. Now is the time to rush the grain. The child of today, if kept alive, will be the man or woman of tomorrow.

ARBOVALE

Paul Patterson and Vada Gum, who had been suffering from diphtheria are better at this writing.

A number of young people from here attended the supper at Dunmore Saturday night.

Miss Flossie Conrad was at Marlinton last Sunday.

Mr. Crist and Sons are putting a large stock of goods in the D. O. Woods store building with expectations of doing a large business shortly.

Rev. Donley and Brother of St. Marys, Ohio, are on a hunting expedition in this vicinity.

Miss Helen Barnhart of Raywood, who had been attending High School here has gone home on account of bad health.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hiner of Marlinton, were in town Sunday afternoon. They were accompanied by Miss Mabel Woods who returned from Huntington to attend the burial of Mrs. Harry McLaughlin, who was buried near Huntersville Saturday afternoon.

J. B. Orndorff motored to Elkins Saturday for the new pastor and his family.

Mrs. F. M. Brill, of Marlinton, is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Eliza Conrad.

Glen Arbogast has gone to Ronceverte to sing in a series of meetings conducted by Rev. W. A. Grogg.

MISSIONARY DEAD

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Absolom Sydenstricker at her home in China on October 21. Her maiden name was Caroline J. Stulting. She was born at Hillsboro sixty-seven years ago. Upon her marriage to Dr. Absolom Sydendenstricker forty-one years ago, they went as missionaries to China under the Presbyterian church. Few missionaries have done work which has been so signally blessed. Mrs. Sydenstricker is survived by her husband and their three children, and by her brother, the venerable Cornelius Stulting, of Hillsboro.

FINE LAMBS

W. E. Poage and C. A. Young have so far taken up over seven thousand lambs this season.

The best lot was 740 lambs from Bath county which averaged 82 pounds. A part of these were 25 lambs sold by W. P. Ayers, of Mt. Grove, which weighed 2584 pounds. Mr. Ayers is an old time resident of Pocahontas.

French Hoover sold a flock of nearly 500 head to Messrs. Poage and Young. There was not a light lamb in the lot, and the average weight was 84 pounds. Mr. Hoover breeds from registered Hampshire and Dorset bucks. He recently bought two registered Hampshire bucks from Mr. Poage.

7:45 p. m. Preaching Service—Subject: "Felix."

Next Wednesday, November 9th will be the meeting of prayer in behalf of the Conference to begin in Washington on Armistice Day for the discussion of the Limitation of Armament. Every Christian interested in the peace of the world should be on hand. The Psalm to be studied at this service will be the 46th.

In this connection, we would suggest that every Christian in this community observe a special season of prayer on Armistice Day that God may be in, guide, and overrule this gathering of the representatives of the nations.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Deacons on Friday evening November 4th at 7:30 in the office of A. P. Edgar in the court house.

The regular monthly meeting of the Session will be held on next Monday night at the home of E. D. King.

Pocahontas County Poultry Shippers

This year more than ever the farmer the farmer needs every dollar he can get for his poultry. We realize this fact Mr Poultry Raister, and condition the farmers are in to-day; our word to you is every cloud has a "Silver Lining." We caution you now to feed your flock, have it FULLY MATURED and FAT that when dressed and packed properly, it will reach us in A-1 shape; if this is done we can invariably sell at top market prices, returns that will be most pleasing to you.

We state without successful contradiction that Philadelphia is always a very high market as compared to others, and if we do say it personally Frank Hellerick & Co. have no equal in the wholesale of poultry here. Why not eliminate the middle-man this year? Do a little initiative and thinking on your part and SHIP DIRECT, to us.

Younger People Leaving the Farm

The movement to the cities from the farms of bright, capable young men and women in great numbers, year after year, has attracted much attention. Good roads, good schools and improved methods will make farm life attractive and help all the people.

First National Bank
MARLINTON, WEST VIRGINIA
A Bank of Service and Improved Agricultural Conditions.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY

They carried the fiery cross all up and down this valley last week and the storm center of the war is around Renick, Hillsboro, and other towns on the pike. Word had come that after the establishment of the State road on the west side of the river through the Greenbrier Valley, that there was a movement on foot to change the location to the Anthonys Creek route and skirt the Virginia line.

If they made this change it would be a horrible miscarriage, for the State would simply be building more miles of road for the purpose of inconveniencing the general public.

This road business is the producer of all sorts of abortions. Men for selfish purposes will propose that roads be taken from their natural courses and be built over high mountains and through trackless forests. and they present their cases with plausibility and force before governing bodies in distant cities.

In criticising the fifty million bond issue last year we spoke of this feature of every man wanting the road by his house and going great lengths to secure it.

It was the scandal and disgrace of the Virginia road schemes in the days before the Civil War. The C. & O. railroad was forced over the top of a high mountain so that it might go by the White Sulphur Springs, and millions have been expended since then hauling the trains over the heavy grades when there was a natural gap to the north and to the south of that place.

And they say that the southerners afterwards gathered at the same place and planned secession.

Now they say the State road has to go that way. We would not be much surprised. All over the State things like this have sprung up. The papers are into it hot and heavy, and there are heart burnings and division among the people. Is this what we sold ourselves into the slavery of debt for?

Long before Mark Twain wrote the story of Hell and Hadleysburg, we had the same story here. It was said of a Pocahontas man who was to be provided with a home that it was proposed to him that he settle on Anthony's Creek. It is reported that rejected the proposition in words to this effect: "Send me anywhere else, send me to hell, but do not send me to Anthony's Creek."

At the meeting of the County Court on Tuesday, the Court took notice of the unconfirmed rumors that the State Road Commission was considering the matter of putting the State Road from Lewisburg to Elkins up Anthony's Creek and then by the way of the Staunton and Parkersburg Turnpike. The route first proposed and, as the Court thought, decided upon was through the Big and the Little Levels. and by the way of Marlinton. This highway would go through the richest and most populous sections of the counties of Greenbrier, Pocahontas and Randolph counties, and connect the county seats of the three counties.

At least one member of the County Court, Commissioner E. H. Williams, will wait upon the State Road Commission at its meeting in Charleston on Friday of this week. He will be accompanied by a delegation of citizens, and be backed by petitions signed by many tax payers of the county protesting against the wilderness route.

It is becoming more and more apparent that the State Road Commission is favoring the route from White Sulphur Springs up Anthonys creek to Minnehaha Springs, up Knapps creek and through the Greenbank district and across Cheat Mountain to Randolph. If this route is eventually chosen, it will leave Pocahontas county in its most productive parts unimproved by the state highway. and Marlinton the county seat ten miles off the tourists highway, connected only by the Knapps creek branch. It would seem that more consideration should be given to make the state highways serve a useful local purpose as well, and less attention paid interstate highways and scenic and resort routes. To follow the old Lewisburg and Marlins Bottom Turnpike and thence down the Elk and Tygarts Valley Rivers to Elkins would benefit the richest, most productive and most populous parts of the three counties, and shorten the route by twenty miles and more. The latter route would also lead through a region rich in limestone and other road building materials. If the eastern route is chosen, skirting the eastern and northern borders of the county, it will certainly be disasterous to Pocahontas and the adjoining counties of Greenbrier and Randolph.

N. R. P.

HILLSBORO, W. VA. The people of the Levels and Edray districts are more or less interested in a report that an effort is being made to change the route of the Class A road which has been established by the State Road Commission from Lewisburg to Marlinton over the old turnpike and thence to Minnehaha Springs and have it to go from White Sulphur Springs and up Anthony's creek to Minnehaha Springs. The injustice and foolishness of such a change is apparent to any one who is familiar with the two routes and are acquainted with the character of the country along the two roads. The entire distance along the old turnpike from Lewisburg to Marlinton through the two counties of Greenbrier and Pocahontas is limestone land with the finest farms and grazing lands in the state. thickly populated with thrifty and industrious farmers and stock raisers, and a good road would threble the business done, while the road proposed to be established up Anthony's creek runs along a narrow valley bounded on both sides by steep mountain ridges from which most of the timber has been cut and removed, thinly populated and which an improved road would enhance the value of the lands very little. Roads should be built and established so that the greatest number of people would receive the greatest benefit We invite the Road Commission to come and go over the two routes before making such a change. M.

ONOTO

Well our long dry-spell was broken up by a fine rain Sunday and Monday, which was badly needed, as the waters were very low, and it was becoming unhealthful.

Last week A. C. Barlow the veteran road builder, assisted by F. C. Baxter, our efficient Road Engineer, began the constructing the macadamized road on the Onoto Hill at Hanlins store. They have successfully laid it as far as F. C. Baxters gate, and forever done away with the drudgery of clamoring through the mud up this hill. There is no telling how much benefit this piece of work will be, not only to this community, but to all adjoining communities.

Morris Friel had the misfortune of falling off a wagon, and dislocating one of the bones in his arm. He had his nerve right with him though having reset it himself.

Rev. C. A. Powers began a series of meetings at West Union Tuesday night.

Mrs. F. C. Pritchard of Dunmore, is visiting her mother, Mrs. M. J. Baxter for a few days.

J. L. Beard, of Hillsboro is teaching school at Woodrow this term.

W. E. Poage of Edray was gathering up some sheep here Tuesday.

The great drouth was broken Sunday and Monday by glorious rain. The streams were all flushed out and there was a rafting tide in Greenbrier river. Local Weather Observer, S. L. Brown recorded 3.48 inches of rain. In the nearly thirty years he has been local observer, four inches of rainfall in 24 hours is the record, according to his recollection without referring to his books. That made an immense flood, while the rain on Monday only made a comfortable tide in the streams. According to the recollection of Squire G. M. Kee, streams were lower than any time since the dry year of 1881. An average month's fall of rain came in 24 hours this week, and soaked the ground for the first time since last winter.

H. M. Fortune, one of the repairmen at the Tannery had the misfortune to get a finger badly mashed a few weeks ago while at work. He is in the Clifton Forge hospital where he will have his finger amputated.

DURBIN

Durbin school has opened with C. E. Flynn, principal. Kirth Nottingham, Miss Smith, Miss Calhoun and Mrs. L. Fenton, teachers. Enrollment about 200 scholars.

Festival at Durbin theater next Saturday eveninfor benifit of the church.

A number of our people enjoyed the festival at Greenbank Saturday night The festival was given by the I. O. O. F. of Winterburn Lodge 319. A large number of people were there and a bountiful supper was served.

Edward Bond, the deputy game warden passed through town Tuesday on his way to Greenbrier county.

The Marlinton Telephone Co. is installing phones here and we will soon be talking to Washington and other places of importance.

John and Sam Williams have bought a fine lot of cattle for the butcher shop.

J. Hall Wilson returned from the city last Saturday.

J. D. Wilmoth, the Club House man, has come to his home for the winter and is building an addition to his house an a cellar.

J. B. Nottingham is one of the first to bi proud of a wild turkey.

Robert Hevener has returned fom Hartstown, Pa., and is now with his brother, Rev. John Hevener at Hosterman.

Cecil Houchin was a business visitor in town last week.

Sam Reda left last week for Ashtabula, Ohio.

S. T. Ruckman is visiting relatives in Virginia. John L. Williams is chief of police in his absence.

Dr. C. B. Collins had the wood parts of his brick building painted last week. Mrs. J. F. Folk had some cement work done on her buildings, and all the business buildings along the street have been repaired.

J. W. Goodsell has been having some painting done on his buildings, and his Annex farm has been named the Brookside Farm. He will keep some thoroughbred cattle.

J. S. Burner had to drive a big black bear off the road when he came to town last week. The old bears are quite important at this time of the year.

W. A. Theid, of Marlinton, was with N. B. Arbogast over Sunday.

COUNTY COURT

Pocahontas County Court was in session on Tuesday with all the members present.

The time of the court was taken up largely in auditing and allowing an immense number of claims.

Settlements of the following fiduciary accounts were filad. I. N. Gum admr. Chas. Gum; C. B. Harris, admr Jas. Persl; H. L. Stokes, guardian.

B. F. E. Wooddell qualified as notary public.

V. M. Calhoun, J. M. Osborne and E. W. Cochran recommended for notary commissioners.

The court condemned the bridge across Cummings creek between Huntersville and J. H. Buzzard's.

Report of Alderny School, first month, ending Oct. 21, N. R. Fertig, teacher. Perfect attendance: Lake McClure, Jake Smith, Neil Irvine, Albert Smith, Norval Pifer, Cora McClure, Hazel Pifer, Clara Irvine, Lela Irvine.

Charles Odbert Stalnaker and Miss Sallie Fitzwater, of Parsons, W. Va., were united in marriage Wednesday morning November 2, 1921, at 9 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kohler, this city. Rev. Fred B. Wyand was the officiating minisier.

CASS

The body of Charles Gum, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Gum, arrived from overseas last Saturday the 22nd, and was buried by the Moose Lodges of Cass and Marlinton. The burial was largely attended by the many friends of the deceased.

Quite a number of the citizens of our town attended the oyster supper given by the I. O. O. F. lodge at Greenbank Saturday night. and report a very enjoyable time with lots of good things to eat.

Mr. and Mrs. Cain Crowley of near Greenbank, spent the week end with Squire and Mrs. J. B. Sutton.

I steam heat system has been installed in the two large school building of our town, which will greatly add to comfort of teachers and pupils.

Sheriff B. B. Beard was in our midst two days last week collecting taxes.

Clyde Nickell and Hunter Adams had a narrow escape from being killed last Saturday night when a Ford car which was driven by young Nickell jumped over the road at what is known as the Bar turn, about one mile east of Cass. Adams jumped from the car and managed to catch to some bushes some 30 feet below on the bluff and escaped with a few cuts and bruises. Nickell was thrown from the car and landed on the railroad grade about 100 feet below. Adams worked his way back to the road and after calling several times and receiving no answer, ran to Cass for help, which was speedily obtained. Nickell was found in an unconscious condition and terribly bruised. He was carried to his home and medical aid was rendered by Dr. Hannah. At first no hopes for his recovery were entertained, but at this writing strong hopes for his complete recovery are entertained by his many friends. The car landed about 150 feet below the bluff and was completely wrecked.

Morris Friel, near Woodrow, while hauling the baggage of hunters to Laurel Creek last Friday, fell from a wagon and dislocated his arm at ths elbow. By main strength and the assistance of some members of the party he succeeded in reducing what was aprarently a severe dislocation backward of the ulna bone. The arm remains very badly swollen.

Dr. Paul M. Pierson, the Chautauqua man, will give a free lecture at the High School Auditorium, Tuesday November 8, at 2;30 p. m. This lecture is given Marlinton because of the large oversale of tickets at Chautauqua last August. Dr. Pierson is one of the best lecturers in Chautauqua.

Jackson J. Buzzard died very suddenly in Davenport, Iowa, Saturday October 28, of heart disease, aged 65 years. He was a brother of J. H. Buzzard of Pocahontas county. His wife was Miss Sarah A. Burr. of Huntersville.

There will be a special service at the Union Cnurch at Cloverlick, November 11, at 7:30 p. m., for special blessing upon the Limitation of Arms Conference. Everybody invited, especiolly ex-service men.

O. N. Miles.

J. Hop Woods, a prominent attorney of Barbour county, died last week at his home at Philippi.

R. T. Greer & Son have broken ground for a big warehouse on their lots near the High school. The building will be 32X48 feet, two stories. J. W. Milligan has the contract.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. P. Clower. at Rainelle, November 1, 1921, a daughter.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lang of Marlinton, October 28, a son.

FROM FLORIDA

Editor Pocahontas Times:

I wish I could make you and your readers understand what a winter in this delightful Florida climate means—only once have we seen frost this season. The lowest temperature, 35 degrees, January 5th No snow, ice, nor mud, and we don't have to worry over coal shortage. Our wood bill of $5 00 will probably last to May 1st. Picnic parties in the open lawns, by lake shores, and on screened porches, are very common occurences.

Perhaps you will ask, "How was the past summer?" I would answer by saying, as local weather observer, I have a record since June 2nd, and twice I recorded a temperature of 97 degrees five times, 95, and and perhaps twenty days from 90 to 94, but with a good breeze almost constantly, we found the summer surprisingly pleasant. In fact, many prefer the summer here rather than the winters.

We came here the 30th of May, at the time of the first ripe grapes, the first ripe peaches, the first whottleberries, ripe tomatoes, and we feasted on these good things for weeks and weeks. Then came pears, ripe guavas, a most delicious fruit which we thoroughly enjoyed. Perhaps the most beautiful picture of all is seen in the orange and grape fruit groves. This state literally swams with tourists when the orange is in the golden color with a back ground of green leaves, making a picture of beauty and a joy indescrible, but it is interesting to watch the developement and growth of the orange from the bloom to the ripening stage. In mid summer the orange is about as large as a black walnut, and fully as green. I find the growing of an orange grove becomes a very attractive proposition, but it requires time, patience and money. But don't be dicouraged if you have a mind to start a grove—time will bring you your reward. Orange groves are in demand, and they are bringing renumerative prices when offered for sale. We could sold our grove some time ago at a reasonable profit, but when you plant the tree and eat the fruit thereof, which we have done, it becomes fascinatimg, and with a three year old grove, the buying would perhaps be better than the selling.

There is a risk to run in the orange business the same as in sowing wheat or planting corn; in the apple and peach orchards, or your cattle and sheep grazing on the green pastures. But don't think for a moment that the citrus business is the only avocation, or means of a livelihood in this wonderful and rapidly developing state. The live stock industry is developiug rapidly here now, and some thousands returns are being realized both in cattle and hogs. In the new order of farming it is being done on a large scale and by northern and western farmers who come here with ample means, and experience, capable of developing thousands of acres, and they succeed. Hereford cattle, and Duroc Jersey hogs look good in Florida. "A Poland China sow," says the Florida Grower of Jan. 17th, "with three quarters of Florida breeding behind her, has won the grand championship at the International Live Stock show in Chicago The sow was raised on the farm of E. Z. Herlong at Micanspy Lake." The international live show at Chicago is the greatest in the world, which makes the honor for the State all the more pleasing. "Dr. Saddler of Mt. Dora" continuing the Grower, "purchased at the big Poland China sale at Micanspy, two yearlings of the famous Herlong breed for about $1,000. They weighed about 500 pounds each That's the kind of stock that will soon be raised in Lake County." I am personally acquainted with Dr. Saddler, having met him in meeting of the Board of Trade of Lake County, and went with him on a motor trip into Polk County, and, in company with with some friends, Mrs. Moore and I have been in his home at Mt. Dora. He came here from the north thirty-five years ago, and he says Florida first for him. He is very wealthy, the greater part of which he made here.

I have made three visits into Polk county, the former citrus county of the state, first, to study the orange and grape fruit culture as practiced by the grove owners there, many of whom live in houses of luxury, and ride in the best autos on the market, and over a system of asphalt roads, the finest I have ever seen anywhere, and, second, on pleasure trips with friends who always had a seat in a seven passenger car for Mrs. Moore and me, and I have been astonished at the wealth of that county. Think of a 1000 acre orange grove! Think of a 23 acre grove at Florence Villa, in the suburbs of Winter Haven, producing last year $54,000 worth of oranges; and other groves mostly from five to eight years old, bending to the ground with fruit this year which shows what can be done with proper care and cultivation. Polk county is already the home of the more wealthy class. A poor man doesn't have much show when unimproved lands are selling at $300 to $500 an acre. No wonder Dr. J. H. Ross, president of the Florida Citrus Exchange, whose home is at Florence Villa. in discussing comparisons with his friends in the Valley of Virginia, last summer, after listening to what they were doing, said, "Why, gentlemen, I can cut down 69 trees to the acre out of the 70, and I can still make more money than you are making. As it is a very poor orange tree, in full bearing, that wont make $15 to $20.00." He told me this.

Mrs. Moore and I went with some friends to Silver Springs, in Marion county, six miles out from Oceola, the county seat, where we spent a very enjoyable Christmas day, eating a picnic dinner under the shade of a speading oak, where fried chicken, hot coffee and other good things were eaten to the satisfaction of our whole party. Silver Spring is one of the wonders of Florida, clear as chrystal, seventy-five feet deep flowing millions of gallons of water daily, and is said to have a temperature of 70 degrees. Going out in glass bottom boats you can see an object as small as a ten cent piece in the bottom of the stream, provided fish of all sizes dont obstruct the view. Take steamer at Palatka, bound for Silver Springs, and see the wonders of this beautiful stream.

As Polk county stands at the the head of citrus business, so Marion county comes first in agricultural pursuits. It would surprise many of your readers if they were to visit some of the large well kept and well arranged stock farms of this county to see the thoroughbred Herefords, the Shorthorns and the Holstines and the Jerseys—beef and dairy cattle, the same as in the north, to see the barns and silos well filled for housing and feeding during the winter months when the pasture fields are brown and stock needs additional nourishment. I have seen some very big corn and some very fat hogs since we came here last May. Many of the hogs were fattened on velvet beans and cow peas.

The truckers in many sections of the state are making big money growing winter vegetables. Of course they some times miss and have a failure on account of frost or drouth but they more often hit it and realize good profits. A lady born and raised on Anthonys Creek, Greenbrier county, whose husband died some seven or eight years ago, leaving her a sixty acre farm and a mortgage, at Hastings on the St. John River, is now reputed to be worth $100,000 all of which she made growing Irish potatoes. Think of a 75 acre cucumber field, near the town of Oakland, Orange county only nine miles from Cleremont, producing $90,000 worth of cucumbers last winter, while cabbage, lettuce, peas, tomatoes, beans and peppers were grown to perfection and brought good returns.

Not much wonder that the Presbyterians at Oakland were able to raise last spring $23,000 in exactly 23 minutes for the erection of a modern brick church—one of the best, if not the very best country church in the whole state. Oakland is situated on the south side of Lake Apopka, the second largest lake in the state, being twelve by twenty miles in size, thus offording ample protection from frost, and, as muck lands are very rich, trucking in the winter season is usually very profitable. Of course this seems out of season, and may be out of reason to many of your readers who are now snow bound, ice bound. and perhaps on their last ton of coal, and to all such we would say, pack your grip and come and see.

I have been very much interested in reading Mr. Andrew Price's articles on the subject of trees, as well as his excellent papers on other timely topics. As I see it, he is making history right now when writing about trees. History that will be read, enjoyed and appreciated by future generations. It is a great subject, and one that is worthy a place on the pages of any book or journal. How I love to read of the cedar trees and fir trees which Hiram, king of Tyre, sold to David and his son Solomon and floated them to Joppa, modern Jaffa, thousands of years before the railroad was built from that seaport town on the Mediteranean to Jerusalem. It is interesting to note the different kinds of tree, as well as the number of trees that are mentioned in the Bible. It is worth while to keep the subject before our minds. If all your readers were to plant a tree or two or more, what good would result. In my travels I admired the trees planted, in my own county in particular, by the Yeagers, Burners, Arbogasts, Kerrs, Moomaus, Moore's, Jacksons, Hannahs, Gibsons, Gatewoods, Warwicks, Ligons, Beards, Stultings, McNeels, Clarks, McLaughlins and many others, now standing as monuments to their memories. It is a noble work, keep it up. Incidentally I have planted mine—1200, or more, orange and grapefruit trees. As I go out to my grove, often in the early morn, while the dew is still on every leaf and branch, and the gentle breezes have not yet disturbed the placid waters, I see that the tallest trees on the highest hills make the deepest reflection in the beautiful lake below; and the straighter the tree, and the more perfect its symetry, the more beautiful the picture. This applies not only to trees but to all things in nature.

Already this letter is too long, but I beg to say in conclusion that I am glad to see two of my friends competing for the nomination of assessor on the Republican ticket—both good farmers, and both good men—well balanced in strength of party. Looks like a close race at this distance—a race of "nip and tuck." In Mingo county there is a railroad station called "Naugatuck," and when the brakeman called it out it reminded me of the above phrase. So in thinking of this race I will just have to say "Naugatuck" and wait the returns.

And now, as a final finis, I would say that I like Florida better every day: its delightful all year climate and clear sparkling water of Clermont Heights, the noble citizenship we have, the good roads, schools and churches make this impression on my mind.

Announcement has been made through the state offices of the West Virginia State Dental society that a competent dental society will be organized at a meeting at Ronceverte, Greenbrier county, on Wednesday February 25. Dentists from Pocahontas, Greenbrier, Summers and Monroe counties, which will compose the branch association, will attend the meeting.

This meeting is being held under the direction of the committee on organization, of which Dr. W. S. Rosenhum, of Williamson, is chairman. Dr. Rosenhum will preside at the meeting. Officers will be elected and a constitution and by-laws will be adopted.

According to information received here, the name of Dr. Charles S. Kramer, of Marlinton, is spoken of as the probable president of the society. —Charleston Gazette.

THE KINNISONS

Napperville, Illinois.

Jessie G. Kinnison;

My dear cousin:

It was with glad surprise I received your welcome letter of April eleventh.

The name Kinnison was among my earliest recollections. When my parents came to La Greuge County Indiana, in October 1834, when I was just six months old, they stopped at the little log cabin of Mark Kinnison, and family, and stayed there until Father got a place, they were always friendly neighbors but I never knew until George had visited you that Mark and my father were first cousins—children of Dave Kinnison and Susan Hughes. Several years ago I read in our weekly paper about Dave Kinnison, a member of the Boston Tea Party who died in Chicago in 1852 at the age of 115. The next day after your letter came our Daily paper contained a picture of the monument that the sons of the American Revolution had erected to his memory in Lincoln Park, Chicago, Illinois. That is not more than thirty miles from where we live, just a pleasant auto trip when you and your husband visit us.

My son Ralph and his wife and her two sisters motored to the city last week. I have never tried so long a trip in the auto. I am rather to stiff and achy to take so long a trip. I was only eighty-five last Thursday, the 24th. I would like to know if the aged pioneer was related to the West Virginia Kinnisons. I remember Mark Kinnison came to our house on horse-back when I was six years old, he took me on his knee and talked to me and praised me so much and I was so bashful I could not talk to him. Mother said he thought I was just about right—when I was a little fat rosy cheeked baby. The next spring we moved to Elkhart County and I never saw any of their family again.

I had a letter from George to-day. He says be is well and getting along fine, he will not be home this summer, he was disappointed that I could not go last summer to visit you but my sister was not able to go and I was not either. George does not write to me very often, he is trying to do so many things and is always busy, but this summer he will graduate from his law school and will have more time to devote to his office work and his Geneology

Yes, the farm work is different here from what it use to be. The tractor is a great help when you can make it work, but when it will not work it is worse than a balky horse, you don't have to feed it but you have to spend so much time tinkering it up and when you get it into the field it is time for another shower and it is time for another shower and you must wait till the ground dries off. It has rained so much this spring that we have not got all the oats sowed yet and it has rained every day this week and is raining now, and is as cold as it was in March.

I will be pleased to get the pictures of the children and thank you for yours.

I have never done much fancy work only tating. I was a dressmaker before I was married and after I always had too many other things to do, and now I have plenty of time but have nothing to do but read the daily papers and do the family mending.

I would like to see you and your family. I fear this long letter will weary you. Hope you will soon be able to visit me. From your cousin,

Virginia Hughes Herrick,

Napperville, Illinois.

Mrs. C. M. Walworth, 737 Junion terrace, read with much interest The Herald and Examiner's account of David Kinnison's grave in Lincoln Park.

"My father, Dr. Lucien T. Cheney, was interested in the quaint character, and when David Kinnison died he took me to see the body," she said. "I was only five years old."

"The body lay on a plank held up by two chairs so high that my father had to lift me in his arms for me to see. Kinnison's eyelids were weighted down with pennies, and he seemed very peaceful. My father many times afterward reminded me of the incident, impressing upon me the importance of the man.

At that time we lived at Green and Madison Sts. then a residential district. If I remember rightly, the Macks, with whom David Kinnison made his home, lived at Desplaines and Madison. Since I have known that his grave is in Lincoln Park I manage to go by there every chance I get.

Kinnison was once the nominal manager of the Mooney Museum. then a variety house. Finding himself in straitened circumstances on the date of his 112th birthday, he gave a "donation" party there, at which friends gave him small sums for his comfort.

Though it apparently hurt his soldier's pride to ask for donations, he was always respected in the community.

In 1915 the Order of Red Men. in session here, held a memorial meeting at the grave in honor of Kinnison a charter member.

Dear Editor:—I am sending you under separate cover some seeds of what they call the soft maple here, and would be pleased if you will plant them, or get some one to plant them and see what they will do in that country. They make a denser shade than the eastern maple and have larger leaves. The seeds grow in clusters, sometimes five or six inches long. The stem in the packet will show you how they grow. In moist ground I have seen the leaves as much as ten inches across. I think that they will do all right on the river bottom at Marlinton as they like moist ground.

Yours very truly,

T. M. Hill.

CHARLESTON LETTER

Charleston, Feb. 25—Mrs. L. M. McClintic, of Marlinton, and Mrs. J. A. Dennison, of Hagerstown, Md., were visiting their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter McClintic of Franklin street, this week.

Meade Arbogast, of Marlinton, visited friends here the first of the week while enroute to Indianapolis, Indiana, on business.

Mrs. Chase P. Loury, of 616 Thompson street, is recovering slowly from a serious attack of double pneumonia.

Attorney J. W. Yeager, of Marlinton, was a visitor in Charleston Saturday and Sunday, calling on friends.

Investigators have learned why George B. Vaughan has resigned his position at the U. S. Naval Ordnance plant. Mr. Vaughan was employee No. 1313 and received his first wages on Friday, February 13.

Douglas McNeill, superintendent of schools of Pocahontas county, was a visitor at the state house recently.

Dwight Alexander, formerly connected with the Dunbar Traction company, has accepted a position at the U. S. Naval Ordnance plant as electrical engineer.

Word has been received here by relatives that Theron R. East, chief yeoman in the navy, is enroute to Puget Sound, Washington, where he will board a sea-going vessel for the Orient. Mr. East enlisted in the navy in Charleston about a year ago, and has been stationed at Great Lakes, Illinois.

Levi Gay of Eccles, spent a few days in Charleston on business and visiting friends recently.

The Charleston Mail publishes a strong letter from Senator N. C. McNeil, of Marlinton, endorsing the candidacy of Col. Fred Paul Grosscup for the Republican nomination for Governor.

DURBIN

The sick in this part are better.

John M. Collins, of Randolph coun was here to see his father last week.

Mrs. Fred Simmons has sold her farm to Sam Williams and others.

Frank Reda has sold to Dr. C. B. Collins

Miss Sutton, Hosterman, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Kenna Rexrode.

Porter Kerr's daughter, of Arbovale, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Author Livesay, this week.

Recruiting Officer Nelson, of Huntington was here this week and secured two young men for the army—Hubert Simmons and Earl Snyder.

The Waybright sale was largely attended on Feb. 16th, considering the bad weather. This was one of the largest sales ever made in the upper end of this county in the length of time. It was laid out for a two days' sale, but the buyers were all good and they gave Mr. Waybright a good average price for his property, and Auctioneer Ashford run it through in less than six hours, and everybody went home satisfied. Mr. Waybright was one of our prominent citizens and we are sorry to see him leave our community.

Riley Cochran, the blind man, has moved into the Byrd building.

George Phares and Ed Simmons both bought cars from Sam Williams.

Paul Townsend, the light man, is on the job for sixteen hours a day.

Our community was shocked to hear of the death of Uriah Hevener. The family has our sympathy.

P. F. Eades, with the Durbin Mercantile Co., has been sick for a week.

M. C. Cavenaugh is improving slowly at this time.

GRAND CONCERT MARCH 5TH

THE GOLDEN DELICIOUS APPLE

The American Pomological Society has awarded the Wilder Medal, the highest award, to the Golden Delicious apple. This is the second apple to receive this prize in twenty-five years.

Years ago one of the Starks was fishing in Clay county and heard of the tree which bore a rich yellow apple in great profusion. It was a seedling. The nurseryman bought the tree for $5000.00, the highest price ever paid for a single tree.

The tree has been carefully preserved and a great many fruit trees have been propagated from the original tree.

It is noted for its superior taste and keeping qualities: It has been kept as late as July 15th without losing its flavor.

The Wilder Medal is awarded from a trust fund left by the late Marshall P. Wilder, who served for 38 years as president of the society.

This tree is another credit to West Virginia.

The fourth month of the Clawson school closed February 6, 1920. The following pupils were neither absent nor tardy during the month: Ruth Withrow, Ruby Withrow, Edna Jackson, Francis Carr, Clarence Kennedy, Dallas Kennedy, Luther Dilley and Carl Higgins; Clawson Dilley was absent one half day.

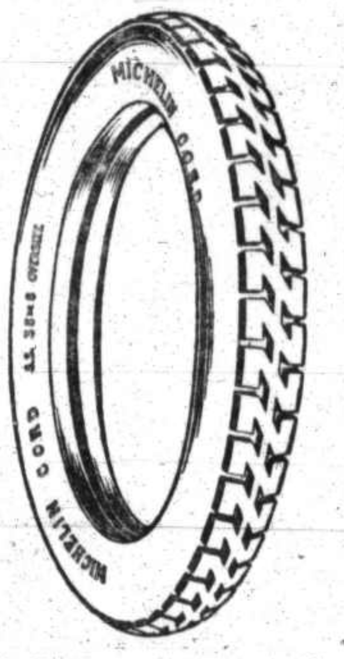
BAXTER'S GARAGE

J. L. Baxter, Prop. Marlinton, W. Va



Before deciding on your next tire have your dealer show you cross-sections of the various makes you are considering—so that you can measure the total thickness of the rubber and fabric used in building up the various makes.

You will find that Michelin Tires embody more of these mileage-giving materials. In the 34x4 Michelin Universal, for example, there is a solid though flexible mass of wear-resisting rubber and fabric almost an inch thick.

Every bit of the materials used is of the highest quality. Yet Michelins are moderate in price.

THE TIDE IS TURNING

The havoc of the World War caused a financial and economic condition that has reached its crisis in the past year. Agricultural interests were the first to suffer and suffered probably more keenly than any other one great industry. But for the same reason the farmers' interests will be among the first to recover and to establish itself on a new and firmer basis.

Reestablishment of foreige credits and an equalization of exchange is essential to the revivification of the steel industry, the coal operators and the general trend of wholesale mercantile trade—not to the farmer.

The United States can consume the great part of the produce of this country, and another six months will witness a demand possibly greater than the supply of farm products.

The financial strain put upon many farmers, stockraisers and dairymen has caused their number to be decimated and the survival of the fittest will see a stronger organization of producers. Around the great centers of population hundreds of small chicken farms and dairies have gone down under the economic crisis and the supply of these products is cut more than half in two.

There are many big purebred stock raisers whose splendid plants had to be liquidated; in many cases these establishments were owned by millionaires who sacrificed their stock and their farms to protect other great interests. This fact coupled with the condition of the small stockman and feeder who has been rushing young and undeveloped stock to the butcher has caused a greater shortage of good purebred stock than we have seen in years.

This is the opportunity of the man who has stuck to his guns. The tide has turned in the farmers favor and his renewed buying power will give to whole country new hope.—Lexington Kentucky Herald.

IN MEMORIAM

Eva Viola, youngest child of Henry and Lydia Slaton, was born January 8, 1918, and died October 21, 1921, at her home on Beaver Creek. She leaves to mourn her going, her parents, two brothers and three sisters. To the sorrowing ones come the comforting words of our Savior: "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of Heaven.

On October 22, after funeral services were conducted at the home by pastor, Rev. O. P. McNeil, the little form was tenderly laid to rest in the cemetery near Buckeye.

The bereaved ones have the sympathy of the entire community.

TAXES TO BE MORE EQUITABLE IN 1922

Representative of State Tax Commissioner here last week to confer with county officials.

An effort is being made by State Tax Commissioner Hallahan to have a general revaluation of property made throughout the State. The purpose of this is to remove the inequalities now existing both with regard to individuals and counties In an interview with the "Times" last Thursday, Mr. John P. Hardy, representing Mr. Hallahan, had the following to say:

"Some counties in this state have heretofore been assessed at as low as twenty per cent of their real valuation. Others have been much higher. From an examination of your records I would say that Pocahontas county has been generally assessed at from 40 to 50 percent of its true value. But, I find some valuations in this county as low as seven percent, while in another instance I found a large tract of land which had been assessed above its actual value and was then raised by the Board of Review and Equalization to 162 percent of the amonnt it had recently been sold for and I understand is now on the market for. We are just as anxious to have property like the latter reduced as we are to raise the former. All we have instructed Mr. Auldridge to do is to put all the property in Pocahontas county at its true and actual value. The same is being required from every county in the State and the provisions of the amended law governing the assessment of property are such that if any assessor in the State fails to do this, special assessors will be appointed who will do it and the expense must be borne by the county. There is nothing unreasonable or unjust in our position. We are not trying to raise taxes, but rather to put taxpayers on a more equitable basis. As assessments rise levies will drop. It is the opinion of Mr. Hallanan that taxes nowhere in the State need exceed $1 50 on the $100 valuation. In many counties they should be much less than that.

"If this work is to be done intelligently it is going to require more time than has heretofore been devoted to the work of assessment and Mr. Auldridge has arranged to take advantage of the good weather we are experiencing to go into the field and commence gathering information which he will use when actually making his assessmant next January. The oath which the assessor must take when his work is completed reads in part as follows:

'I ——— do solemnly swear ——— that in making the foregoing assessment I have to the best of my knowledge and ability pursued the law prescribing the duties of assessors;—that the valuation of each item of property is fixed according to the best information I could obtain, and that I believe such valuation to be the true and actual value thereof, by which I mean the price which could be obtained for such property if voluntarially sold on such terms as are usually employed in the sale of such property, and that such valuation is in no case made according to any rule, basis, percentage or proportion less than the whole of each true and actual value.' If the assessors of the counties in the State of West Virginia can consciously take this oath at the completion of their work in 1922, the State Tax Commissioner will be satisfied, otherwise a revaluation will be made which is bound to cost the taxpayers more money since the expense of such a revaluation must be borne be the county."

A. D. Williams, president of the Peerless Smokeless Smithing Coal company, of Morgantown, W. Va., who is here announced yesterday that the company had closed a contract with Claude C. Davisson, formerly field superintendent for the Clarksburg Light and Heat company, to take charge of its field work in Gilmer and Calhoun counties, where the company has planned extensive oil and gas developments. The company has thirty-four leases in the vicinity of Normantown, Gilmer county on which it contemplates drilling approximately fifty wells, representing an ultimate expenditure of over $400,000.00. The company has recently entered into contract with Flint and Strothers company, local drilling contractors for the drilling of four wells. It is expected to begin drilling Wednesday, the rig having been completed last week and all the tools placed on the ground ready for operation of well No. 1 on the Ora L. Boggs farm. Mr Davisson will give his personal attention to the field operations of the company in that section. Mr. Davisson has had many years experience in the oil and gas business and will make a valuable superintendent for the company. —Clarksburg Exponent.

ONOTO

Corn shucking is the order of the day here.

We are glad to report W. H. Gilmore improving in health, after an attack of scarlet fever.

A. C. Barlow is grading the Onoto hill, preparatory to laying macadam. This work is greatly appreciated by all the people in this and adjoining neighborhoods, and will be a great boom to travel.

Geo. A. C. Auldridge has completed his new barn, and it is a good one.

F. M. White has purchased a two acre lot at Hillsooro, and is now having ground broken for a new dwelling.

C. C. Clendennen was here recently collecting the yearly taxes.

Rev. J. O. Bolton of Buchannon, preached an able sermon at Edray Sunday night.

OBITUARY

John G. Luke

(From Paper Trade Journal)

John G. Luke, for many years president of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, died at St. Luke's Hospital in New York, October 15, following an operation for appendicitis.

In the death of Mr. Luke the book paper industry has lost one of its most splendid ornaments, for he was indeed one of God's own noble men. He was a pioneer in the book paper industry. It might truthfully be said of him that he was born and reared in the environment of a paper mill, for his father and grand-father before him were engaged in the same occupation.

Mr. Luke was born in Springfield, Mass., April 29, 1857. Like many successful business men, Mr. Luke was thrown on his own resources early in life. His first effort in the paper industry was at the age of 16 years, when he was employed in the mill of the Jessup & Moore Paper Company at Rockland, Del., of which his father was superintendent at the time. Here he served for some seven years. Later be became superintendent of the paper mill of the Mead & Nixon Company of Dayton, Ohio; then of the Morrison & Cass Paper Company of Tyrone, Pa.; later of the Bremaker-Moore Paper Company of Louisville, Ky., and later still of the Richmond Paper Company at Providence, R. I. In the aggregate he served for some 15 years in these several mills. During these years of service and hardship, his splendid character developed; his active and thirsty mind absorbed an intimate knowledge of the paper industry, and his ambition to do something big in the paper industry intensified,—an ambition splendidly realized in the later years of his life.

With this splendid experience as a foundation, and urged on by this laudable ambition, he in conjunction with his father and brothers, organized a company and built a mill at Piedmont, W. Va., in 1899, for the manufacture of sulphite pulp. This was but a modest beginning, but by the exercise of a genius seldom equaled, by untiring industry and stern courage, by conforming at all times to the dictates of truth and honor, and by the splendid co-operation of his brothers and other business associates, his great ambition was realized at last in the splendid company of which he died president and of which he was so justly proud.

Of Scotch ancestry, Mr. Luke was clear-minded, forceful, industrious, determined, successful, yet no man was more generous, more modest, more gentle. To have known him intimately was at once an honor and an inspiration. He had a splendid confidence in human nature. He trusted his friends and associates with a faith that could not be shaken. His friends trusted him without reserve. With him from a friendship once formed there was no turning.

That he will be greatly missed there is no doubt; yet to those who knew him most intimately, and hence will miss him most sorely, there remains the consolation of his splendid life and character which are at once a priceless heritage and an inspiration.

Mr Luke is survived by his wife, Mrs. Grace B. Luke; three sons, Allen L. Luke, Manager of the plant at Piedmont, W. Va., Chas. W. Luke, Manager of the plant at Cass, W. Va. William G. Luke, connected with the Sales Department at New York; and two daughters, Mrs. Rose Luke Nelson and Miss Virginia Luke, both of New York. The funeral services were held at his late home, "Guthrie Hall" Irvington on the Hudson, New York and the interment at Woodlawn Cemetery, New York, on Oct. 18. 1921.

SHRADER--GRIMES

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Grimes, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Thursday evening, October 20, 1921, when their daughter, Della Maye, became the happy bride of Clyde N. Shrader, of the Hills.

The happy couple entered the parlor which was beautifully decorated, and beneath an arch of pines and flowers the took the solemn vows that made them as one. Rev. C. B. Rutledge, pastor of the bride, performed the ceremony. After hearty congratulations and best wishes, were extended they marched to the dining room where a bountiful supper was served. The dining room was tastefully decorated with pines and crepe paper, pink, white and green being the color scheme used.

The beautiful bride was becomingly attired in a lovely costume of copenhagen blue silk and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The groom wore a handsome suit of steel grey. Miss Ena Shrader, was maid of honor and Clarence Bussard was the groom's best man.

Those present to witness the ceremony and enjoy the evening, were Mr. and Mrs. Hugh M. Grimes, Mrs. Jerusha Shinabery, grand-parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cain, Roy Cain and family, Willie Grimes and family, Forest Grimes brother of the bride and wife, Gladys Grimes, Lockie Gragg and family. Marvin Gragg Lewis Capenter, Beulah Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Shrader, Jesse Shrader, Ledford Shrader, Stanley Curry, Elsie May, Augustas Lough, Charlie McQuain, Albert Fertig, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson Gragg, Frank Deputy, Miss Grace Shinabery, Wilbur Shinabery, G. Maye Bussard, and little son, Burlynn. The evening was very enjoyably spent. The next morning the bride and groom motored to the home of the groom's parents where a grand reception awaited them.

The bride is a popular young lady of our neighborhood and will be greatly missed by her many friends.

The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Shrader of the Hills, and is a promising young business man. They will make their home with the groom's parents. We wish for them a long and happy life.

A Guest.

State Road Commission,
E. B. CARSKADON,
Secretary.

Notice

We are again in the fur business and we are going to be in a better position to handle raw furs than ever before. We solicit the patronage of Regular shippers; all the shippers that turned their furs into us said they had realized more money than by shipping their furs.

Don't fail to handle your furs nice. Be careful in skinning not to cut the hide and use plenty of nails in stretching: this will add greatly to the price we can get for your furs. Sure there are thousands of wild cat price lists sent out just to get your furs; don't be deceived by dishonest quotations. We give you an honest grade and fair treatment to all, so bring or ship us your fur. We want your entire collection for the winter.

We have some fine ready made scarfs for sale. Will also take your orders for raw furs to be made into scarfs. Yours for business,

L. D. SHARP,
Slaty Fork, W. Va

BANK PROFITEERING MUST CEASE, SAYS FEDERAL RESERVE

Bank profiteering must cease is the edict of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which last year piled up profits of 129 per cent, and was the biggest money maker in the entire Federal Reserve System during war inflation.

The bank does not declare in so many words that its members are not charging an eqnitable rate of interest but many persons in Wall Street believe that the great Federal Bank has reason for believing that in some instances there is too great a disparity between the rate at which the member banks rediscount their commercial paper and the rate the individual borrower, in other words, the maker of the instrument, is paying.

"Edict" of the Bank.

This is the very courteous communication, or ediet as the case may be, that the bank sent out yesterday to all member banks in the Federal Reserve district:

"To All Member Banks:

"In order that the officers of this bank might be fully informed of prevailing rates of interest and discount in this district, certain of the member banks have heretofore been good enough to furnish us periodically with reports of the rates which they are charging upon various classes of loans and investment. This information has proved to be of such value that it has been decided to supplement it by requesting member banks to report the rate of interest or discount received by them upon each note or bill offered to us for rediscount.

"As this additional information will assist us in keeping in touch with credit conditions throughout the entire district, the banks applying for rediscounts will, we trust, be ready to co-operate by filling out the appropriate column in the new forms of application blank, copies of which are enclosed herewith.

"Very truly yours.
"BENJ. STRONG, Governor."

Immediately after the withdrawal of Treasury domination over the banking situation of the country the Federal Reserve Board adopted a policy of forcing deflation through high rediscount rates and rationing of credits.

Rates Called "Outrageous."

Many member banks took advantage of this situation to exact usurious rates of interest from borrowers and to pile up profits to an extent that has been denounced by former Comptroller of the Currency John Skelton Williams and other critics as outrageous. Some banks charged as high as 20 per cent for money, and there are instances in which a bonus higher than that was extorted from distresied customers.

The result was that private lenders were able to exact extortionate rates of interest and immense funds were withdrawn from mortgages and lent in the open market or invested in high-interest-bearing bonds. The automatic effect of all this was to drive Victory and Liberty bonds to a sensational depression. to force the Government to borrow at high rates of interest and to suspend the construction of homes throughout the country.

Now money is virtually a drug on the market. Mortgages are once more in demand. Liberty bonds are climbing toward par and new bond issues are being tremendously oversubscribed. All this fulfills the prophecy in these columns months ago, all of which was based simply on the action that money seeks the avenue of most remunerative employment and that bank profiteering puts a premium on commercial enterprise that restrains business initiative and impairs industrial vitality.—New York World.

ANECDOTES OF PIONEER DAYS

In those days, when the country was sparcely settled, the people naturally hungered for amusement and excitement, and they lost no opportunity for gratifying this hunger. The semiannual terms of the circuit court affordod the chief opportunities for general gatherings of the people. On court weeks nearly all of the men in the county (and the county embraced more territory than it does now), came to the county seat and camped for the week, spending the time in listening to the court trials and in the various amusements which were the fashion then. I have spoken of my Great-grandfather's mill. There was a race track constructed from his mill to the court house at Montezuma perfectly straight and almost perfectly level. The track was graded, and as late as 1890 it could be followed all the way from one end to the other. I suppose it was a mile track.

In those days there was a race course at every county seat, and professional horsemen and jockeys went the rounds of the courts, along with the judges, solicitors and attorneys, and court weeks were enlivened with races along with other forms of amusement. Besides the races, there were soooting matches, gander pullings, wrestling and even fighting, and many a cross-roads bully measured his prowess with that of a rival bully from another cross-roads.

The first sheriff of the county was an illiterate man who could not read. When summonses or other process were put in his hands to be served he would have his wife read the names, one by one, and tie around them strings of different colors. He remembered the name by the color of the string, and it is said that he did not often make a mistake in delivering the papers.

In those days it was the custom for the sheriff to call all parties and witnesses when they were wanted in court. For the convenience of the sheriff, a small square window was cut in the wall of the court house near that end where the judge sat. Through this the sheriff would thrust his head and shoulder and call each name three times at the top of his voice.

The time came for the first court. Everybody was at the county seat and all who could find room were in the court house. The judge came in and squeezed his way through the crowd to his place at the farthest end of the room. The sheriff was excited. He had been at the county seat of some Georgia county years ago on court week. He remembered that the sheriff made his announcements in a loud voice, three times. But he could not remember the words that were used. He was ashamed to ask any one what he should say. He bravely stood by his little window, awaiting the orders of the Court. His Honor said, "Call Court, Mr. Sheriff." The sheriff thrust his head and shoulders as far as he could out of the little window and yelled, "I call court! I call court! I call court!" Now, the sheriff was "goosey." A man who knew, took advantage of the occasion to poke him in the ribs and say: "You've played hell." At that suggestion the sheriff, without withdrawing his head, continued to call, only in a still louder voice: "I've played hell! I've played hell! I've played hell!"

By and by a case was being tried, in which John Ganus and Bose Ganus were witnesses. The sheriff was told to call John and Bose Ganus. With great alacrity he thrust his head through the window and called: "John and Bose Ganus! John and Bose Ganus! John and Bose Ganus!" The judge called to him, "one at the time, Mr. Sheriff." The sheriff, whose head was still outside the window and who heard indistinctly the words spoken on the inside, yelled out: "One at a time! One at a time! One at a time!" "You've fixed it now," said the judge. The sheriff continued to yell, saying: "We've fixed it without you! We've fixed it without you! We've fixed it without you!"

During the progress of a trial there was a commotion outsice the court house which attracted the people on the inside so that they disturbed the court by filing out almost en masse. The Court commanded the sheriff to go out and see what the excitement was and to take means to remove it from the vicinity of the court house. The sheriff returned directly and said "I can't stop it your Honor." "Why, what is it?" the Court asked. "It's a poker game," the sheriff replied, "and there's two hundred and fifty dollars on the board." "In that case," said his Honor, "the Court will take a recess until the game is over," whereupon he went outside along with the crowd and watched tee game which was being played in the chimney jamb of the court house.

These anecdotes and many others were told in my hearing many years ago by my step-father, Mr. James Parker.

MRS ABSALOM SYDENSTRICKER

The death of one of our most useful missionerirs on the foreign field deserves more than a passing notice, for, aside from the long life of service rendered by this handmaid of the Lord, many in the Greenbrier Valley and especially in Pocahontas county, of which she was a native, are deeply interested in her and her loved ones.

News was received by letter about the first of November, 1921, that Mrs. Carrie M. Sydenstricker, wife of Rev. Absalom Sydenstricker of Chinkiang, China, had fallen asleep. No details of the last days have been received except the information that she had been declining for about eight months and that her trouble was an affection of the heart.

Mrs. Sydenstricker was the daughter of Hermanus Stultiug and his wife Hannah, who came to America from Utrecht, Holland, in the year 1848, landing in New York City the 21st of June. They sought refuge in this land of freedom from the persecutions that had then arisen in Holland over the introduction of liberalism into the theology of the State church of Holland. These people who left their own beloved land to try the undreamed of experiencee of the new world did so under a profound urgency of conscience. They were not only Calvinists, but they were deeply religious. Their religion had cost them a great deal—everything, in fact, that men ordinarily held dear—home and friends and associations it was worth all it had cost.

In such a home Mrs Sydenstricker was born March 9, 1857, and in an atmosphere of religious fervor akin to the Covenanter spirit of Scotland she was reared. The type of religion fruiting in such a home is apt to be austere and forbidding but there was none of this spirit in Mrs. Sydenstricker for she had learned too well the grace that the Apostle so beautifully describes in 1st Cor. 13, which suffereth long and is kind.

At about fourteen years of age she was admitted to communion as a member of Oak Grove church in which she had been baptized. She early matured a rare piety and when very young decided that God had called her to go to the Foreign Field. It fell out in the Providence of God that her pastor's brother, Rev. Absalom Sydinstricker, who was then planning to go as a missionary to China, came to Hillsboro on a visit and met Miss Stulting. The Lord led the young couple very soon to see that His plan for them was that they should go as man and wife to their new work. They were married in September 1880, and immediately proceeded to China where they opened the station at Chinkiangpu and there remained several years in the service of the Master. They then removed to Chinkiang and labored abundantly there until God called his handmaid to a higher service, about October 21, 1921.

To these missionaries of the Cross there were born six children, only three of which survive—Edgar Sydenstricker, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Pearl Buck, a missionary in the northern Presbyterian church, and Miss Grace, who had just returned to China from America upon the completion of her education in time to be with her mother in her last days on earth.

Mrs. Sydenstricker leaves two brothers, Messrs. C. J. Stulting, of Hillsboro, and C. L Stulting, Alderson; and three sisters, Mrs. John A. Myers, Ronceverte; Mrs. F. A. Doyle, Valley Center, Va ; and Mrs. N. J. Doyle, Monterey, Va., whose coming she will await in her heavenly home. To all these, many friends extend sincerest christian sympathies, and they will pray the grace of our blessed Redeemer to support the lonely husband in his far off home.

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne."

J. C. J.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kays, of Campbelltwon, November 22, 1921, and called away their darling little son James, aged seven years, seven months and 29 days. He leaves to mourn his lose father, mother and and one little sister, Catherine. He was a bright and loving little boy and was loved by all who knew him. Burial service was conducted at Edray on the 25th by the Mocse Lodge. He will be sadly missed in his home, but God knows best, and all is well. "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of God." F.

In memory of little James Kays. Calm was the day when you left us dear James; bright did the sun shine but oh what a dark shadow was cast when we thought of you as gone. We often sit and think of you dear James when all alone, for memory is the only thing that grief can call its own but God gave and he has taken away the loving son and brother of our home and in the years to come we will understand why he left us here.

A MILLION DOLLAR BABY

Naturally, those who see this heading expect to read about some "baby heir" of an American multi-millionaire, and they will be surprised to learn that such a description applies to a scientific pyorrhea preventative, tooth and mouth preparation, and they will doubtless wonder how such a product ever came to be spoken of as a "million dollar baby." So the story must be told. Over three years ago, the Research Department of the Rexall Company, in consultation with chemical specialists, began an exhaustive investigation into the disease Pyorrhea, and its proper treatment, and in their characteristically thorough way spent over two years before they perfected a compound which answered every test, according to their high standards. Such a remarkable demand has been created that they have named it "the Million Dollar Baby." Probably no preparation that is devised for use as a germ combatter was found so efficacious in preventing all contagious diseases that enter the system through the mouth and nose as Klenzo Liquid Antiseptic. Especially was it proved that users of it completely escaped all attacks of the flu when so prevalent last year. This Rexall product can be purchased in 25c. and 50c. special toilet bottles at

There was a fine supper in the I. O. O. F. Hall Thursday night which was enjoyed by a large crowd of people.

The new road coming from Arbovale will soon be to Bartow, but on account of so much rain it is almost impassible except by horse back. Some cars have been going around by Top Alleghany to get to Greenbank.

The state has made a preliminary survey over the Staunton & Parkersburg Pike from Durbin to the Randolph County line

Ernest Oldaker and Oscar Slaven have gone to Morgantown to build several houses that they have under contract.

Our town seems to be flooded with poodle dogs. Sorry to see them come in fashion. We hope that Santa Clause will bring some large dolls Christmas.

The Central Garage at Durbin will change proprietors the first of the year.

The picture show at the Durbin Theatre has not been running for a long time.

Miss Virginia Hull was home from Alderson for Thanksgiving, where she has been going to school. We also noticed R. R. Dodd on our streets Thanksgiving from Alderson.

Our town is greatly improved by a fine school building.

L. D. Fowler of Gormania, is in our town on business.

S. T. Ruckman was visiting his son, John Ruckman, in Crabbottom, Va., Thanksgiving and reported a fine time.

Toytown and Dollyville Now Bid You Welcome

Childhood's happiest dreams of Christmas morning could not picture such a wealth of Toys Dolls, Books, Games, Etc. There are heaps and heaps of them. Old Santa certainly has been a hard worker since last Christmas.

Here are some of the things you will see--Dolls with beautiful, almost human, faces and real hair. Dolls with coquettish eyes and alluring smiles. Blocks with big letters on them in all sorts of pretty colors and many with animals and pictures. Toy Soldiers that stand up just as straight as big brother did when he wore his uniform: big elephants and tedey bears; cows that moo and pigs that squeal, and all sorts of circus animals so that you can have your own circus. Neat Little Trunks that will hold all of dolly's clothes. Tops that spin and sing or play a tune. and all sort of Animal Toys on wheels. And then there are toys that you can wind up and they will dash around the room as though they were alive; Building Toys that will keep the boy absorbed for hours and teach him how big engineering feats are accomplished. Automobiles with real horns to toot; and big toys and little toys---almost no end to them.

Even great big stacks of books with wonderful pictures and stories that children will pore over until they go to sleep.

Dressed Dolls

A foot high, dressed in flowered lawn or striped percale rompers or in frocks with belts and collars.

And let every little girl who comes to Toytown have one only for a dime.

Doll Clothes

Of course you will want some extra clothes for your doll and naturally you will need some new clothes for your best doll that you have had sinoe last Christmas.

Here are lots and lots of dresses, shoes, stockings, hats, sweaters, caps, and other things. They are from 50c to $5.00

December Poultry

Any time this month we can handle shipments of strictly Fancy Fat Poultry advantageously, in suring the shippers extra good prices but unless your produce is in fine shape hold it until the Holidays. By no means ship when the weather is too warm.

The extremely hot weather just preceding Thanksgiving was certainly a thunderbolt to us. Many shipments arrived in such bad condition that they were conviscated by Board of Health as unfit for food. This we were powerless to prohibit. Not withstanding this unfortunate condition we were able to handle an immense quantity of poultry at excellent prices.

If any customer was dissatisfied with his returns please write us; we are here to serve the poultry Growers and Shippers and nothing short of what humans can do will please us. We appreciate the confidence you place in us in permitting us to handle your shipment and always endeavor to express our thanks by realizing the highest possible prices for your stock.

Write us for the Christmas and New Year outlook;

THE POCAHONTAS TIMES

Entered at the Postoffice at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR.

THURSDAY DEC. 8, 1921

Some of the labor officials who were indicted in Logan county for putting an army in the field last summer were called in court and they asked for a change of venue, preferring to be tried in some other county than Logan, the county that threw a thin long line of defenders along the Spruce Ridge to keep back the invaders. The court seems to have left the question of the county to the lawyers on either side, and the attorneys for the State decided that they would agree to Pocahontas county or to Logan county. The attorneys for the defendants countered with a proposition that they would submit twenty counties in a list to the other side and allow it a choice, or as an alternative, the State could list twenty counties, and let the defense pick out one in which to go through the ordeal of being tried.

After much debate, the State gave as an ultimatum, Logan or Pocahontas, and the defense seems to have considered that to be like the choice between hell and high-water. And when court adjourned, there had been no county named in which to have the trial.

In a disdainful sort of way, the citizens of Pocahontas county heard of the objections raised by the defense to being put in jeopardy of their lives and liberty in Pocahontas County. They, the defendants, said that a great throng of people and a great cloud of witnesses would be on hand at the trial and that Pocahontas County did not have hotel accommodations for the visitors. In other words, that the play could not be well staged here. That if they brought their suites here as the old time Britons rode to Westminister, and camped in the mud, that they, the union officials, could not sleep so soft, nor feast so high, as in Parkersburg, for instance, or some other great town of the State.

That is true in a great measure, but as a matter of fact, the hospitality of the people of this county is very elastic and so far nobody has suffered, and the county seat often puts up a thousand or so visitors without any great strain on the equipment.

We cannot immagine anything short of the plague that would be as unwelcome as one of these big coal country trials such as we had here in 1920, and such as Greenbrier has suffered from in 1921. But we all learned some time ago that all such things may be expected in a day's work and while it is a relief to us not to have to go through one of these long drawn out, nerve racking trials, we do not feel that the reason given was all the reason for not wanting to face the music in this county. There was something specious about the argument that they did not want to come here because they would be crowded.

With the indicted persons flitting hither and yon to be tried it is fast becoming a case of "cussed's his last stand," and a vain hunt for new ground to wrestle upon.

We are rather proud of our county as a place in the bush where God and man may meet. The way of the transgressor is hard, and the clear headed law abiding men of this county, are determined that law and order shall not perish from the earth. At vast expense and trouble they are driving this fact home to the consciousness of the lawless, and thank the Lord, a brighter day seems to be breaking. The courts and juries of this county have had a most strenuous time in the year of our Lord, 1921, but the sweet remembrance of the just, shall flourish when he sleeps indust.

The wicked shall see it and be grieved; he shall gnash with his teeth and melt away; the desire of the wicked shall perish.

An unfortunate friend of ours once said that there were thirteen reasons why he did not want to be tried in this his native county. And every one of his reasons was a good one.

They say that that the divorce evil is growing, that is that there are more divorces now per couple than before, and that we must all try to remain more steadfast in this matter of marriage. As a matter of fact, tnere ought to be very few divorce cases, and the most of them grow out of a perversity of imagination which always causes every one to think that he is badly placed in this life. That is human nature. The best that can be done out of this unhappy sinful nature of things is to endure. Divorce laws are wise, but like a good many other severe laws, there are to be reserved for desperate cases.

We are very skeptical about that thing that you read about in books called happy marriages. We do not believe that persons can be joined as closely as matrimony joins them and be entirely free from clashes, for just as there is no happiness except such as is measured by comparison with sorrow, so there can be no such thing as peace without war, for these things all go by comparison. And it is likely that if this could be impressed upon the minds of the high contracting parties, they would drag along together until a state of toleration was reached, instead of having a law suit about it.

There are myriads of couples who are counted as happily married who have come throught periods of distress, anger, humiliation, and all kinds of domestic trouble, and who have been steadfast, and who have been richly rewarded for that modicum of patience which kept them from separating and going down into misery and depression.

In the old days in Wales, they had a custom that was effective in preventing family quarrels and was meant to influence ladies who lost their tempers and hit their husbands with deadly weapons like brooms, tongs and rolling pins. When such practices got to be public so as to scandalize the neighborhood, the neighbors had a cwnstree trial. They met at the court house, and neither husband nor wife was present. Twelve men were made a jury, and another was a judge. The husband had an attorney, and the wife had an attorney, and there was a public trial at which the evidence was heard as to whether the angry wife yielded to an irresistible impulse to beat up her husband. If a verdict of guilty was brought in, the judge pronounced the sentence of death. An effigy of the woman was then constructed and conveyed to a gallows in the public square, and there hanged, and fired at by the crowd until it was completely destroyed. It is said that this custom did much towards keeping down family quarrels

We cannot take a stand against divorces for there are so many meritorious cases that the law is absolutely necessary. But fully two thirds of the cases are such that the parties only think they have unusual troubles in double harness, and if they had been willing to endure a little longer, their lives need not have been wrecked by the divorce proceedings.

"Patience; accomplish thy labor, accomplish thy work of affection!
Sorrow and silence are strong," and patience endurance is godlike.
Therefore accomplish thy labor of love, till the heart is made godlike,
Purified, strengthened, perfected, and rendered more worthy of heaven."

The nations have been getting acquainted with each other in Washington at the national talk feast on the question of a naval holy day. They have been having a perfectly delightful time and if there was any delegate who wanted to make a speech and who was not given an opportunity to do so, we have not heard of the instance.

They have that man Wells up there to write about it, and he is a trouble breeder, for he knows a lot about it, and does not realize that he does not know it all. But he has had to write so much that his thoughts have been pretty well covered up by words until they are harmless. Once in a while a headline shows where he is submerged and where to look for his torpedoes.

There is no question but what the building of these absurb battleships have been stopped. It has reached a point when it was about as expensive and useless as would be the piling of one mountain on top of another. It took as much money to build a battleship as it would take to build, equip, and maintain a university the the size of Yale. They built a battleship called the West Virginia the other day and got it to the point where it was sent sliding down the ways into the water, where it stands a good chance to be scrapped. If this battleship were finished, the sum required would be sufficient to connect every countyseat in West Virginia with a class A road something that we held an election over and for which it will take years and years to raise the money.

In addition to the result that is sure to follow of diverting the money for battleships to the road funds, the President has taken this opportunity of trying to promote peace by a sort of a gentleman's agreement not to fight until an opportunity is given some international board to adjust the differences. It is along the line of the League of Nations, to which we do not have the honor to belong, being prevented therefrom by the ghostly shapes of a dead past. It is a matter of opinion as to whether it is a better or worse position than to belong to the League of Nations, but there is no question but what the President shows that his heart is in the right place in making the suggestion. And that he does not make it depend upon the Senate, shows that his head is in the right place, for the Senate is composed of many men of many minds.

To resolve to do right. That is the proper course. We have yet to hear that there is any other true course

After all the national life is not different from the individual life—not to give offense, but at the same time to have the courage to defend ourselves, even to the extent of believing that the best parry is a thrust.

For the last six weeks it has been raining and the skin of the earth is pretty well saturated. If we had only believed that the Lord would provide, how much we would all have enjoyed the fine weather of the spring, summer and fall. But the thirsty land got on our nerves and the failing springs filled us all with fear and apprehension. In a mountain country like ours, the fact that we can usually count on rains to keep everything fresh and beautiful in the warm months is the one thing that we have over and above the easy life in the lowlands.

One man of mature years was so much affected by the continued drought that he allowed that it looked like the beginning of the end of the world. It is one of the most difficult matters to remember as we get near the end of our earthly tether, that we ourselves are getting old and are failing and not the world.

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call upon him while he is near:

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord.

For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.

For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater:

So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.

For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.

Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign and shall not be cut off.

The other day when we were wandering through the woods we came to an old field that was grown up with brush and briers but which had patches of sod struggling against adversity. In this sod there were some little funnel like holes where the skunk had been digging down to get the grub that lives in the grass roots and which does so much harm to the sod in a grazing country. And we approved of the neat way in which the wild animal had been fighting our fight and removing the enemy of the essential grass. And when we came to think of it, it seemed to us that here was an animal which had no faults and which was a true friend to man.

It may be that occasionally the skunk will come pestering around the farm house. But if it is not disturbed it will take itself off without offending anyone. When it does come to the home premises, it seems to be attracted by the spring house and it will go in and look around and often be found there doing no apparent harm, but just hanging around, probably attracted by the milk and butter. Then if the folks raise a rumpus and scare the skunk, it may happen that in its fright and panic of being attacked, it will throw off the contents of its scent bag and spoil the spring house for weeks. But if left alone it will go away without doing any damage. If the housewife is nervous and cannot wait the pleasure of the unwelcome visitor, the right way to eject it is to take it by the tail and holding the tail down gently steer it into the open air. We have seen this done but have never practiced it. The Fabian policy is the best. Wait until the skunk goes away. The theory of the tail hold is that it cannot throw a spray of perfume without erecting its tail.

There is a statement made by a certain school that the skunk is good for food along with the muskrat, the groundhog, and some other smellers, but me never hankered after the skunk as that kind of a game animal. It surely would have a wild taste. The real danger that the skunk undergoes is his valuable fur coat, for our women must walk gay, and money buys their gear, and trappers find a way, to get them year by year. There is a conflict in the minds of the game preservers and just at this time there is a sort of compromise statute on the books that permits the skunk to be taken in December and January and protects it the rest of the year, though the law will not be perfect until it finds a way to remove the pelt without injury to the animal. For as it is now, when a skunk has his hide taken away his usefulness is over.

Walking a little further through the old improvement, we came upon the sign of a trapper. A big round flat piece of rock which would weigh about fifty pounds was resting at an angle of about forty-five degrees on the sod supported by an arrangement of sticks that looked like the figure four, and on the trigger end were two large bits of beef, one cooked and one raw. This is what is called a deadfall and was meant to attract the polecat to his destruction.

The law is not very well promulgated through the State, that is, we find that a number of persons do not know that the skunk is protected at all, and at this time the game authorities are trying to impress on the public mind that the skunk must be let alone for ten months in the year.

The other day in the closed season the chief deputy of this state was in a considerable sized town in central West Virginia, when he met in Main Street, a small boy proudly swinging the carcass of a fine polecat. It being in the line of his employment, the game warden engaged the boy in conversation and the boy told him that he had caught it in a trap. Then the game warden told him his interest in the subject and asked him if he did not know it was against the law to take polecats in November. The boy looked scared and threw the polecat at the feet of the officer and ran away as hard as he could go, and the officer has not seen him since. He left the fragrant carcass with a neighbor and told him to give it back to the boy and tell him not to catch any more polecats out of season.

Notice To Stockholders

Notice is hereby given that the annual stockholders meeting of the Marlinton and Stony Creek Mutual Telephone Company will be held at Pine Grove School house, Onoto, W. Va., on Saturday, January 7, 1922, at 1 o'clock, for the purpose of electing officers and board of directors, and performing any other business that may properly come before said meeting.

This 6th day of December 1921.

Geo. A. C. Auldridge,
Secretary.

The second meeting of Hosterman Literary Society was held December 2nd, with a very good attendance considering weather conditions. Being as it is a rural commnnity and on account of heavy rainfall, some of the pupils were unable to be present which was somewhat of a drawback on the program. Excellent behavior was highly appreciated.

The next meeting will consist of a Christmas program and will be held Saturday night, Dec. 24. Patrons and those interested in the school are especially invited.

BOX SUPPER

There will be a box social at the Hosterman school house on Saturday night, December 10th, at 7:30. Every one is cordially invited to come and help us and enjoy themselves. Proceeds for helping to bear financial side of a Xmas tree for pupils.

THURSDAY, MARCH 4. 1920

Attention is called to the article reproduced in this issue prepared by Capt. Cobb, of Randolph County, about our pet Indians, the Mingos. There is much valuable historical matter in the article and it is well worth your attention.

But we must enter a vigorous protest against two of the historian's conclusions—first that the Mingos did not live at Mingo Flats, and second, that Mingo ought to be spelt with a little m, as it means outlaw or some such name.

We know exactly how the Captain's mind was poisoned on this subject. He is echoing conclusions reached by historians who lived in other states and who have cast doubts on the identity of the tribe. It all goes to show that the only way to preserve the history of your own people is to do it yourself and not depend on some person a thousand miles away to do you justice. Such men do not know and they do not care.

To doubt that the Mingo Indians once had their tribal center at Mingo Flats is equivalent to what would be the case if some historian would arise a hundred years hence and deny that there were ever any catfish in Greenbrier River, and then cap the climax by adding that he had his doubts if there ever was such a fish anyway.

An old man told us thirty years ago that the Indians that last lived in this section were Mingos and he could remember when there were traces of their camps in the periwinkle shell piles along the river. We never doubted that until we began to read all the histories that came to hand and then for a season we doubted that there ever was such an animal as the Mingo. But as time went on we gathered a great mass of information and got to the time when we could weigh evidence better, we saw that tradition is true and that the last Indian residents of these hills and valleys were Mingos and that they had thier city at Mingo Flats, where they raised their winter corn.

Washington made his way to the French Forts on the Ohio and reported the Mingos living on the waters of that river. Robert Files and David Tygart settled in Tygarts Valley in 1754. This was the year after Washington tad been at the forks of the Ohio. Files and Tygart found an Indian town at Mingo Flats and determined to abandon the country on account of the contiguity of an Indian village. Before Files could move, he and his whole family were killed by the Indians.

Just about this time Greenbrier, the site of the town of Marlinton was made a fortified place to watch the Warrior's Road, known generally as the Seneca Trail. In 1755, Braddock took a big army into the woods just north of us and there met the Shawnees, the Delewares, and the Mingos, and other Indians allied with the French and left 800 dead men on the field whose bones whitened in the sun for three years.

After that the only place held by the whites for three years west of the Alleghany was the Greenbrier Valley centering around Marlinton.

But vengeance overtook the slayers of Braddock's men. The Iroquois, with headquarters in what is now the State of New York, had at that time kept unbroken a contract with the New York settlers made 138 years before, with the Dutch of New Amsterdam. Corlear was the Dutchman's name who made that treaty and for 170 years the Indians called the governors of New York, respectively, The Corlear. This bond endured and was stronger than death, for when the colonies declared their independence, these Indians adhered to Great Britain, and the Americans for that literally wiped them off of the face of the earth.

After Braddock's defeat, the Iroquois, with that as an excuse, or without one, swept the whole State of West Virginia clear of every French Indian ally, and passed a law that no strange Indian should live in the territory east of the Ohio River. Therefore the Mingos abandoned their town at Mingo Flats and moved to the west bank of the Ohio, just above Wheeling, at the place called Mingo Bottom, and from that time forth they raided West Virginia, and klled more white people than all the other tribes combined. After an outrage, it was often hard to tell what tribe of Indians was to blame, but the Mingos were most often identified. Among the occasions the Mingos were identified as being present were: Deckers Creek, New River foray, Muskingum, Simpson Creek, Kelly raid, Muddy Creek, Big Lick, Point Pleasant, Fort Pitt, Fort Laurens, Piqua, Tuscarawa River, and Bryants Station.

In the seventeen seventies when the permanent settlers came to the Tygarts Valley they found abandoned houses of the Mingos at Mingo Flats. Let it be known that the Mingos were our private scourge and that the reason that they are being lost in obscurity is because the local West Virginian historians have let northern people do their writing for them. Roosevelt calls the Mingos a mongrel banditti like the renegade Cherokees. Just because the Mingos were making it hot for the settlers who possessed themselves of their ancient domain around the extreme headwaters of the Ohio, and attending strictly to their own territory the northern historian has slighted them. But they were very real to our ancestors.

Simon Girty was a Mingo Chief, but the great chief was the literary Logan. Logan also had a slogan: "Ten for one." Meaning ten white scalps for every red scalp lost. Captain Cobb says his name was John Logan. We deem it impossible to have been fed on Logan since we were in the first reader and not to have heard him called John. Why John?

It was well known that his name was Tah-gah-jute, but then as now white men were impatient of strange names. "You say your name is Grabtiswistisky? Its Graham from now on." So it was Logan, and now John Logan. Some doubt has been cast on the authenticity of the speech of Logan, but there need not be. It was delivered in the Mingo language to Col. Gibson wrote wrote it down and then translated it. Still we wonder what it would have sounded like if Logan had had a less eminent secretary.

A great many historians think until Col. Gibson edited the speech that it was in the following words, to-wit: "Tell Dunmore to go to hell!" And that the speech then was translated into English by the gifted Colonel.

It is a pretty good speech. It makes a good oration for a schoolboy. Maybe you have noticed that we occasionally quote from other authors. One of the earliest that we remember stealing was when the world was young. We were playing Indian. Our name was Bear Track and we were supposed to be an extra bad Indian. We were captured. We were told that we were to be burned at the stake after each separate hair was pulled out. Our reply was firm and dignified. "Bear Track never felt fear. He would not turn up on his heel to save his life." We can remember it as if it was yesterday, including a stone bruise on the aforesaid heel.

Bear Track appeals to Captain Cobb to restore the Mingos and to set them down on Mingo Flats where they properly belong, and keep away from all of that trash that foreigners are writing. Bear Track appeals to him to know why he has taken his pen in his hand and massacred all the Mingos, so that not one remains. Bear track has killed many, but Captain Cobb has killed them all.

"See! She starts,—she moves,—she seems to feel the thrill of life along her keels! The ship of state is referred to. The reason is that the President has peen called back from the brink, and is once more in charge. If any person ever had a doubt that Wilson was not a ruler in fact as well as in name, it is set at rest now.

He landed right in the middle of the pernicious activities of the partitioners of Europe and showed them where they were sowing the seeds of another war in the settlement of the Adriatic question. That they were making another Alsace-Lorraine for future generations to wrangle over. And the great men of Europe submitted to the moral force of his reasoning. They accepted his proposition to let Italy and Jugo-Slavia settle the dispute themselves as they were the parties in interest.

"There once were two cats of Kilkenny,
Which thought there was one cat too many,
So they mewed and they bit,
And they scratched and they fit,
Till, excepting their nails, and the tips of their tails,
Instead of two cats there weren't any."

It does not seem to have occurred to the diplomats that the logical thing to do was to introduce the contestants to each other and let them talk it over and agree. Blessed are the peace makers.

Then the president had the job of replacing the Secretary of State. Everybody had all the guesses that were as to who would be named for the second highest office in the world, and no one guess was right. The President gave the place to the greatest living Bull Moose, Bainbridge Colby. Some may say that Perkins has the largest set of horns, but there is no doubt that Colby has the most symmetrical head. In 1912, Colby was the second in command in the Progressive movement. He did not call his fellow Republicans burglars, neither did he take up with them again.

We have been wondering if a lot of the troubles of the Grand Old Party did not come from reading in the Colby horoscope that he was one day to be the Premier of America, and not interpreting it properly. He kept the even tenor of his way, and there came a time when a level headed man was needed, and so they called on him. It took the breath away from those editors and politicians who think they are taken seriously. They had nothing ready for the occasion. It suited us. It looked like one of those things that unite the people. We get ashamed sometimes and wonder if we are weak in always approving what the President does, but there is no question but that he is the easiest man to defend in the world. Tell that disreputable firm of Bias & Prejudice to step aside for a moment and take it up with your soul. The reason is to be found in the Bible: Righteousness exalteth a nation.

Then the President needing a wise and discreet man to send to China picked out an old time Republican by the name of Charles R. Crane, though we think he ought to be known as Charlie Crane. Eleven years ago he started to China and got as far as San Francisco and was called back, called down, and called off. President Taft had appointed him Minister to China and at that time Thomas Gradgrind, of Coketown, was Secretary of State. He was a worshiper of facts. It was the proud boast of Coketown that it had never produced a poet. The multiplication table was his creed, and his slogan was two and two make four. Under that banner the Gradgrinds always served. Facts sufficed for them.

Charlie started to the land of the Setting Sun but got only to the land of the Besetting Sin. He burbled as he went, and while we do not remember all the gossip of that time, we do remember that we all said it was a case of a lost notch stick, and a little involuntary madness. Anyway Taft tried to save Charlie but his stern Secretary of State would not let him.

"One, two! One two! And through and through
The Gradgrind blade went snicker-snack,
He left him dead, and with his head
He went galumping back.
And hast thou slain my Minister?
Come to my arms, my beamish boy!
O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!
He chortled in his joy."

In those days a diplomat was supposed to either keep his mouth shut or lie, and it seems that Charlie did neither. Nobody seems to remember what he said that caused the trouble. We have cudgled our brain but cannot remember. But even if he had boasted that he would paint the head of a mandarin sky-blue, it was hard on him to be cut off in the flower of his appointment.

Now Senator Gradgrind sits in the Senate, and will pass on the appointment of both Charlie and Mr. Colby. He may give them the cold steel.

It is now said that Taft wanted to forgive and forget all of them trespasses but that his Secretary of State sternly informed him that if he did that he could look for a new secretary and that Taft then put his dilemma before the Minister and to save Taft from embarassment, the Minister resigned.

Secretary of States do not pull that kind of a bone with impunity in these days. The answer might be that the world is full of secretaries but that there is but one Charlie Crane. Let the erring brother go on in peace.

Weather forecast: Fair and cloudy with rain. Snow accompanied with great heat. High winds and a calm day. Polititions are warned of impending coalition and zero weather.

Governor Cornwell lives on waters that flow into tidewater in Virginia, but nevertheless he says that the women are to vote.

Here is the conclusion of the whole matter. The women up this way want to vote but they are not noisy about it.

The election laws are about to reach out and embrace the lady.

How would it do to let the old booze histers go on and drink but make it a hanging matter to give a boy a drink.

Or have cities of refuge in various portions of the country where nothing but drinkers were allowed to reside, where they could have all the bottled misery that their hearts desire. There should be walled cities with the old familiar sign over the gateway: He who enters here leaves hope behind.

See Coalition raise its horrid head.
The Politician wishes he were dead;
He sees his hard earned party strength must cease,
It is enough to make him rob his own valise.
He knows his hunch has told him in the past,
That Woman Suffrage would get him at last,
But true to form he ends his public life.
And for his utter ruin blames his wife.
He has no rum to take or set before a friend,
He knows that he has reached the Bitter End.
He chews the rag and tells how bad he feels,
And asks the world, if this aint hell on wheels,
Glooming and groping through the gathering murk,
Cursing the day he had to go to work,
He kicks a dog which tries to lick his hand—
Too bad! Too bad! It sure does beat the band.

Commissioner's Sale

Valuable Real Estate

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court for Highland County, Va., rendered in vacation on January 29th, 1920 in the chancery cause of Annie S. Bussard et al, v. Chas. Stanley Dever et als., I will on Saturday, the 6th day of March, 1920 offer for sale at public auction at the front door of the court house of said county in Monterey, Va., at 11 o'clock a. m. that valuable tract of grazing land known as the Charles Wade land, owned by the children of C. F. Dever deceased, situate in said county on the waters of Back Creek, adjoining the lands of D. G. Ruckman, H. F. Herold and others, containing 400 acres more or less.

This tract of land is nearly all improved and in sod, there being a small portion, about 50 to 75 acres in good timber, necessary for uses on the land. It is well known as one of the best grazing farms in the county, and this is a rare opportunity to buy land of this quality at public sale.

TERMS—One sixth of the purchase money is required to be paid in cash on the day of sale, and the remainder to be paid in five equal annual instalments from that day, with interest payable annually, the purchaser giving bonds with approved personal security for the deferred payments, and the title being retained as ultimate security.

EDWIN B. JONES, Spl. Comr.
Monterey, Va.

I, W. H. Matheny, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Highland county, do certify that the bond required of the commissioner by the decree mentioned, has been duly executed.

W. H. MATHENY, Clerk.

At a Special Session of the County Court held for the County of Pocahontas, at the Court-house thereof, on Tuesday, the 3rd day of February, 1920.

EDRAY DISTRICT

Precinct No. Seven.

It appearing to the Court that the public convenience and public good require that a new voting precinct be established in the Edray District, to be known as Voting Precinct No. 7, and to include a part of the territory now embraced in Precints Nos. 2 and 6, it is therefore ordered by the Court that said Voting Precinct No. 7, be established as follows, to-wit: Beginning on the line of Precinct No. 6 (Buckeye) at the high point on the Griffin Place, thence running through Precinct No. 6, to the high point on Lee Beard's Place, so as to include Emory Miller in this Precinct, thence around the head of Day's Run, so as to include its waters in this precinct, to the Big Loup on Black Mountain, on the Little Levels District Line, thence with the line of said District to the Webster County Line, thence with the Webster County line to where the same crosses Gauley River, thence up Gauley River to the head thereof; thence on a straight line to the top of Red Lick Mountain, thence on a line to the point of beginning so as to include Elmer Baxter, W. H. Gilmore, and W. M. Vanreenan in this Precinct, and leaving Bernard VanReenan in Precinct No. 2, (Edray.)

And the place of voting in this Precinct shall be at the school house at Woodrow.

GREENBANK DISTRICT

Precinct No. One.

And it further appearing to the Court that the public convenience and public good require that the lines of Precinct No. 1, in the Greenbank District, be changed so as to include a part of the territory now embraced in Precincts Nos. 6 and 9, and all the territory now embraced in precinct No. 8, it appearing to the Court that all of the voters in precinct No. 8, have petitioned this Court to discontinue the voting place in said precinct, it appearing that there is no necessity of continuing said voting precinct No. 8.

It is therefore ordered by the Court that the lines of said precinct No. 1 in said Greenbank District, be changed as aforesaid, and that the boundaries of said precinct be established as follows: Beginning at a point on the Greenbrier River at what is known as Pine island, thence a straight line to the Forks of Brush Run, thence a straight line to Nottingham's field on the point of the main dividing ridge, and with the water shed of said ridge, to the County Road, near W. DRESS OR UNDRESS

Much that is true has been said and printed about the dress, or rather the undress, of the modern woman. It has been pointed out that prostitution and immorality were practically unknown in prehistoric times, although the people wore little or no clothing. In some of the oldest countries wild tribes go almost naked yet. Tuberculosis, venereal diseases and other weaknesses of modern civilization are unknown to these primitive races.

The answer to the above is that in these primitive people the skin, lungs and digestive system function normally. Physical culture has kept the heart and brain active and alert. The functions of conserving and regulating the heat of the body is nearly lost by the skin of civilized people. When the skin is not kept clean, it loses much of the power of elimination of poisons. This forces the kidneys to do overwork, resulting in kidney disease.

For people to go naked is out of the question. Modest, pure minded, civilized people must wear clothing which conceals defects, improves bodily appearance, protects the body from heat and cold, and is a safe guard to virtue. Getting back to nature does not mean getting back to nudity. It simply means that we are dressing and acting so that all organs of the body have a chance to perform their natural functions.

Both state and Federal Governments are now carrying on a campaign against what is called social diseases. The success of this movement means much to our future citizenship. If we propose to "clean house" we must not be content with washing the basement floor, we must begin at the attic and work down.—U. S. Public Health Service.

WARNING TO MOONSHINERS

In sentencing Robert Weese to life imprisonment and Jasper Weese to 18 years in the penitentiary for murder, in Greenbrier circuit court, Judge Sharp said:

"The offense of which you have been convicted is the outgrowth or culmination of the illegal manufacture of liquors in which you have been engaged in the vicinity of the scene of the murder. It may be reasonably inferred from the evidence in this case that you brothers had been engaged in making moonshine liquor and that on the night preceding the murder of George Huffman you had a part of your whiskey stolen and we may gather from the evidence that you accused George Huffman and another of having taken your whiskey. In this you may be correct, yet even this being true it gave you no license to commit murder. The penalty in this case is severe, yet it is only commensurate with the crime that has been committed. I doubt not that the criminal annals of this county does not show a more deliberate killing as has been narrated by the witnesses in this case.

"This certainly should be a lesson to others who may be engaged in the manufacture of moonshine whiskey 'that the day of settlement will finally come, and should be enough to turn all those similarly engaged, to the paths of lawful pursuits.'"—West Virginia News.

THORNY CREEK

Quite an excitement was created in this section last Friday when an insane man was taken into custody by John Perry, W. F. Harmon and Summers Hoover. He gave his name as Walter I. Carnefix and said he was from Leander, Fayette county, this state. While he was apparently badly mentally unbalanced he gave no trouble and was peacably turned over to the authorities at Marlinton.

Rev. Miller, pastor of the Marlinton M. P. circuit has resigned his pastorate and returned to his home in Roane county.

Lee Swink was in this section recently, representing the Fruit Growers Nursery and attending other important business.

Samuel Hunley and family, of Virginia, spent a few days with Mrs. Hunley's father, J. E. Simmons. They have returned home.

Mrs. Dennis Perry has returned from Clover Creek, where she spent a week with her husband who is teaching the Thomas Spring school.

J. E. Simmons has formed a partnership with Warwick Friel and others, and is operating a sawmill near Thorny Creek.

Joe Dilley, Miley Waugh and Ressie, Moore each had a bunch of fur stolen on Wednesday night of last week.

W. L. Lane and wife, of Beard, were guests at the home of John Perry on Tuesday night of last week.

Mrs. Cash Miller and children are spending the winter with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Friel.

Summers Hoover, from Cass, has moved to Thorny Creek.

Uriah Bird and Levi Irvine were business callers in this section last week.

IN MEMORIAM

By Anna L. Price

Mrs. Absolam Sydenstricker, Missionary, died in China, October 21, 1921.

Servant of God, to thee farewell,
Thou art gone with Christ to dwell;
Toils and pains are overpast,
Thou art safely home at last.
It is well—why should we weep,
When the righteous fall asleep?
Dear heart, thou the Lord dost see,
And thy works do follow thee;
Thy children too, they shall arise,
To love and praise thee in the skies.

Seemeth but a little while,
Sate we 'neath thy words and smile,
Telling us of China's need,
Which thou knewest well indeed,—
Ah! methinks they'll miss thee there
With thine earnest thought and care;
Sainted pilgrim, rest thee now,
Heaven's light is on thy brow.

MY MAP

My face is not surpassing fine, but it's the only one I have, and I won't try to make it shine with paints or unguents or salve. A friend of mine had small repose, he worried much by day and night because he had a crookde nose that tapered gently to the right. He spent about a hundred bones with beauty doctors and their ilk, who told him in caressing tones, they'd make his beak as fine as silk. And now his lonely watch he keeps, a soul of peace and joy bereft, and when he sees his nose, he weeps, for now it tapers to the left. My aunt once had a lovely hide, her face like lilies kissed by dew; but paint and powder she applied, to be in line with all the crew. She doped her face with liquid wax and kalsomine and Magic Spray, and now she is a battleax who makes the horses run away. My nose and chin are all askew, my countenance is harsh and plain, but I just leave it where it grew—it doesn't cause me any pain. My whiskers form a brindled hedge and oftentimes obstruct the view, my moles and freckles stand on edge, one eye is green, the other blue. But when the beauty doctors come and ask to reconstruct my map (for which they'd charge a princely sum), I tell them I'm not such a sap.—Walt Mason, in the Chicago Daily News.

Senator Heflin (Dem., Ala.) made this prophetic declaration in a telling speech against the whitewashing of Senator Newberry:

"The way Senators voted on a question like this resulted in the retirement of some of them as the Senator from Oklahoma, (Mr. Owen) suggested. I have heard of Senators who were defeated because they voted to seat Lorimer. That same thing is going to happen in the Newberry case. It ought to happen, because when Senators make up their minds to vote to seat one in this body whose counsel admits that he spent nearly $200,000. Whenever Senators make up their minds to endorse such extravagant expenditures, then they need to be scourged out of this body themselves by the people of the sovereign states that they now represent. How will it be, Senators, when you are asked how you voted, when the question comes up as to whether or not seats should be bought in this Chamber? That is what you will have to answer, Senators, and you ought to have to answer it."

AS WE PASS

"The disarmament Conference must be successful. No opposition, specious or political, will be countenanced. There might be a fleeting temptation with a few to visit upon Mr. Lodge and his associates the same methods that be himself invoked against humanity, but it will be overwhelmned in the larger consideration of the general welfare.

"Doubtless in the strife for credit attention will be called to the Administration having been booted, led for the moment by the New York World and Senator Borah. It must be gratifying to the Idahoan that his fight was won, with the Administration actively at work in both the Senate and House against him.

"It will likewise be said and it can be avowed with abundant propriety that what is happening is but the fruit of Mr. Wilson's labors. We can afford to be generous and tolerant when we reflect upon the harm that has already accrued from the mean partison spirit that was kindled in America a year or two ago.

"We must not forget that the eastern line collapsed during the war not from the force of opposing military units. The voice of Woodrow Wilson, who proclaimed the gospel of justice for the small nations, and urged the creation of an international agency to curb the spirit of war, inspired legions to lay down their arms.

"Mr. Wilson's friends must recognize how peculiar is the flow of public sentiment To use a homely illustration: The fowl that lays the egg is oftimes prevented from hatching it.

"The old cry of America first has worn out. Concerted international morals and purpose are the world's salvation. International agreements alliances if you please, cannot, when emergency arises, be avoided.

"Christen this child of international progress what you will; suit your fancy as to the auspices under which the great movement goes on, we will be enleagued with nations in a common purpose—and the enterprise will be a League of Nations. More than that, the names of wise men who first visualized its possibilities for good and insisted upon both principle and plan being made a part of the Treaty of Versalles will be venerated by posterity."

"EVERYBODY GIVING CONGRESS HELL."

Here is the opinion of Congressman William R. Wood of Indiana, a stalwart Republican, spoken on the floor of the House, November 17, concerning public opinion of this Republican Congress:

"I know the very serious condition that is prevailing throughout the land I am only speaking the truth when I say that the people of this country employed in every vocation and in every character of busiess are giving this Congress hell. They are doing it because we have done nothing to stimulate business. They are doing it because we have done nothing to give employment to the unemployed. They are doing it because we have done nothing to benefit the farmer and stimulate the price of the farmers products.

VOL. XL NO 19 — MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, DECEMBER 22, 1921 — $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

EDUCATIONAL JOTTINGS

BY COUNTY SUPT. G. D. MCNEIL

Many inquiries have been received concerning the observance of Monday December 26th, as a holiday. The school law provides for the observance of Xmas as a holiday, if the 25th is a school day but not other wise. Since Xmas comes on Sunday there is no school holiday.

Some bulletins on the subject of the new teacher-training requirements have been received. The new law in regard to certification of teachers goes into effect next year and applicants for certificates should acquaint themselves with the law.

Next year an applicant for a first grade certificate must have completed one year of high school work and have credit for nine weeks training in professional subjects. It is possible for an applicant to qualify as to the high school work without attending high school. Four units constitute one year of high school work, and the State Department will give examination on certain subjects, which if passed, will give the necessary credit. These subjects and credit attached to them are shown below.

English, 1 unit
Commercial Geography, 1-2 unit
Physical Geography, 1-2 unit
Algebra, 1 unit
Arithmetic, 1-2 unit
European History, 1 unit
American History, 1-2 unit
Civics, 1-2 unit.

The examination in these subjects will probably be held in June, and any credit made will be accepted by the high schools and normal schools of the state.

Th normal training requirements may also be met by examination. In this, a credit of one unit is required and the subjects are Genaral Methods of Teaching, 1-2 unit, and History of Education, 1-2 unit.

Teachers may take the uniform examination in April, June, and July and have a first grade certificate issued provided the high school and professional work is completed by October 1, 1922.

Any inquiries regarding this certification problem will be answered by county superintendent. A list of textbooks to be used in preparing for examination in high school and professional subjects will be furnished on request.

It is high time that teachers should "take notice" of the necessity for teacher-training. It is not the law now, but it will be the law that after 1924 a second grade certificate will not be issued to an applicant who has less than one year's high school. The number three certificate will be discontinued. A large number of accredited summer schools will be established in order that opportunity may be given for doing professional and high school work. It is reasonably certain that a branch summer school will be established in Pocahontas next summer. This school will be directed by one of the state normals.

A great many teachers have taken no interest in the work of our district high schools. It is the duty of a teacher in the rural schools to inform herself as to the work which may be done in high school and college. This is necessary, if the teacher is to give a pupil intelligent advice as to future educational work.

The schools of the county are in much better condition than at this time last year. The attendance and the teaching have been improved.

DIED

Ethel Wooddell aged 14 years, and Clarissa Wooddell aged eight years, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wooddell, of Stony Creek, died at their home on Sunday afternoon, December 18, 1921, within a half an hour. The cause was diptheria following scarlet fever. The whole family, father, mother and eight children were all down with the same disease. Burial at the Edray graveyard on Tuesday afternoon.

Christmas services at the Methodist Sunday school on Saturday night. Christmas treee at the Presbyterian church on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and Christmas service by the Presbyterian Sunday school at five o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Our good friend Ed J. Shannahan, of Red Dick Mountain, was in town Tuesday, sending Christmas cheer to his folks up north.

JUST A LITTLE CHRISTMAS SEAL

Paralyzed in both arms and legs confined always to his wheel chair. Mal Rose of Iowa, vigorous of mind and indomitable of soul, composed on twenty-four hours notice and dedicated the following poem, "Just a Little Christmas Seal" to help the Tuberculosis Associations throughout the United States boost the sale of Christmas Seals in the great crusade of the Double Barred Cross in the fight against the great White Plague.

"I am a little Christmas Seal,
Oh please, sir, won't you buy me?
For I've a mission that is real,
And no one should deny me.
A penny, sir, will pay for me,
I'm sure you'll never rue it—
My mission is to fight T-B,
And you must help me do it.

"It's more than just a one hand stunt
To slay this thing of terror,
So I'm the army at the front,
And you're stretcher bearer;
For where we come or where we go,
In foul or fairest weather,
Tuberculosis is our foe,
And we must stand together.

"Both life and health we may prolong
If you will pay a penny;
Let's help the kiddies to be strong,
For unfed tots are many;
And, house to house and town to town
Let's work to save the babies—
Oh please, sir, do not turn me down,
With promises and maybies.

"Just kindly kiss me on the back
And stick me to a letter,
And for a penny and a smack,
We'll make the whole world better;
And oh, how glad we both shall feel
If you'll but trust and try me;
I'm just a little Christmas Seal,
Oh please, sir, wont you buy me?"

BIG FIRE AT HUNTERSVILLE

On Monday the store of W. H. Barlow, at Huntersville, was destroyed by fire. The fire was discovered about one o'clock in the day by smoke coming from the attic. There was no water under presure by which the fire could be fought and it was soon seen that the building would be a total loss, and the neighbors present engaged in salvaging the goods and contents. It was so well managed that a greater part of the goods were saved.

From this store building the fire spread to the postoffice which was in the rear of the burning store and which was kept in the building occupied by L. M. McClintic in the days when the court house was at Huntersville. This building was also burned but all the contents saved.

The Barlow store was one of the best known stands in ths county. It was located at the forks of the road and it is the building in which Amos Barlow kept store for so many years, the busines being continued by his son, the present owner, W. H Barlow, the president of the County Court of this county.

In 1852, a big part of the town of Huntersville was burned down the fire burning that portion of the town where the late fire raged.

ROAD CONTRACT LET

The contract for the grading of four miles of state road from Huntersville to the Lockridge place on Knapps Creek, was let by the State Road Commission at Charleston last Saturday. The successful bidder was L. J. Candler & Co., of Virgilina, Va. The amount of his bid was $36,713. The next lowest bid was Joe Carola at $42,089. There were sixteen proposals. The biggest item 43,000 cubic yards of unclassified excavation at 60 cents per cubic yard. Work will probably commence within thirty days. This road is designated as Project 3050. Carola, the contractor who has just finished a job between Marlinton and Huntersville, was the successful bidder on three miles of road between Ronceverte and Clintonville.

GREETINGS

With a full appreciation of Yuletide Spirit, the Officers, Directors, and Employees of this Institution would convey to all patrons and friends the old, yet ever new wish, "A Merry Christmas and a happy New Year."

GAME NOTES

From the Black Forest comes the news that there is at least one black fox left to make tracks there. Old hunters, who are not really old men yet—just about the grandfather age—tell us that not many years ago black fox tracks were about as common in the Black Forest as coon tracks are now. What we of the Greenbrier Valley call black fox is known in books and fur lists as fisher. Incidentally its fur is listed at $150. a pelt. It is the largest member of the weasel family and is the most ferocious and blood thirsty of all that blood thirsty crew. Men and weasels are the only animals which kill for the excitement or love of killing. Other members of this family are the mink, martin and sable. Also the otter. The wolverine or glutton is another weasel, and approaches the fisher in size. Polecats are weasels too.

When a fisher pursues an animal of ordinary size, and this inncludes anything from a big wild cat or coon down, it is generally all night with the intended victim, for the fisher is the fightingest thing that walks on four legs. Tops of trees and hollow boles give no refuge to squirrels for the fisher is arboreal in its habits and can force his head into a surprisingly small space for so large an animal.

Because so few fishers were ever killed or captured here, we would presume that they migrated from this country thirty or forty years ago, or died from some plague which occasionally wipes out wild things when a species becomes too numerous. An old hunter told us he had seen the track of a fisher on Cranberry four or five years ago. He recalled helping to catch one on Williams River thirty or more years ago. He and another man had tracked the animal to a tree and thinking it certainly was up it, they cut the tree down, but found no game. Making a circle they assured themselves the animal had not come to the ground. They then cut five or six trees, and finally found it in the top of a big sugar. Another time he helped catch a kitten. It was but a day or two old, became tame and made a beautiful pet. It drank sour milk one day and died The mother fisher whipped the dog and got away.

Some months ago we read a piece in a popular magazine about fishers in the great forests of the northwest. Having no natural enemies and beiog built for a long life, a hunter became curious to know why the woods were not over run with fishers, and wondered how nature kept the balance even, for they are very prolific. In that country the porcupine is plentiful, and varments like its meat whenever they can get it. All animals, including the bear, fear the quills of the porcupine and the wolf, wild cat, lynx and other killers watch their chance to catch it unawares, turn it over and attack its unprotected stomach before it can hump itself up and bring in play its natural defense. This is not true of the fisher, which rushes the porcupine regardless of consequences and then probably dies a miserable death in the course of a month or so from quills deeply imbedded in his body.

But we have no porcupines in this country, and we do not know why our spruce forests now have so few fishers, for there was never enough of them caught or killed to make them extinct.

The fisher, while lithe and quick and snake like in its movements as other weasels, is built like a bear. A big one three feet long and will weigh 30 pounds. They are a curse in the fur country, following a trapper and robbing the traps, and deadfalls of the bait or catch and breaking out of most any trap smaller than a bear trap.

It is said by the trappers of the north country that the real fight of all fights is a battle between a small fisher and a very large martin, another weasel. An ordinary fisher will kill an ordinary martin without much to do.

Like other weasels, the fisher will eat and drink its weight in meat and blood a day.

In telling of a strange track in the Williams River wilderness a hunting friend of ours says, "It is not a coon nor yet a wild cat; it climbs trees and goes from branch to branch like a squirrel; when it comes to Tea Creek, it hops thirty or more feet across and goes on. I do not know what it is, but I expect to stretch its pelt some time this winter."

Having written the above, we are far enough ahead of the typesetters to have time to look in the dictionary about fishers. Webster says:

FISHER—A carniverous animal of the weasel family of the boreal part of eastern North America extending southward in the Allegheny mountain. It becomes about three feet long and is dark brown (in parts almost black,) with a bushy tail. In habits it is arboreal, and it avoids settled regions.

ALLEN REESE KINNISON

Allen Reese Kinnison was the son of Jacob Kinnison and his wife Catherine Clendennin Kinnison and was born on the old homestead above Mill Point, May 2, 1842. He fell asleep December 5, 1921. He had, therefore attained, under the blessing of God, the ripe age of seventy nine years, seven months and three days.

When the Civil War began Mr. Kinnison espoused the cause of the South and early enlisted as a soldier of the Confederacy. He often recalled the fact that when he rode away from home to try the hazard of a soldier's life his mother bade him goodby and remarked that if they never met again on earth, he must endeaver to meet her in heaven. This injunction of a fond mother was the more deeply impressed by the fact that when the young soldier returned home from the war his mother was awaiting him, not in the old homestead but in the other world.

On Oct. 29, 1867, Mr. Kinnison married Miss Rebecca Perkins, settled on the Greenbrier river and followed the life of a farmer and fruit grower. To this union there were born seven children. One died in infancy and a daughter after reaching young womanhood. One daughter, Mrs. A. E Irvine, lives on part of the old home place; a son, Plummer, lives in the old home; DeKalb lives near Buckeye; Richard is an energetic and prosperous business man of Raleigh, N. C., and Rev. J. Summers Kinnison is a prominent minister of the Presbyterian church in charge of a pastorate in Durham, N. C. Mr. Kinnison thus gave to the Presbyterian church of which he was a life long member a father's best gift, a son who is a fruitful minister of the church.

Mr. Kinnison was for many years an elder in Oak Grove church and his relation to the official bearers of the church was always warm and cordial, and his self-sacrificing zeal was always appreciated.

He was always an interested listner to every sermon and was gifted beyond many on public prayer. A week before his death, remembering that it was the regular appointment at the school house near his home he spoke of the fact and said he was sorry that he could not go out to the meeting. The last year of his life was characterized by a rapid ripening for the harvest. To many of his friends he would speak of portions of Scripture that had become impressed on his heart in reading God's word, and would commend them to those whom he felt inclined to influence One of these Scriptures was II Tim 2:15, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, as workman that needeth not to be ashamed." . . . He felt that this obligation was upon him and with earnestness he applied himself to the task, knowing of course, that only Christ availeth.

God gave his servant a long life and he was ready to go at the call of his Master, yet he will be greatly missed, but of course by none like the companion of the fifty four years of married life.

As expressive of the attitude which he to many declared in his illness his pastor chose the words of the Apostle Paul in II Tim. 4:6-8. For I am now ready to be offered and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course. I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, will give me at that day; and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing, for the text of the funeral address.

The remains of this servant of the Lord were laid to rest in Oak Grove cemetery. "To be with Christ which is far better."

DURBIN

We have had nearly a foot of snow but it is about all gone now.

Peter Usay is repairing his property on Main street, known as the Bird property.

We understand there will soon be two butcher shops in our town. We can get the meat if we can get the money.

Our school is progressing nicely in the new building.

The roads are a little bad. The new road to Greenbank is nearly past traveling. We hope to see the trunk lines with a hard surface in the near future which will add great value to the country. We have seen what it has done other places.

Our town has bad a good year as to improvements. A fine scnool building, new sidewalks, and good streets to the important parts of the town as far as the money would go. We hope the coming year will be as good. While we do not expect to get as many fines if our officers continue to clean out the moonshiners as they are coming one by one.

We noticed in the Pocahontas Times last week where the headlines recited. "Dress or undress." Look it up Are we living in pre-historic times? I guess in a way we are. If it should be a shortage in cloth we are very sorry. If this winter shoud very cold some of the people could not come out of the house without fishing boots.

Rev. Idleman is holding a revival meeting at the Tannery school house.

Hubert Paffenbarger is visiting in our community. He has just returned grom Galifornia aftes being across the pond.

Dr. L. L. Little and wife of Greenbank, have been with their daughter this week.

Misses Virginia Hull add Veda McLaughlin are home from school at Alderson for the holidays.

The Durbin school will give one week holidays.

Mrs. Belle Burner fell last week and got badly hurt.

The Pocahontas Tanning Co. is furnishing a lot of people employment at the present time. We hope they will still need more men.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR.

THURSDAY DEC. 22, 1921

To all a merry Christmas and a happy new year. To those in authority over us. To all of our friends and neighbors, To the stranger that is within our gates. To all the prisoners in our jails and penitentiaries. To the sick, the halt, the lame and the blind. For while there is life there is hope, and while there is hope there are gleams of happiness in life.

It has come to us after many years of tribulation that happiness is a state of mind capable of being superinduced in another by a casual word or a pleasant look. And that sorrow can be promulgated by a grouch.

A school of philosophers has arisen the last few months who reason that before language was invented that man was comparatively happy, and that bad news did not travel. That it was impossible to worry over what the world thought of you for there were no tale bearers. Dreadful things might happen but when they were over that was the last of the damage that was done, and the mind of man was not harrowed by the details for they could not be communicated. Disasters did not disturb society in epidemic form.

Then language was invented and it seems that after a time all understood the words but that it was not considered permissible to indulge in language without the consent of the listener and that consent was never given. It then became the custom to use language to torture prisoners. When a captive was made, he was pinned to a tree with a spear through the fleshy part of the leg, and the conqueror talked to him while the captive endured it. Then in a more humane day the spear was discarded and the captive was bound with ropes and was talked to.

And so by evil stages language was introduced in the world and unhappiness could be communicated. And to make a virtue of a necessity it has been the constant endeavor of the brotherhood of man to confine communications to pleasant things, but many there be who go about seeking whom they may destroy by unpleasant words.

But there is one gracious and hallowed season of the year when grouching is not permitted and that is the Christmas season, and no matter how bad a person feels he must keep his troubles to himself.

The great apostle of the doctrine of the Christmas spirit was Charles Dickens, and it is said that he did more than any man who ever lived to put Christmas on the proper basis. And the darkest period of the year was made into the brightest and the best.

We therefore charge you to be upon your good behavior and dissemble and smile.

George William Curtis said: The lovely legends of the day; the stories and the songs and the half fairy lore that gather around it; the ancient traditions of dusky woods and mystic rites; the magnificence or simplicity of Christian observance, from the pope in his triple tiara, borne upon his portative throne in gorgeous state to celebrate pontifical high mass at the great altar of St. Peter's, to George Herbert humbly kneeling in his rustic church at Bemerton, or to the bare service in some missionary chapel upon the American frontier, the lighting of Christmas trees and hanging up of Christmas stockings, the profuse giving, the happy family meetings, the dinner, the game, the dance—they are all the natural signs and symbols, the flower and fruit of Christmas. For Christmas is the day which declares the universal human consciousness that peace on earth comes only from good will to men.

Christmas is a state of mind. Let the evil disposed not interfere with it by so much as the batting of the eye.

And let us resolve in the words of Charles Dickens: I will honor Christmas in my heart and try to keep it all the year.

The work of the peace conference in Washington was accomplished in a reasonable time and in a decent way. A treaty was prepared and signed and will be submitted to the Senate for ratification that is intended to keep the peace between the nations of the world and to supplement and support the League of Nations, with which supergovernment it is to be filed. It is to be hoped that it will be ratified by the Senate promptly, and it would be a strange thing if it were not, for it certainly ought to receive every vote that the League of Nations got, and it will be introduced and supported by the most distinguished opponents of the League of Nations. The world has been well nigh ruined by the war. It is hard to see why, for the actual destruction of property was insignificant compared to the value of the property left. All war debts and obligations are set off by a corresponding credits and loans which balance to a cent. If they just will refrain from killing people, business will soon adjust itself.

The proposition to cancel our claims against the nations of the world still persists in some quarters. We take the view that every tax payer in America has a vested interest in these claims and that it is beyond the power of the federal government to impair the obligation of its contract without unanimous consent, and we withhold our consent to the arrangement. The majority of a corporation has great power but it does not extend to the giving away of assets. If we lose after an effort to collect, well and good. It would be in keeping with our usual luck. But as to being a consenting party to cancelling bonds, that is another matter.

England and Ireland patched up a peace treaty by which Ireland is to be allowed to stew her own broth, except that the Independent State of Ulster refuses to coalesce with the rest of the Emerald Isle. As we understand it Ulster takes the sensible view that it is well to live in Ulster and have the right to have representatives in the English parliament. And south Ireland wants to live in Ireland but does not not want to send delegates to London, admitting that the rate of taxation will be higher in the event that it sets up a government as a dominion, in place of remaining as an integral part of the British Empire. It is just another case of not knowing when you are well off. It is our impression that the great mass of the Irish people welcome the change in interest of peace and are not particularly thankful that the issue was forced upon them. But they do not want to shoot or be shot at.

The peculiar part about it is that the fighters in Ulster and the fighters in Dublin, unite in opposing peace. Politics make strange bedfellows.

It seems on the whole to satisfy those who hate war. They said in effect that the erring sister should go in peace, and that Ulster could remain as a part of the British household. It was a day full of sorrow for the fire eaters.

Congress is trying to do something for the farmer. It is honestly seeking a solution of a problem that has been forced upon its consciousness by the desperate condition of the men who feed and support the nation.

There was a time when it seemed that by making the rate of interest low on farm land security that the relief had been given to the land owners, but a combination of circumstances forced the interest rate up and Congress sat still and refused to pass laws to meet the change, so that it became impossible to float the loans. It must be said that it was short sighted legislation that did not provide for this possible contingency, but it is no excuse for the failure to meet the emergency when it arose.

It would not have been much of a subsidy to allow the farmer to sell himself into the slavery of debt at five or six per cent, but the time came when the farm banks could not loan money at all.

There are millions of farmers who borrow money and run their business so that a living can be made and the debt paid off in time.

As long as there are vast cities to feed, there is bound to be a great demand for food, and it takes capital to raise food in great quantities. We have little hope for relief in the way of changing the cost of marketing, but Congress could recognize that the fact that the government can have no better security than farm land, and provide cheap ready money to finance the the farmers. Congress in the past could be induced to vote money to build battleships with no hope of return, whereas they would not lend farmers money on the best of security at a substantial rate of interest.

Now that we have got rid of the battleship, could not congress make every farm an asset on which money, if needed, could be advaneed?

There is no reason why farm banks should not be established that would have the power to issue currency based on farm loans, which currency should be legal tender. The government would run no risk in standing behind such a system of currency. There is a vast difference between the way that the city financiers look upon land as a security, and the way that country bankers hanker after a lien on a good farm. The city man is afraid of the farm. The country man womld rather have a farm as security than anything else. The very fact that a man has owned a farm and has not been sold out makes the farmer an approved risk from a personal standpoint.

—We have been considerably interested in the report that there were a thousand deer in Webster county, an estimate given out by an enthusiastic game warden early in the fall. The game and fish commission is out in a statement that fifty deer would be a better guess. The more conservative statement would be that there are deer on a thousand hills in Webster county. The estimate of a thousand deer is too high. On the other hand the estimate from headquarters that there are fifty deer is too low. After mature consideration and much figuring we are inclined to put the number at fifty-three not including the one that got killed in the big snow.

It has always been a question of considerable gravity as to how far a worshiper could go in starting an argument in church. Of all the thousands and thousands of times we have attended church and listened to the instruction afforded we have never heard a voice raised in protest to dispute the teachings there afforded. And it certainly speaks well for the respect given to ministers. But being of a controversial disposition, we have always prayed to be kept from interrupting the services and so far we have not transgressed.

In a lawyers' magazine called Case and Comment, a number of cases were reviewed In a Nebraska case, a minister in the course of his sermon uttered a statement clearly at variance with the established tenets of the church, and a member of the congregation in a respectful way corrected him from the pew. The court held that the member was actuated with good motives and was not guilty of disturbing religious worship. Otherwise freedom of worship and free speech might be impaired by bigotry and false doctrine. This was on the right of barring brethren from communion on the mere belief that they were unworthy, and the court's decision turned on the point that the utterance of the minister was clearly contrary to the doctrines of the church.

In Georgia, a leader of a prayer meeting denounced a congregation to their faces as coming from the lowest scrapings of the earth. The minister protested and was indicted and held to be not guilty.

In Alabama, a member of the church asked permission to address the congregation after the services were ended and before the people had dispersed. He said: "I neither rise to preach, pray, or sing, but I want to talk to the church. I have meditated, thought, and prayed to know what I ought to do. I demand my letter. I cannot live in the church with liars, thieves, rogues, and murderers." Held to be a violent, passionate, and ill-tempered discourse, and that the speaker was guilty of disturbing religious worship.

So in a case in North Carolina, a member who had been expelled persisted in speaking on the subject after he had been requested by the minister to desist, was found to be guilty.

The learned discussions of the high courts on the question of religious liberty and the statutes that remain, are faint echoes of the days of the martyrs, when men died in torture for disputes with the church. The laws now go no further than to decide what is disorderly conduct, and deal more with a question of good taste and good manners than they do with religious doctrines.

Sir Thomas More, as lord chancellor of England, refused to approve of the marriage of Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn, and this was construed as meaning that he denied the king was head of the church, so they condemned him to be beheaded and cut his head off in the year 1535, in the fifty-fifth year of his age. The prisoner said to the executioner when they got to the scaffold: "See me safe up, for my coming down I can shift for myself."

Historians disagree as to whether More had anything to do with the edifying spectacles of burning martyrs at Smithfield.

In the old days they might burn the martyrs but they could not break their spirits. Generally if they recanted they were not burned. Saint Lawrence burned on a gridiron uttered as his last words:

This side, enough is toasted, so turn me, tyrant, eat,
And see whether raw or roasted I make the better meat.

The days have taken a turn for the better and an improvement in the daylight service will soon be noted As for us we belong to the school which professes a perfect indifference as to whether the the earth goes round the sun or the sun goes round the earth. It is a circumstance over which we have no control, and we do not know which is the most agreeable to our ancient constitution and the rights of man.

"Let's go a visiting back to Griggsby's Station—
Back where the latch-string hangs outside the door,
And every neighbor round the place is dear as a relation—
Back where we used to be so happy and so pore."
—James Whitcomb Riley!

O little town of Bethlehem!
How still we see the lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep,
The silent stars go by.
Yet, in the dark street shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years,
Are met in thee to-night
—Phillips Brooks.

At Christmas tide the open hand
Scatters its bounty o'er sea and land,
And none are left to grieve alone,
For Love is heaven and claims its own.

CHRISTMAS 1921

By ANNA L. PRICE

Christmas is coming—is coming—has come
Without even trumpet, bugle or drum,
Quietly slipping in just as before,
With its gifts and mercies—just count them o'er.

A moment for God, let us thank His name,
And sing a sweet song His love to proclaim;
Remember, Christmas re-echoes the birth
Of Jesus, Savior who came to this earth.

With mistletoe, holly, the green Christmas tree,—
Children's eyes sparkle such wonders to see;
From root to top it has sprung up o' night,
And blooms like Alladdin to our delight.

Remember the poor, the distressed, the sad;
And if it be possible, make them glad;
For Chrismas is coming—has come for all,
We merrily sing on this earthly ball.

CALVIN THOMAS PRICE

Eight years of age, died in the Lord, 18th December, 1919.

Two years in Heaven,
Two years with God,
Years of happy consciousness,
In that blest abode.

Two years beside the fountain
Of love, of grace, of truth,
Of learning in the higher school,
Two years of mental growth.

Two years of seeing Jesus,
And by Himself inspired,
Active, forever active,
And never one time "tired.",

We miss him still, our little boy,
Two years away with God;
And Oh! we do rejoice for him,
Although we felt the rod,

FOREST AREA LARGE

Much Area Being Added To The Monongahela National Forrest

It will be highly interesting to those who have watched the government's work since the passage of the Week's bill ten or eleven years ago to learn that the government has now under title or option a total of 137,000 acres of timber land in the Monongahela Forest Area, of which Randolph county is a part. This is principally cut over land which is being reforested either through fire protection or by forest planting Where replanting is necessary native spruce, Norway Spruce and White Pine trees will be used. For this purpose there is a nursery at Gladwin where the forest service has over 500,000 young spruce trees planted. The first forest replanting will be in the spring of 1922, it is announced by Forester Johnson of this city.

The acreage now under the domain of the government lies principally in Tucker and Randolph counties, with a recent addition of 6 000 acres in Pendleton, Randolph and Pocahontas counties, West Virginia, and extending over into Highland county, Va.

Protection of the government forest land against fire is provided for by a system of trails, telephone lines and lookout stations, constructed and maintained by the government, supplemented by patrolmen during the fire season under the supervision of forest rangers and forest guards some of whom are year-long men.

The resources with which the government is dealing and conserving in connection with its reforesting plans are first of all timber, particularly in its relation to water-shed protection and stream flow and the next resource is that of grazing. All kinds of stock are permitted to graze on this forest area land, a fee for which is required, depending upon the class of stock. The next resource might be considered is that of fish and game. The government places no restriction on hunting and fishing but at the same time it cooperates with the state game authorities in the protection of game in conformity with fish and game laws.

Recreational facilities for hunting, fishing and camping are open to the general public without special permit It is not the policy of the government however, to grant long term leases for use as summer homes or permanent camps since that would enable a few fortunate people to monopolize the best sites, the policy of the government being the greatest good for the greatest number.

The maturing timber which has been acquired by the government is for sale at current stumpage prices whenever such sales are deemed advisable to improve the condition of the forest. The government has a small income from this source and from the grazing business.

The acquisition of the Eastern National Forest by purchase is an extension of the system of the national forests established in the West. The western forests are composed principally of the soft wood species, consisting largely of fir and spruce. As the Appalachian Mountain range is the only important remaining source of hardwood timber, it becomes necessary to provide for a future supply of hardwood timber. This future need for hardwood timber coupled with the necessity of protecting the headwaters of streams many of which are important as sources of power development, led to the passage in 1911 of the Weeks Forestry Act, framed by former Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, now Secretary of War. Purchase to date total in round numbers, 2,000,000 acres and such purchases have been concentrated in the mountainous regions of the following States: Maine, New Hampshire, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina Alabama. A new purchase area has recently been located and improved on the headwaters of the Allegheny River where it is believed the government can secure about 506,000 acres in all. The purpose of the Alleghany Naitonal Forest will be in part the protection of the City of Pittsburgh from flood. The Monongahela National Forest in West Virginia will perform the same function for the headwaters of the Monongahela.—Elkins Review.

The people of Mingo have been richly blest by the services held in the Presbyterian church at this place from December 9 to 18 inclusive, by Rev. J. S. Cook, evangelist for Tygarts Valley Presbytery. We enjoyed a great ingathering to the fold as may be learned from the following facts. Fifty-one made profession of their faith in Christ Jesus; of these 34 united with the Presbyterian church. Six children were baptized; eight consecrated their lives to christian service; eleven famlies promised to hold daily family worship, and sixty eight persons promised to give a tenth of their income to the Lord. A Ladies' Auxiliary was organized, Methodist and Presbyterian uniting. The christians of both churches have been greatly blessed by these services. but the sight of the fathers. mothers, and young people giving their hearts to the Lord makes us feel that greater blessings are in store for us in the futuae by the mercies of God.

Pastor.

The remains of Paul B. Dupuy, killed in battle, October 6, 1918, during the Meuse-Argonne offensive, were buried with military honors in Leesburg, Florida, October 27, 1921. He was the seventh generation from his progenitor, Bartholomew Dupuy, who fought fourteen pitched battles in defense of France before emigrating to America in 1700, and on the same ground where this great-great-great-great-great-grandson fell, defending now both his ancestral and his own beloved country. He was a son of Rev. B. H. Dupuy.—Christian Observer.

At the time of the selective draft young Dupuy was a resident of Durbin, and registered in Pocahontas county draft. He volunteered and was inducted into service February 1. 1918.

MATCHES—VALUABLE BUT DANGEROUS

The match is perhaps the most valuable and the most dangerou article made by man. It has been in use for less than one hundred years, but think of trying to get along without it!

Suppose, for example, that you were camping far from any houses and discovered when it came time to cook dinner, that you had lost your matches. What would you do? Would you rub sticks together like the Indian or make a "bow-drill" like the Eskimo? These were the methods used by mankind for thousands and thousands of years, but they mean desperately hard work, as you would soon realize. You would be fortunate if you could find a bit of flint from which to strike sparks with steel, as your great grand father probably did. But even in that case you certainly would appreciate matches as never before.

It was not until the year 1827, that an English drugggist named John Walker made the first practical friction matches, and they were known as "Congreves." A folded piece of glass-paper went with every box, and in order to ignite the match one had to draw it in one hand quickly through the folds of the paper tightly pressed together with the other. Another kind of match, the "Promethean," appeared a little later. It had at one end a thin glass globule, which it was necessary to press in producing fire.

Thus the people went on experimenting, for everyone was interested and there was great demand. Gradually methods of making that were better and cheaper were discovered until today matches are found in every home and are carried in millions of pockets.

1400 Years for One Day

It is said that more matches are sold in the United States than in all the rest of the world. More than seven hundred million matches are used in the United States each day You can hardly imagine such a figure If a factory made just one match for every minute, night and day, it would take nearly fourteen hundred years for it to produce as many matches as this country uses in a single day Or—to put it in another way—nearly five hundred thousand flames are struck every minute on an average. There is not one of these flames that would not develop into a destructive fire if it had a chance. Consequently, every match must be regarded, and treated as a possible source of great damage. It has within it the power to rob you of your home, your loved ones, even of your life.

With the exception of fires from lightning, spontaneous combustion, and a few other causes, all fires can be traced in some way back to matches. If sparks from a chimney set fire to a roof, for example, the fire in the stove from which the sparks came was undoubtedly lighted with a match. But when we speak of the danger of matches, we do not mean indirect danger such as this. Many lives and millions of dollars in property are lost every year because of carelesstess in the direct use of matches. In a single year the insurance companies reported a total loss of $7,136,181 from this cause, and this did not include the great damage caused by careless smokers.

Two Kinds of Matches

Matches today are of two general classes: Those which may be struck upon any rough surface, and the so-called "safety matches," made to be struck upon the box, but there are good matches and bad matches in both classes. In other words, while the safety match as a rule is safer than the kind first mentioned. a poorly made strike-on-the-box match may be more dangerous than a well made strike-anywhere match. Therefore, we ought to know something about what a match is as well as how to use it.

Here is a match. What could appear more harmless? A tiny stick of wood, shorter than your finger, coated at one end with some substance that forms a little bulb, or head—who would believe that it can be either a blessing or a deadly peril, according to the way in which it is used.

The secret of fire production lies in the head of the match. This contains certain chemicals which take fire easily when heated, and it also contains particles of ground flint in order to create heat by friction when the match is struck. If two objects are rubbed quickly together, the resulting friction brings heat, and all the more easily and quickly if one of the objects be rough. If you sandpaper a board, rubbing it hard, you will soon find both paper and board becoming warm. Thus the friction from striking matches produces sufficient heat to cause the head to burst into flame.

The best of the strike-anywhere matches have heads containing a chemical called sesquisulphid of phosphorous, while the strike-on-the-box match heads contain chlorate of potash, which substance must be rubbed on phosphorus to bring fire, and for that reason the box has phosphorus paint upon its sides.

How to Buy Matches

Now it must be remembered that even careful persons may meet with accidents through the use of bad matches. Sometimes when struck the blazing head will fly off, or the stick will break and fall; sometimes, too, the match will continue to glow after the flame has been blown out These are signs that the match is poorly made: probably it is of some very cheap brand, for such things never happen with good matches. Carefulness, therefore must begin at the time of buying. One should always notice the brand and always order by brand. Whenever a brand is found to have any of these faults. it should be avoided in future, no matter how low the price may be. If manufacturers find that no one will buy the dangerous brands, they will stop making them.

The best of the strike-anywhere matches have a black bulb surrounding the colored tip. This black substance is placed there to prevent the head from flying off when struck, and also to guard it from being set on fire accidentally. But as a class the strike on the box or safety matches are less dangerous.

Matches of all kinds are carefully tested in the great Underwriters' Laboratories, which The National Board of Fire Underwriters maintains in Chicago, and those that are able to pass the test are labeled by the Laboratories. It is always a protection to find one of these labels on the box:

The Laboratories have no interest in the sale of matches, and any manufacturer who will make goods of the right grade can secure the label.

Being Careful

Let us suppose that your house is provibed with good matches, those having solid heads and tough sticks. There will be no danger if you are always careful in using them. But are you? Here are some questions for you to answer:

Do you ever throw away a match which is burning or even glowing? Never do this again. It has caused hundreds of deaths and has burned thousands of homes. The wife of Henry W. Longfellow was burned to death because she allowed a lighted match to fall on the floor.

How do you strike a match—away from you or towards you? Probably you have never thought about this, but think of it hereafter and form the habit of always striking away from you. Thus, if the match breaks or its head flies off, it will not likely set fire to your clothing. In lighting matches upon a box first close the box; otherwise the flame may set fire to the whole box. If the box is set in a boxholder, such as those used by smokers, wkerein the upper part of the box is pushed open, always place the box so that the heads are not exposed. In striking a match upon such a holder, always strike downward away from the open end.

A match on the floor is always a dangerous thing. It may be stepped on and ignited, or it may be found by a little child, or it may be carried into the wall or under the floor by a rat or a mouse. It is not probable that mice often start fires by gnawing match heads, as many people think, but they do like to use them in building nests in warm comfortable places, close to chimneys or furnace pipes.

Keep matches out of the reach of little children. No one can tell how many little ones—and even older people, too—have been burned to death through neglecting this rule. Are they kept away from the stove, or the stovepipe, or any other place where they may become overheated? They should never be left loose in a drawer or on a shelf, but should be kept in a strong box or jar of earthenware.

Do you carry matches on your person? A child should never be allowed to do this. He may be careful, but some careless child may ask him for a match. A grown person should never permit himself to carry loose matches in his pocket. The State Fire Marshal of Iowa says:

Some men, especially smokers, are in the habit of carrying matches around with them. It is the easiest thing in the world for mathes carried around loose in a man's pocket to drop out. Suppose the man has work to do about a barn. A match drops out on the barn floor and a horse steps on it. It is a parlor match and ignites, setting fire to hay and other inflamable material found in barns. Then the barn burns and the cause of fire is reported something like this: "Unknown. Nobody had been in the barn for sometime. Everything safe when the barn was closed up."

Six hundred and ninety four barn fires took place in Iowa in one year. Hundreds of these were reported as of unknown origin, but it is safe to say that in a great number of cases, if the cause could have been traced, it would have been found to be a match that had dropped out of a smoker's pocket.

Until we find some better device for producing fire. matches will continue to be used in immense numbers and they will always be a source of danger in the hands of careless people, and even careful people may be imperiled by the actions of careless people about them. Someone has said: Matches do not think with their heads. When you use them, your head has to do all the thinking. Do the thinking! Put them out!—State Fire Marshal.

VOL. XL. NO 20 | MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY WEST VIRGINIA, DECEMBER 29, 1921 | $1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

THE FARM BUREAU

At a meeting of the Farm Bureau held Saturday afternoon, County Agent, H. C. C. Willey reviewed the work of the year, and a very satisfactory accounting was made too.

Last January the Farm Bureau adopted a definite program—to eliminate the scrub and grade bulls and rams in five years and to cooperate in the buying of fertilizers, being the main items. Over 400 tons of fertilizer was bought through the bureau at a saving of from $4 to $7 a ton. In addition, the Farm Bureau forced down the wholesale price of fertilizer so that the local dealers could give their customers a much lower price than they otherwise could have done.

A lot of purebred bulls and rams were bought by farmers, and at least seven pure bred herds, of cattle started by farmers—five Hereford herds and two Shorthorns.

The Boys and Girls Club work was fostered and advanced. A fine camp was held, a lot of new clubs were organized, the membership greatly increased. Out of 109 boys and girls passing the 4 H. examination in West Virginia, 10 were from Pocahontas county.

The potato demonstrations and experiments amounted to little on account of dry weather and the seed being received late in the planting season.

The county agent recommended that the program of 1921 be continued and that poultry and pasture land improvement be added to it. He told of the interest manifested by the people in a number of poultry culling demonstrations he had made in different neighborhoods over the county; the value of the poultry industry, and the thousands of worse than useless hens which are being kept at a great expense because the average man or woman does not know how to tell and cull out the boarders.

All over the county, the fine blue grass of the pastures is being replaced by moonshine, sage grass, cinc foil, weeds and moss, and the pastures are going back each year. County Chairman, Henry Beard also said he expected to conduct some experiments with Japanese clover in an effort to bring his pastures back to their old time value. Lime and 16 per cent acid phosphat is needed. It is known that every thousand pound steer carries away from the land the equivalent to 100 pounds of 16 per cent acid phosphate, besides lime, nitrogen and other plant foods. This has been going on for generations, and it only a matter of time for the fertility of the soil to be carried with cattle as they are driven to market.

Much good resulted in the demonstrations as to the treatment of the diseases of sheep held by the sheep specialist last spring. Also from the butchering demonstrations by Dr. Lender this fall.

Frank R. Hill, county chairman for the Near East Relief, was present and asked the cooperation of the farmers of the county in contributing and collecting a thousand bushels of corn and wheat for the destitute children of Armenia. The Governor has asked the farmers of Pocahontas to contribute at least a car load of grain for the relief of these starving children. A hearty response was given to this appeal by the farmers present.

Z. S. Smith, general manager of the Pocahontas County Fair, addressed the Bureau, in the interest of the Fair, and asked that every farmer of the county get behind the proposition and help make it the best fair in the State. The Fair is now being incorporated. The capital stock will be $25,000. and the shares will sell for $10 each. As much as possible of this stock will be placed with farmers as it is purely an agricultural proposition. Suitable grounds can be secured, and the State Agricultural Department will under write a liberal premium list. The Marlinton Board of Trade contribute buildings and equipment which cost $1500. It is possible that the state will have an exhibit of products from every county in the State at the Fair next fall. All in all the prospects are bright for County Fair if the farmers of Pocahontas will cooperate by buying stock and bringing exhibits.

There are now 80 members of the Pocahontas Farm Bureau. The annual membership fee is $3. The County Agent recommends that the old membership be reduced. This matter will be considered at the meeting of the Bureau in January.

FINE CATTLE

West Virginia and Virginia live stock were well represented at the International Livestock Exposition held in Chicago some days ago, and breeders of these states can well point with pride to the records of their winnings at this the largest and most representative show of its kind.

In the breeding Shorthorn classes Buckland Hall Farms, incoporated, Nokesville, Va., were consistent winners in what was considered by many the strongest competition ever witnessed at an International. Among the winnings of this herd were third on senior yearling bull, thirteen entries in class; sixth and ninth on junior yearling bulls, thirty-seven entries in class; fourth on cow with calf at side, fourteen entries in class; eleventh on two-year-old heifer, twenty-four entries in class; sixth on yearling heifer. thirty entries in class; sixth on senior heifer calf, seventy-five entries in class, and seventh on young herd in a class of twenty-one entries.

In the Shorthorn sale held during the International, Buckland Hall Farm purchased the grand champion Shorthorn female of this year's show, making the second International grand champion to be brought to Virginia by this breeding establishment, the other being Lespedeza Collynie, 1919 International grand champion Shorthorn bull, which now heads their herd. Buckland Hall Farms also sold in the above sale the two-year-old bull, Lespedeza Choice, for $1,000.

McLaughlin Farms, Maxwelton, West Virginia, and Rapine, Virginia, had on exhibition their good herd of Polled Shorthorns. In the polled classes this herd won second on the aged bull, Royal Choice Sultan; second on senior yearling bull; third on senior bull calf; third on two-year-old heifer; fourth and fifth on junior yearling heifers; sixth and seventh on junior heifer calves; fourth on aged herd, third on young herd, and second on produce of cow. It is interesting to note in this connection that McLaughlin Farms aged bull, Royal Choice Sultan, was defeated for first honors in his class by a bull for which $3,100 was paid at auction while the third prize bull in the same class was recently bought for $2,000.

In the Hereford fat classes, Harrison and Gatewood, Rectortown, Virginia, made an exceptionally good showing on their purebred junior yearling steer, Lad Fairfax. This steer won the third place in a class of twenty nine entries and was later bought by a Chicago packer for 18 cents a pound. Lad Fairfax it will be remembered, was grand champion over all breeds in the fat classes at the Virginia state fair.

Percherons from the state exhibited by Mr. E. V. White, of Leesburg, Virginia, also took their share of the prizes. Among Mr. White's winnings was third in a class of twenty entries on the two year-old mare, Galena Girl, and fourth in a class of sixteen entries on the yearling stallion, Sir William. Galena Girl was grand champion Percheron mare at the Ohio state fair. That she won third in her class at the International is an index of the quality of the Percheron exhibit at the latter show. —West Virginia News.

FIRE ASSESSMENTS

In conjunction with the annual meeting of the Central West Virginia Fire Protective Association held in this city last Friday when officers were elected and plans outlined for the next year's work, a very enjoyable supper was served at the Rotary rooms by Dent's Delicatassen.

President Meritt Wilson of the Association reviewed the work of the Association since its organization seven years ago. At the outset the membership represented an acreage of about 500.000 acres which had grown to about 750,000 acres. President Wilson pointed to the fact that since the organization of the Association the number of forest fires had been very materially diminished. Had the forests always been protected, he observed, there would have been a better stand of timber today. He declares it was becoming more important all the time to have forest protection, stating that in Pennsylvania the appropriation for forest protection amounted to $1,000,000 a year, for Pennsylvania realizes that it must encourage the growth of timber or else pay a big price for lumber.

He expressed the belief that it paid to protect the forest because of the protection it afforded growing timber. The main object of the association, he said, was of course to protect matured timber as well as growing timber but at the same time in the protection of the forests and watersheds and streams were protected. President Wilson said much was owed to the patrolmen for the work they had done and he desired to thank them for the work they had done.

A. B. Brooks, chief game protector of the state was another speaker. At the outset of his address he said it was only a question of a few years until the chestnut trees of the state would be gone owing to ravages of chestnut blight which had already invaded the territory east of the mountains. The Gypsy Moth was another source of danger as it went right through the tree and was traveling in this direction. The White Pine Blisterus was another source of danger. He emphasized the necessity of personal responsibility of members of the association in dealing with these matters. The state had set apart $40.000 for the protection of the forests. Mr. Brooks stated. He could not think of a much better system than that adopted for the protection of the forests, if it worked just right, this system consisting of look out stations, patrolmen acting in conjunction with each other and with members of the Association. He desired, he said, to co-operate in every way.

Treasurer Wilson said that the association was in good shape financially, having more money on hand than ever. There was no overhead expense to eat up the resources and he thought the work and activities of the assocation could be materially increased.

W. F. Lipscomb of Parsons, field manager, said that an ounce of prevention was worth a pound of cure and that the theory upon which all the activities of the association were based. He extended his thanks to the patrolmen for their hearty co operation.

B. L. Roberts, of the Cherry River Boom and Lumber Company of Richmond, said that great care ought to be exercised in deputizing fire wardens as there were some who would set out fire for the purpose of getting $3 a day.

Mr. Brooks said that plans were on foot to organize a large forest, fish and game protective association, with a special committee to deal with the question of forest protection under the control of the main organization. He thought much could be accomplished toward fire protection by educating the public.

Officers selected for the ensuing year are: Merritt Wilson, president; B. L. Roberts, Vice president: Geo. W. Wilson, Sec and Treas., W. F. Lipscomb, Field Manager.

The following directors were elected: B. L Roberts of Cherry River Boom and Lumber Company: J. M. Hannah, of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company; Merritt Wilson of The Wilson Lumber Company; Howard Mason of Keystone Manufacturing company: Ray Wilson. of Porterwood Lumber Company; Chas. Mayo, of Pardee and Curtain Lumber Company: F. A. Aunshutz, of Gladys Coal Lands Company.—Randolph Review.

ARBOVALE

This section was visited by the heaviest sleet last Thursday night and Friday that we have had for a long time.

Our Sunday school is keeping up well—about 80 present nearly every Sunday. The school is very thankful to our superintendent O G. Arbogast for the nice treat he had for us Christmas day.

Miss Flora Gillispie of Nottingham spent Xmas at the home of her parents here. She was accompanied by Miss Lillian Marshall of Crabbottom

Ode Ervin of Belington, is visiting friends here now.

We are glad to know that Billy Vandevender is able to be out again after being confined to his bed for a time.

Glen Wooddell suffered a badly sprained ankle last week, but is able to be out again.

President Harding has nominated J. E. Buckley for postmaster at Marlinton. His name went to the Senate last week.

"LIVE" ONES AND "DEAD" ONES

Two kinds of men live together on earth,
"Live" ones and "dead" ones, no matter what birth,
"Live" ones have faith, backed by courage that grows,
A "dead" one sees just to the end of his nose.
A "Live" one's a man who won't stay on a shelf;
He hustles for others as well as himself
But a "dead" one, however, is content to stay dead;
Dead in his heart, dead in his head,
Dead in his pocketbook, dead in his pride,
Dead as the deadest old thing that has died.
A dead load to himself, and a load to his brothers
Who must carry the "dead" for the good of all others,
Which leads me to say to all "dead" making strife,
Get into the "game" and come back to life.—

—F. A. Hoar, in The Dairymen,s League Naws.

YOUR TEETH

Temporary Teeth—When They Are Abscessed.

By Rea Proctor McGee, D. D. S., M. D., Editor "Oral Hygiene"

If you had a pet rattlesnake around the house it might not do you any harm, but you could not reach an agreement upon that subject with the limited brain power of the snake and so you would be taking a big chance that the armistice would be broken.

Your child could have one or even several abscessed temporary teeth with no apparent injury to his general health, but what assurance have you that the apparently harmless collection of pus is not poisoning the child?

When the abscess really strikes and becomes acute, then there is no question about the damage it does.

Then abscesses may not only cause rheumatism and heart inflamations but the eyes and kidneys and any or all of the bodily structures may be attacked.

When a temporary tooth abscess burrows down inside of the jaw and gets behind one of the protective walls of fibrous material that separates the layers of muscle in the neck called the cervical fascias, a very serious infection develops which is frequently fatal.

In order to save the life of the child a very delicate operation must be performed, and that quickly. Don't take chances with abscesses of the temporary teeth. They aren't not only very dangerous, but the abscessed teeth cannot be used and the good teeth are not allowed to do their work because one tender spot in the mouth will interfere with chewing.

Of course, the best plan to avoid abscesses of the baby teeth is to take good care of children's teeth from the day they appear.

This is the easy method and it is also the safe, sure method. Therefore it is the common sense method. Begin at the beginning. Later may be too late.

CAMPBELLTOWN

Arnold, son of Mr. and Mrs. E B. Vanreenan is very sick at present.

Mrs. Higgins, an aged lady, has been very ill, but is some better.

N. S. Morrison is on the sick list.

Our school is dismissed for holidays. The teachers, A. W. Hill, Miss Elsie Adkison and Miss Delpha Snedegar, gave a Christmas tree on Friday evening, with a fine program of recitations and songs, and nice presents for the children. These teachers are teaching good schools, pupils and patrons appreciate the good work that is being done.

O. F. White, our Sunday school superintendent, gave a treat of candy and oranges to the Sunday school here on Christmas day. A program of verse and song by the school was much enjoyed by all present.

O. F. White is running a sawmill for W. McClintic near Millpoint.

W. H. Vanreenan has charge of the Clifton Forge wholesale house in Marlinton, and is kept busy from early until late.

George Dunbrack is hauling lumber from Laurel Creek for Williams and Pifer.

Marvin Dundrack has a grocery store here which is a great convenience to the people.

Beginning January 1, County Assessor George Auldridge will collect a capitation tax of $2 from every male inhabitant above the age of 21 years, except paupers and those of unsound mind. One dollar goes to the state school fund and one dollar to the county road fund. Heretofore the capitation tax of one dollar went to the district road fund, and residents of incorporated towns were exempt from paying this tax. Now every man in the county pays this tax. The assessors year begins January 1, instead of April 1, as heretofore.

To whom it may concern:

All persons knowing themselves in debt to the Cloverlick and Durbin Mutual Tel Co. are asked to settle at once. Otherwise suit will be enacted on all outstanding claims.

V. W. Geiger, Sect.

W. M. Underwood has qualified as administrator of the estate of his father, the late Wesley Underwood. He is advertising the administrators sale for Monday, January 9th, at the home place on Beaver Creek.

FAIR TO INCORPORATE

On last Thursday night, at a well attended meeting of the Board of Trade, it was decided to take the necessary steps to form a joint stock fair company to take over the Pocahontas County Fair.

The capital stock was made $25,000 and the par value of the stock $10, to be sold on installments.

There are now two sites available. One is twenty acres of land above the court house, which can be purchased and the other is 20 acres on Z. S. Smith's farm which can be leased for a period of years, with the privilege of purchase at any time.

The last legislature made provision for liberal state aid to county fairs which have held three consecutive annual fairs and which incorporate and the Pocahontas County Fair is in line for this aid.

Our fair has grown from year to year, and by a united effort the farmers of the county can have one of the best fairs in the State, at no great cost nor effort.

NEAR EAST RELIEF

December 15, 1921.

Mr. Frank Hill, Atty.,
Marlinton, West Va.

Dear Mr. Hill:

The appalling conditions in Armenia, where children are dying daily on the streets from starvation and disease, is such as to warrant the nation wide appeal to the American farmer for grain in their behalf.

The generous response from West Virginia, in money and clothing, leads me to believe her proud record will still be maintained in grain giving.

Knowing your ability and influence I am taking the liberty of appointing you General County Chairman, of Pocahontas county, with the following members of your committee according to their respective districts.

I profoundly believe that our state will take its rank with other states, and not only realize the one hundred per cent mark of our quota but will over subscribe.

Write to the State Director, Dr. William E. Smith, Charleston, W. Va., and I am sure you will receive all necessary data.

Associated County Chairmen—H. C. Willey, Co. Agr. Agent, Marlinton Calvin W. Price, editor Pocahontas Times, Marlinton.

Huntersville District—J. H. Buzzard, District chairman, Huntersville.

Members of committee—W. H. Barlow, W. H. Dilley, Huntersville; H. Lee White, Minnehaha Springs, Sherman Gibson, Frost.

Greenbank District—Monroe Beard chairman, Greenbank. Committee: George Hannah, Greenbank; Forest Moore, Hosterman; J. W. Goodsell, Durbin; Miss Ella Pritchard, Dunmore.

Edray district—J. A. Young, chairman: Committee—Leo Price, Edray; Ligon Coyner, Cloverlick; Hugh Hannah, Slatyfork; Miss Anna Correll, Buckeye.

Little Levels District—Samuel Sheets, Chairman, Hillsboro. Committee, C. W. Kennison, Hillsboro, J M Cutlip, Beard; Wilson Hill, Jacox; T. E. Beard, Millpoint.

Cordially yours,
E. F. MORGAN, Governor.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation of the many tokens of love and friendship we have received, too numerous to acknowledge individually. We have received for the holliday season and our marriage anniversary, conspicuous among which was the large and beautifully engraved bridal cake sent by Mr. and Mrs Walter Hull Yeager of Cheyenne, Wyoming. The cake was sent by parcel post, special delivery and arrived in perfect condition, was delicious in both texture and flavor, and was enjoyed by all present. In addition to the other engravings it had 1871 and 1921 printed in large gold colored figures in the center of the top.

INDIAN HISTORY AND TRADITION

The Mingo Tribe and Their Wars, Chiefs, Villages, Trails and Camps.

(By Capt. William H. Cobb, Vice-President National Historical Society; Member Virginia Historical Society.)

The request that I prepare an article on the subject of the Mingo Indians in connection with the proposal to build a monument or marker to this tribe of the "wild man" to be located on the Huttonsville and Marlinton Pike near the mouth of Mingo Run, in Mingo district of this county and near the old Indian village site, has been complied with, and here it is well to state that it is with difficulty that actual facts concerning any Indian tribe are obtained for any long period of years and when a period of a few centuries are to be covered it means that most of the information is traditional.

The Indian "village site" at Mingo has been regarded as the habitat of this tribe, but it is with no certainty that this is at all correct, but on the other hand it would appear that this village was the abode of some other tribe. for we have no account which would make this a Mingo home, and for the reason that the Mingoes were on the upper waters of the Susquehanna river in Pennsylvania and New York even before the founding of Jamestown, and from that date or a little later made a settlement on the waters of the Ohio and still later further west.

That there was a village once occupied by Indians at Mingo, I take it that no one doubts; we have it handed down from the ancestors of those now living in that section that such a site existed when settlement was begun soon after the Revolution; not a site of recent occupancy, but long decaying, yet retaining all the marks of such a village, and at this date evidences in way of flints, pottery and Indian relics are to be found on Mingo Run, and we are told that mounds on the Mingo Flats are still to be found making it certain that in that elevated and beautiful section overlooking the country for miles and miles, that such a village existed.

The Indian trails over which both public roads and railroads have since followed, passed through Mingo Flats, the scenery from which appeals to the white and probably to the tribes that followed the routes, covering passes from one stream to another, some of which at this point lead Northward, another Southward and still another Westward. The principal route it would appear lead from the North from Saint George in Tucker county by way of Leading Creek, up the Tygart's Valley River and thence to the Greenbrier, and near those flats, one trail branched to the East and down Clover Lick to Greenbrier river, the other to the S. W. and down Williams & Gauley rivers, and just west of Mingo, at now Brady gate, the path divided, one going down Valley Fork of Elks to Elk river, the other by Point Mountain and westward to the head of the Little Kanawha; on the Valley river between Huttonsville and Mingo, other trails reached the valley; one from the head of the two forks of the Greenbrier, and across the Cheat river and Cheat Mountain at near the head of Becca's Creek; and still another from the Cheat River up Fishinghawk and down Files Creek at Beverly, and still another of these paths came to the valley river from the Buckhannon waters, across the Middle Fork and down the Mill Creek to the Valley below Huttonsville.

These several trails converging around Mingo, makes this point one of rendezvous, and with the traditions we have and the relics found, renders it fairly conclusive that such village existed, but with any certainty of which tribe built or occupied it, we have no positive proof and can only conjecture; most probably not the Mingo tribe.

Among the earliest history we have of the Mingo Indian is recited by Thomas Jefferson in his "Notes" and in discussing the Five Nation of Indians, and referring to the Mohicans, he says:

'This nation had a close alliance with the Shawanese, who lived on the Susquehanna and to the the west of that river, as far as the Allegheny Mountains, and carried on a long war with another powerful nation or consederacy of Indians, which lived to the north of them between Kittatinnery Mountains or highlands, and the Lake Ontario, and who called themselves Mingoes, and are called by the present writers Iroquois, by the English the Five Nations, and by the Indians to the southward, with whom they were at war, Massawemaes. This war was carrying on in its greatest fury, when Captain Smith first arrived in Virginia. The Mingo warriors had penetrated the Susquehanna down to the mouth of it. In one of his excursions up the bay, at the mouth of the Susequehanna, in 1608, Captain Smith met six or seven of their canoes full of warriors, who were coming to attack their enemies in the rear. In an excursion which he had made a few weeks before, up the Rappahannock, and in which he had a skirmish with a party of the Manaheacs, and had taken a brother of one of their chiefs prisoner, he first heard of this nation. For when he asked the prisoner why his nation attacked the English, the prisoner said, because his nation had heard that the English came from under the world to take their world from them."

At the period that Jefferson was writing, the Mingo was in a confederacy with the Senacas in western New York; the Mowhawks to the eastward and Onendagees between the two, and the Cayugas and Oneidas, the two latter being younger and weaker tribes, but all the confederacy having the same common language, and jointly waged war on the tribes to the south, and no definite decisive battle in their favor having been won and, finding the enemy resourceful, they took into the alliance other tribes and by this means, overcame the former enemy, who asked for peace and put themselves under the protection of the Mingoes, who required the subjugated to raise corn hunt the game for the joint use of all and in this condition William Penn found the defeated tribe in 1682.

The Mingo may be taken as a typical of all indians in this, that they were in war, daring, cunning, ruthless and wicked; and in peace generous, hospitable, superstitious, revengeful and usually were on the chase, and while this does not characterize all Indians, it is the general rule among them, and from their own view point, they were religious and fairly faithful to their teachings, taking their metphors from the sun, the clouds, the seasons, the birds, the beast and the vegetable kingdom. It is not understood nor agreed the source from which the Indian came; whether from the East or indigenous to America, and it is equally uncertain about the language, whether all tribes had the same original language or, by reason of seperation and non-intercourse, each tribe originated his own language.

The name Mingo is significant in its meaning, carrying the idea of the despised, contemptible and unworthy and that mark was put upon them by the Indian, not the white man, and from their conduct on many occasions, it was not inappropriate, but just and due them.

The advent of the white man along the Atlantic coast, of itself, drove by degrees the Indian westward, and the Mingoes began actively to migrate before 1750, locating at first on the upper Ohio river and by the time of the war of the Revolution were on the west of the Ohio near where the city of Steubenville now stands; later was about Sandusky, and as time passed, so the Mingo on further west till now only a small band have habitation in Oklahoma.

It is said that a nation without wars is a nation without history, and of course the same is true of the Indian, but the Mingo is not without his full participation in war and all the eruelty of it. From 1750 to 1790 he played his wicked part in the tragedy of warfare and what he and his alliance did not do was no mark of indisposition not to do it, for they left destruction from Port Seibert and the South Branch country westward as far as the white man had dared advance, but in this they were not alone for the white man at times as the leader was the instigator of the outrageous warfare, and Simon Girty at the head of the Shawnee was an example participant.

The honors of war are usually reflected through the commanding general, but with the Indian it was the Chief, and what mighty ones the Mingoes may have had at different periods, we cannot ever know, but history has given us the name of Little Eagle (Kisopila) who in an unexpected fight with a few men under Captain Gibson near Fort Pitt in 1763, the Mingoes gave fight with the result of Captain Gibson completely taking off the head of Little Eagle, and it is probable that this combat gave more impetus to the Big Knife of the Nation of Big Knife (the designation the Indians gave the Virginians ever after) than any other thing; but it is not known whether it was the sword of the saber kind or an actual long knife which the Virginian used in close contact, but this weapon was a "night-mare" to an Indian, whether awake or asleep.

It was about this period that Kentucky was first being explored, and at which time no tribe claimed exclusive rights to the hunting ground, probably the richest game country ever trod by Indian east of the Missisipi, and as this developed we see our Mingo along with the Cherokee, Shawnees, Cataubas and Delawares and others contending for the exclusive rights and such bloody conflicts resulted that it in time became known as the "dark and bloody ground."

The Chief of the Mingoes to whom more notice has been given than all their other leaders was John Logan whose education, character and traits have made his ancestry uncertain, but his father was probably Ehilkellamy, a celebrated chief of the Cayugus, and born about 1725 at Shamokin, Pennsylvania; another impression is that he was the son of a French Canadian, and adopted by the Oneidas, the allied tribe to Mingo; be that as it may, he took the name of Logan from James Logan who was Colonial Secretary and later Governor of Pennsylvania and resided in the Susquehanna River country until about 1770, when he went with others to the Mingo—town of that tribe in Ohio.

In his new home for a time he appears to have not shared in the spirit of his tribemen and allied tribes, but was disposed to live peacefully with the whites.

The continued advance of the white man westward and his conflct with the Indian here and there and now and then, and in these conflicts Indians killed and destroyed white settlements, and occasionally inoffensive Indians were killed with the view that the deader the Indian is the better he is, brought on the conflict known as the French and Indian war and later brought about the great battle at the Mouth of the Kanawha; which was in a way to settle the ownership of the Ohio valley, especially the portion to the east but in this contest, probably the most decisive battle ever fought between the whites and the Indians, and won for the former both banks of the Ohio.

Preceding the battle at Point Pleasant, Logan's family was living near Chillicothe, but being at the time at the mouth of Yellow Creek in 1774 an Indian massacre occurred in which Logan's family, probably having only a sister but possibly a wife, but no children, and this inflamed the allied tribes of Indians to such an extent that Logan became the leader not only of his own people but any who would follow and crossing to the east and on both sides of the Ohio, he and his people destroyed the whites and their settlements, leaving neither woman or child in their wake, and this lead the Virginians to take up arms and bring about the battle of Point Pleasant, and generally known as Dunmore's war, he being then Colonial Governor of Virginia.

This massacre of the Indians was by Logan attribated to Captain Michael Cresap, a Marylander, but history is now convincing that Cresap was not present at this shameful massacre but probably took part in other "killings" where he felt that justice was only being meted out to the deserving ones.

When the Dunmore war was concluded by a peace or treaty at Chillicothe, the Chiefs of all the tribes taking part in the battle of the Mouth of Kanawha, appeared except John Logan, the Mingo, head; he being sent for, refused to appear, but sent that famous message that school boys many years were required to recite on Friday afternoon before the country school closed for the week; this speech reads:

"I appeal to any white man to say, it he ever entered Logan's cabin hungry, and he gave him not meat; if he ever came cold and naked and he clothed him not. During the course of the last long and bloody war Logan remained idle in his cabin an advocate of peace. Such was my love for the whites, that my countrymen pointed as they passed and said: "Logan is the friend of the white men." I had even thought to have lived with you, but for the injury of one man. Colonel Cresap, the last spring, in cold blood, and unprovoked murdered all the relations of Logan, not even sparing my woman and children. There runs not a drop of my blood in the veins of any living creature. This called on me for revenge. I have sought it; I have killed many; I have fully glutted my vengeance; for my country I rejoice at the beams of peace. But I do not harbor a thought that mine is the joy of fear. Logan never felt fear. He will not turn on his heel to have his life. Who is there to mourn for Logan?—Not one."

Logan was killed in 1780 on his return from Detroit by his nephew, with whom Logan had brought on a difficulty which the nephew could not avoid

It would appear that West Virginians have done their full duty to the end that the Mingo tribe and its last big Chief may be duly and properly preserved in the State's history not so much so by monuments. but by naming a county Mingo, and naming another for the Chief of the tribe, and still not satisfied, also called the seat of the county by the name.

Especially is this true when we contemplate that neither Chief Logan nor his tribe ever temporarily or permanently, had their abode within the territory of Logan or Mingo counties, and it was only the speech or supposed speech of Logan that brought fame to himself or his tribe.—Randolph Enterprise.

ONE YEAR OLD

(T. E. W.)

Anna L. Price

The first mile-stone on life's journey,
For the tiny tender boy;
And we wish the little pilgrim,
An infant's cup of joy.

Time stretches out before him.
A milestone for each year,
To many changing seasons,
And happy hours of cheer.

Shall we deck the milestones gaily,
As we would the baby's cradle?
Nay,—tho' a very mile-stone,
It is invisible.

Steps countless for the toddling feet,
And lisping for the tongue;
'Tis a busy world for baby,
That he has got among.

The milestones crowd each other,
When we grow old, forsooth,
And snows of winter whiten
The grasses of our youth.

A host of little children,
For whom the Savior died;
And we must become as children,
With Jesus to abide,

SEED CORN

Almost every farmer remembers the great shortage of seed corn that could be depended upon to sprout during the season of 1918 and all farmers know that this shortage was the result of early frosts and wet weather during the previous fall. Before the corn could be busked and cured rains with the accompanying low temperature had injured the corn to the extent that its vitality was largely destroyed. Of 10,000 samples of this corn tested at the State Seed Laboratory at Charleston for the 1918 planting the average germination was less than 60 per cent.

As a whole the growing and harvesting season of 1918 was very favorable. The farmer, remembering the serious shortage of seed corn during the previous spring, made sure that the coming season (1919) would find him with plenty of carefully selected and thoroughly cured seed corn. Of 1,000 samples of corn tested at the Seed Laboratory for the 1919 planting the average germination was a little over 98 percent.

For the 1919 corn crop the stand of corn and the yield per acre were both satisfactory. But the harvest season was accompaneed with continuous rains and an unusually high temperature. The conditions for this season were just the reverse of the conditions two years previous but they were just as potential in rendering corn unfit for seed. Investigations made by the Department of Agriculture reveal the fact that there are thousands of bushels of corn that heated and moulded in the shock. The Department has for several months persistently called the attention of all concerned to the likelihood of a seed corn shortage for the 1920 planting. As this planting season approaches the Department is making a strong appeal to the farmer to provide himself with a good supply of seed corn in time to have it tested to determine whether or not it will grow.

Corn over 5 years old has been known to germinate satisfactorily and, when properly cured and stored, corn from two to five years old can be depended on to sprout as well as one year old corn. Farmers should keep this fact in mind and in saving seed corn should store away enough for several years and thus be prepared for such conditions as were experienced two years ago and which exist in many sections of the State today.

The Department of Agriculture urges all farmers to submit samples of seed corn which they expect to to plant this season to the State Seed Laboratory at Charleston at an early date to be tested. This service is free of charge to all farmers in the State. An unusually busy season is anticipated and for this reason samples should be sent at once.

All farmers having a surplus of good corn which they consider fit for seed should submit samples or it to the Seed Laboratory for examination. The Department of Agriculture is continunusly receiving inquiries as to where good seed corn may be obtained and is, therefore, desirous of listing names of all farmers who have seed corn for sale.

Send all samples of corn and address all inquiries regarding seed corn to Nicholas H. Ramsey, Chief, Seed Laboratory, Charleston, West Va.

POCAHONTAS FAIR TO RECEIVE STATE AID

The Pocahontas county fair, at Marlinton, is now entitled to receive state aid. The fair was incorporated yesterday by the secretary of state, removivg the last obstacle in the path of state aid.

All requiremeets were previously met by the fair, except that it was not incorporated. The attorney general decided that the law specifically states that a charter must be issued before state aid may be given.

The fair is capitalized at $25,000. The incorporators include eight prominent citizens of Pocahontas county, as follows: S. B Wallace, Z. S. Smith, C. A. Yeager, H. C. C. Willey, F. R. Hill, C. W. Price, E. F McLaughlin and Pat Gay all of Marlinton.—Charleston Gazatte.

COLLEGE GIFT

Negotiations which have been in progress for some time are about to be closed, which will result in Halliehurst, the home of the Elkins family here, being presented to Davis-Elkins college. The mansion was built by the late Stephen B. Elkins and crowns a hill top in the estate of 300 acres, now in the center of the thriving city of Elkins.

It is located on the opposite side of the city from the site of the Davis-Elkins college, but it is planned to some time in the future, to move the institution to the site of Halliehurst and use that as a foundation for a group of college buildings that are to be constructed from time to time, as funds permit, in the future years. The gift is a valuable one, and a very appropriate one, since the college is the result of the inspiration and generosity of both the late Henry G Davis and Stephen B. Elkins.

In the negotiations for the transfer of the property to the trustees of the college, Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins and Senator Davis Elkins have taken the keenest interest and satisfaction, and associated with them in the matter is William G. Wilson of Elkins, one ot the administrators of the Elkins estate.

OBITUARY

On Sunday afternoon December 18, 1921, the death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Wooddell on Stony Creek, and in the brief space of thirty minutes took away two of their charming daughters—Ethel Elizabeth, aged thirteen years, nine months atd twelve days; and Clarissa Jane, aged seven years, 11 months and twenty days.

On Tuesday December 20 their remains were intered in the Edray cemetery with Rev. C. A. Powers of the M. E. Church in charge of the services These bright little girls will be missed not only in the home circle, but also in the Sunday school and other church services where they were regular attendants, and in the class meetings were ever ready to do their part by testifying of their faith and trust in the Savior. We feel that the loss of these girls in the church militant is the gain of the church triumphant.

Improvements That Will Follow Good Roads

Improving the local roads to help the farmer and reduce living costs is not all that is necessary to bring about the desired result. Improved storage, transportation and marketing of farm products will follow.

Improving roads, however, is, in the natural order and basis value, the first and most important part of the program of progress.

HOLD THE ROPE

By Anna L. Price

Said Wm. Cary, first missionary to India, to Andrew Fuller: "Hold the ropes, and we'll go down the mine."

Hold the rope, brother,
We go down the mine,
Where dangers beset us,
And the sun doth not shine.

Hold the rope, brother,
'Tis dark and lonesome,
And the heart will grow weary,
It's so far from home.

Hold the rope, brother,
The mine is the sea,
And we go to tell heathen,
Jesus died on the tree.

Yes, He died for the heathen,
As he died for us here;
But how shall they know it,
Till we reach their ear?

Hold the rope, brother,
With hand staunch and true
For next to our Father,
We depend on you.

Hold the rope, brother,
It will not be long,
And when the work's ended—
The rest and the song.

Hold the rope, brother,
True patience endures,
And when God gives the wages,
The half shall be yours.

In reporting what the Farm Bureau and County Agent Willey had done last year, we failed to mention probably the most important enterprise of all—the boys' and girls' calf club project. The Calf Club Committee—Dr. U. H. Hannah, W. H. Barlow, W. E. Poage, F. P. Kidd, and Henry W. Beard—procured an even dozen purebred registered Hereford calves, and sold them on time to two girls and ten boys. The conditions of the sale are that the young people must care for the calves under the certain rules and regulations and supervision of the County Agent until the 1922 Pocahontas County Fair where the calves will be exhibited and sold at auction. The Farm Bureau guarantees the original purchase price and cost of all feed. The members of the Calf Club are Olive Hevener and Mary Moore, Hosterman; Joe and Alfred Gay and Delbert Cogar, of Edray; Dick Nottingham, of Boyer; Edward Wallace, Mathew Beard, Earl Kidd, and Henry Rodgers of Hillsboro, and Harper Beard, of Beard. That they are making good is shown by the report for last month of all calf projects in the State of West Virginia, in which the Pocahontas girls and boys led all the rest with the highest average gain in weight at the lowest cost per pound gained—an average gain of 46 pounds at a cost of 5c per pound. The value of this demonstratin lies in the fact calves from the best blood lines are in the hands of young people who are being taught and required to care for them by modern methods of cattle husbandry. Also the old folks of the farm and community can see what good stock properly cared for really means. If the county agent had never done anything else, this calf club project alone will in time be worth all he ever cost the county.

DIED

Mrs. Hannah E. Shelton died at her home at Buckeye, December 23, 1921, aged 87 years. This aged woman was the widow of the late Thomas Shelton, and the last member of the family of Arch Burgess and his wife, Elizabeth McNear Burgess, her onl brother, Paul Burgess dying twelve years ago. She is survived by her two children, Miss Hattie Shelton and Arch Shelton. For many years Mrs. Burgess had been a professing christian, a member of the M. E. Church. Burial at the Ruckman graveyard, near Millpoint, the services being conducted by Rev. Hogsett.

DANGER SIGNALS

The Metripolitan Insurance Company in its effort to aid the public health campaign, and incidentally decrease their own liabilities, issue a bulletin in which some of the following questions are asked and discussed.

Is your child handicapped? Does your child's nose run or is it sore? Does the child snuffle? Are the eyes red? Are there fever sores or eczema around the nose and mouth? Does the child seem dull? Does it stand and look at you with open mouth? Does it put its hands to its head as though it had earache? Does it take cold easily? Does the child sleep with its mouth open? Does it snore?

If the answer to any of these is Yes, ask the doctor if the child has adenoids or large tonsils.

When tonsils become diseased they contain little cups or crypts in which poisonous germs are developed and then carried to other parts of the body and cause sickness.

Adenoids are little red unnatural growths just where the nose and throat join. They stop up the nose and make the child breathe through its mouth. A mouth breather is never healthy and is subject to catarrh, and easily contracts pneumonia and tuberculosis

Earaches is an indication of adenoids, and in any event may lead to a running ear, which may and often does infect the brain. Even in the milder cases deafness may result. Do not neglect it.

Enlarged glands of the neck are filled with poison which nature is trying to carry away. They mean poisonous germs in the nose or throat and when transferred to the system mas cause rheumatism. heart disease, or even lung or stomach troubles.

A young child with snuffles or some skin rash may have congenital syphilis. An older child with Hutchison,s teeth is almost certain to have syphilis, one of the most serious diseases known to modern medicine, but it can be cured.

All these conditions are dangerous. Do not wait for them to get well themselves. They are danger signals. Go to a doctor at once, and go to a good one.—U. S. Public Health Service.

HOSTERMAN

The little child of C. E. Morgan died December 26, of pneumonia.

Joe Hogue and his son Martin, of Mill Creek, have finished sawing lumber for Filmore Cox, on Bob Sutton's place.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely with Mrs. Bessie Workman, teacher.

We all enjoyed the Christmas tree at the school house.

M. Gordon, of Seebert, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Mamie Sutton. He is accompanied by his son Alex Gordon, of New Jersey.

Everybody enjoyed the Xmas tree at the Dunkard church Christmas eve

Miss Virgie Whitmire, who has been staying at Greenbank, spent her holidays at home. Also Emmett Whitmire who is working at the tannery was at home.

James Galford got a telegram Saturday to come to Pennsylvania at once, that his son Dennis who has been working there was not expected to live. We are sorry to hear that.

Our Sunday school at the Dunkard church has closed for the winter.

Jess Nottingham caught a big wild cat on Winters Sutton's place last Monday.

Misses Effie Moore and Nettie Greathouse, who are attending the high school at Greenbank, spent the holidays at home.

Miss Anna Burner is teaching a fine school at Cherry Grove and our children are learning fast.

We hear that George Sutton is very sick.

SOME THOUGHTS ON THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

(By Wm. H. Sawyers)

No method of communicating thought has ever epualed the symbology of the ancients. When Aeneas of Troy went to consult the Sibyl about his proposed visit to Hell she said:

"The journey down to the abyss
Is prosperous and light;
The palace gates of gloomy Dis,
Stand open day and night,
But upward to retrace the way,
And pass into the light of day
There comes the stress of labor; this
Will take a hero's might."

It is no trouble to get into hell, but the trouble is to get out. Look how easy it was for the Nations to get into hell. It only took them a short while to get in debt four hundred billion dollars, bankrupt themselves, murder eleven million men and bring on such a reign of chaos as the world has ever hnown before. When again will we be as well off as we were on August the first, 1914? Had Germany won the war and dictated the peace it would have taken her fifty years to have been as well off as she appeared to be on August 1, 1914. And now look at France and Austria and England and Russia? They are almost ruined and dead. And take our own United States: For the first year in our history we may be actually worth less at the end of the year than we were at the beginning. What caused the war? Man is a curious being—a paradox. He does not understrnd himself. When in the most imminent of dangers he is stupid, lazy and blind. At the height of peace and plenty he becomes thankless, godless and foolish. God had never before prospered man as he was doing on August 1, 1914, and man never had more completely forgotten God than on August 1, 1914. He was never so thoughtless—atheistic and thankless. Never in the history of the world was he wiser in his own conceit. There was no standard for social distinction but wealth. Philosophy, learning, love and religion had become almost bywords and terms of reproach. The whole system under which we were living fostered dishonestly and lying. We had denied the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. And Heaven blew its breath on a civilization that had forgotten God and it fell like a house of cards. What boots it to enquire who started the war? The world was a tinder box, and the conflagration would have have spread from wherever the spark fell. And from the pains and groans of its parturition in His own good time a better and nobler civilization will be born whose God will be the Lord. Sweet are the uses of adversity and only from war and havoc and destruction can man learn the lessons of philosophy and religion. The great curse of the age from a political standpoint has been paternalism and pretense. Paternalism in government is the creature of the demagog. The people of the United States, in exchange for their liberty and their treasure were promised relief from the tyranny and extortion of the corporation and public utility; fair treatment from the railroads, temperance and sobriety. The government has been given full power to tax, to fine and to imprison. All the functions and business of civilization and life will soon be under the direction of a commission at Washington if something does not happen, but something is going to happen. A correspondent has figured out that one bureau at Washington that was created to save the government in finance was costing the taxpayers $242 00 for every $1 80 that it saved them and whilst this is an extreme case it is typical. Paternalism will peter out It can not deliver the goods. Man has never developed a sense of proportion. He seems to be no better satisfied with "all that exalts and embellishes civilized life" than he was with the debauchery of cannibalism and the clanking chains of slavery. Unregenerate man is a grumbler and a complainer This renders him the victim of the demagog and the flatterer. Pull him out of the gutters of poverty and transfer him to a palace and clothe him in fine raiment and fare him sumptuously every day and he will straightway forget his God and prove an ingrate to his benefactors.

"But the souls of men are bits of bad and good
The bad is oft misjudged and the good misunderstood."

The troubles of this world are due to ignorance and meanness. Take our troubles in this country. They are all due to our stupidity. Our taxation system is doing more than anything else to destroy the peace and prosperity of the country. Any sensible man could take a lead pencil and go out behind a gum stump and devise a more sensible system in an hour. The trouble with the tax laws are that they are not American, unequitable unjust and a general damnation to the country. Business is refusing to function under them and they are going to break down by the weight of their own stupidity. They were conceived in sin and born in iniquity. Aside from this they are very fine. Every law is written in the statutes of this or any other country was conceived by the demagogue, the fantic, and the liar, I do not care what it is, or what its purposes, it has a bad law and fosters lying and deceit. It is known that the worst violators of some of the laws of this country are the very legislators who enacted them and the very people who voted for them. If the people of this country were as dishonest and as drunken and as low down and mean as some of our laws indicate we would perish in our own putridity in twenty years.

But the darkest hour is just before dawn. I am not in the confidence of either Heaven or Fate, nor am I a prophet or the son of a prophet, but I am of the opinion that the nippings of the frost of adversity will do the world a vast amount of good. In the first place they will sober us and make us sensible. Then we will give this government a steam cleaning and a fumigation from top to bottom About the next election we will reform the reformers and you will find statesmen and stateswomen galore who are now engaged in graft and uplift work, planting post holes or taking a fall out of the corrugated bosom ot a washboard to make "buckle and belly meet." We are told that some of the "Countesses" and "ladies in waiting" over in Europe are taking in washing for a living. Look what good adversity did over there. There is not a more worthless gee-gaw in Nature's whole economy than a "Countess" (unless it would be a professional "Uplifter" in America) nor a more useful creature in all the world than a wash woman. As I said I am no prophet but I think I see a little cloud in the sky about the size of a man's hand and I think you may look out for a downpour. And I have visions of an old tyrannical Russian Spy System now swaggering over America in shoulder straps and spurs and swords and pistols, drinking moonshine whiskey, and shooting people in violation of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States either in hell or in the penitentiary where it belongs, or grubbing stumps in an effort to make an honest living. I think we are going to have a new psychology, a new birth and we will be a better and a nobler people. And we will renovate this educational system of ours. We will make "frat" and football a felony and have it so that when a young man graduates from college he will know a Greek verb from the cube root. And we want to so change our religion that its practices will not be hell on earth and ill will toward men, and hate your neighbor and love your neighbor's wife. We want some genuine golden rule religion, some love for our fellow creatures and some consideration of their rights and some sympathy for their sorrows and we want this religion to spring from the heart and not according to "Schedule A" of some high-salaried grafter in Washington.

I used to disagree with St. Paul when he said that the wisdom of this world is foolishness. The reason I differed from him was because Paul knew what he was talking about, and I had never seen the wisdom of the world in full swing, and in the hands of "experts." Any man who has read the senseless jabber of the great and near great of this world, as I have done for five years, will find himself in full accord with the wise old fellow who wrote the Bible. In fact, I almost agree with Mahomet when he says: "True wisdom is neither of age nor of learning but only of Allah, the Allwise." I think we are going to have better times and a better world just as soon as we deserve them.

All things have their compensation. This world never was so interesting as now and we are told in the Aeneid of Virgil that in the gloomy grove around Hell's dire abyss there is one golden bough, held sacred to the infernal queen and that whosoever finds that bough can swim the Stygian pool or look unharmed on the horrors of Tartarus. I have full faith in good old America and her people that they will find that Bough of Gold, and with the Sibyl sing:

"Come great Aeneas tread the way,
And keep your falchion bared;
Now for a heart that scorns dismay
Now for a soul prepared;
This said with madness in her face
She plunges into the cave;
He with her lengthening strides keeps pace,
As fearless and as brave."

The officers of the Pocahontas Sunday School association are called to meet at Marlinton Presbyterian church on Saturday January 14, at 12 o'clock by County President S. N Hench. This is a get together meeting to consider a number of important matters. Among them is the setting of the time for the annual county convention, and what the association is going to do about the custom of closing Sunday Schools in so many communities during the winter period. Of the seventy schools of the county, only about twenty keep in session the year round.

"YOUR TEETH"

Preparedness

By Rea Proctor McGee, D. D. S., M. D., Editor "Oral Hygiene"

Only a fool would want another war. The greatest tragedy of war is that war kills the wrong people.

When the day does come, though, we must have the vigor and energy to do our part. No less must we have the vigor and energy to do our part in times of peace. Peace is a war of commercial competition for the markets of the world.

If we are to do our part every citizen must be able to do his share of the work, no matter what that share may be. We must have nourishment. How can any one be properly nourished on soup?

Whenever you lose your power to masticate you become a "souper." The earlier you lose the power to masticate your food, the sooner your physical and mental development will stop. With all our high ideals, all of our advancement, all of our science we still face the stern necessity of eating three meals each day.

All of the millions of people in this world must think first of their food supply. We are anchored to the kitchen.

Why not get the fullest benefit of our food? Take care of your children's teeth and of your own teeth so that the vitamines that hold the secret power of nourishment may be extracted from the food and do their full duty.

In the last analysis, a war is just a fight between two sets of people; one set wishes to take the others food away from them.

When we neglect our teeth we bring down on our own heads the penalty that a victorious enemy would inflict we deprive ourselves of the full benefit of our food.

On January 7, there will be a pie social at the Hosterman school. Proceeds for the purpose of buying a phonograph for school. We solicit your patronage and co-operation. Since the theory has been so widely accepted that "we learn by doing." The time has come when we must make our school work alive and interesting. In no better way can this be done than by putting within the reach of our children all helpful and interesting devices which will make school work so enticing that it will be enjoyable and not a burden to the child. We appreciate all past interest and hope to have as visitors a greater number of our patrons.

THURSDAY JANUARY 12, 1922

We had a touch of the California fever lately and had about decided to devote the first leisure time that came to us to the ordeal of crossing the Continent, as that is the grand tour that lies in the back of the minds of all the people who live on the eastern side of the United States And most of us take it out in putting it off until it is everlastingly too late. Dr. McClintic and his daughters are spending the winter on the Pacific slope, and the view that he took of it was that if he did not go now that he might never make the trip.

At the depot we found out that a round trip ticket to San Francisco would cost about one hundred and seventy nine dollars exclusive of board and lodging in Pullman cars, and that multiplied by two made the estimate run into money, for be it down to Gehenna or up to the Throne he travels the cheapest who travels alone. And there is something so wearisome and bone-racking in the continual jar of the heavy machinery of a railway train that induces the reflection that it might be anything but pleasant to undertake so long a a journey in the pursuit of pleasure. It would be a disagreeable experience not to be able to enjoy the scenery for thinking of the cost of the trip. And it would be a discomforting predicament to get about half way across and find oneself so played out that it would be torture to go on or come back either. And as about all the joy that there is in life is in anticipation, we found it cheaper to take it out in planning, and the fever having subsided, to postpone it indefinitely.

In the old days it was about a four months trip from the Mississippi River to the gold fields, but this soft boned generation cannot stand the four days that it takes now as well as those gold hunters who went on and on day after day following the golden lure.

One of the Pocahontas County men who took the trip in the old days was James McLaughlin, who left this country as a young man and established a home on the Mississippi River. He was a son of John McLaughlin who came to this county in the days of the Revolutionary War. We have in our possession a letter that he wrote to his brother, Hugh McLaughlin of Huntersville from the gold fields, in 1851. It is written from Shasta, Shasta County, California, and it is full of facts:

Dear Brother: After my best respects to you, I wish to inform you that I am well at present. I have nothing particular to write you.

I left home on the 8th day of April, 1850, for California, to cross the plains. There were thirteen of us started together. We left the Missouri River on the 11th day of May, for the Indian country.

That is the most beautiful country that I have ever seen in my life. The best land, and it lies the best, only it lacks for timber.

The road was full of wagons as far as I could see. There were thousands of people on the road to California. We had the most beautiful weather all the way. We had but two rains on us. We travelled two or three hundred miles without seeing any timber. We had to make use of buffalo dung to cook with.

We killed some buffalo and some antelope and saw some of all kinds of game.

We crossed the Rocky Mountains on the 19th day of June, and it was so cold that we had to put on our overcoats and mittens. The snow was about ten or twelve feet deep in places.

We continued our journey to the California mountains which we reached about the last of July. The snow on them was from twelve to fifteen feet deep for about one mile.

We crossed the plains with a mule team. We landed in the gold mines on the 9th day of August

I have made nine hundred dollars since the first day of April.

There is plenty of gold in this country for all of us that are here if we knew where to find it. It takes hard work to find it.

I expect to stay here until next fall I left my family in Missouri. I cannot tell you how they are for I have not heard from them lately. When I am at home I live in the south part of Missouri. It is very warm there. Wheat gets ripe there from the 25th of May to the first of June. Our market for wheat is St. Louis. Other produce we market close to home as I bought land one or two miles from the Mississippi River near a steam boat landing. We can sell all the wood off our land as we clear it and get the money for it.

I suppose you would like to know what sort of country this is that I am in. It is a very rough country especially in the mining country. The Sacramento Valley is a most beautiful place for farming but it does not rain from the first of May until November. Flour is twenty-five cents a pound. Pork forty cents, beef twenty-five cents, potatoes twenty-three cents a pound.

The most that I have made in one day is thirty-four dollars.

So nothing more at present. I want you to write me how you all are doing. I remain your well wisher until death.

JAMES McLAUGHLIN.

The writer of the above letter stayed in the gold country about the time that he mentioned in his letter and came back home with money enough for all business purposes.

It seems to us that for pure news value that the letter assays very high. The preface to the effect that he had nothing particular to write about, is not borne out in the body of the letter.

Another thing that we like about the letter is that he did not seem to know that there were any hardships in crossing the plains. It was all in a days work. They lived on the country and went along. The fact that the way is marked with graves and the bones of dead horses and oxen, is due to the fact that so many took that way across the country that a percentage was bound to fall by the wayside.

Now comes the day when the palatial trains go thundering across the country with all the comforts of a home, and the average man recoils from the idea of the hardships of the trip. In the old days they went on for months and thought nothing of it. Nothing in particular to report Just an Odyssey, that is all. Just another case of Jason and the Golden Fleece.

One of the strong, steadfast men of the century departed this life when Senator Boise Penrose succumbed to the common fate. For many years he has been a ruler of the great state of Pennsylvania. Is is vain that men plan the equality of man. There is no such thing. Men are raised up who naturally take command and if they are wise they keep it. The safety of the country depends upon it. Penrose was such a man. He had that element of greatness that is so hard to recognize or define that made him the trusted leader year after year for more than a generation. Safe, conservative and just, he thought for the crowd and the crowd followed him.

He was a giant in size. He was not an eloquent man. He was not brilliant. He never said a wise thing, nor never did a foolish one. He had the good of the country at heart and he acted for the best according to his lights. It was not according to the ideas that have been given us. We cannot remember when we ever agreed with any policy that Penrose favored but that did not matter. We knew always that these differences of opinion broke no bones, and that such details did not threaten the existence of the nation. What comforted us all in his public career was the thought that here was an American in a high place in the government of our country who stood like the rock of Gibraltar, to support our plan of law and order and that as long as there were such men as Penrose on guard that the country was safe.

We are not sure that we are making our meaning clear. But certainly you must have been thoughtless if you have never relied upon the honor of a political enemy. We can fight our political battles for preference and for management, but that of national life is a thing apart. The great thing is to know that every time there have been given such men whose presence was a bulwark and a strength to the perpetuity of our institutions. And few men have had such continuous periods of public service.

As a young man, the Senator was well known to the people of this county, for he liked to come to the headwaters of Greenbrier River and hunt. But the "improvements" did not improve the country for him and he ceased to come here when the county lost much of its charm when it became the field for big industrial developments Then he went to the Rocky Mountains, and in those early days, he would send for Granville Keller, a noted hunter of this county, and in this way the people of the county kept in touch with him in a personal way.

We did not know the Senator personally. We have often roosted in the gallery of the Senate chamber and seen him on the floor. And one time when we walked with the multitude that is in evidence during the rush hours of Broad Street Station, in Philadelphia, we met him face to face, and he reached out his hand and shook hands, and passed on in the throng. He towered above that crowd.

His people seem to have had some difficulty in carrying out his express wishes in regard to a quiet funeral. The whole country seemed to seek a way to show honor to the chieftain But his instructions were positive and they were not to be disregarded.

"An old man broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!"

It is well known that a blue grass field will eventually turn into a poverty grass pasture, a circumstance much to be regretted. But it has not been so clear as to why it does so. Blue grass land in its natural state may be a million years in the making and yet after thirty or forty years as a pasture, the hated poverty grass will make its appearance and our cake is dough.

We remember that we accepted a well wrought theory some years ago that the cause of this change was from the ravages of grubs which destroyed the roots of the grass and allowed the poverty grass to get a start. And the remedy was skunks, and yet more skunks. Turn loose the skunks of war to work havoc on the grubs.

But now it has come to light that it is the harmless and necessary steer which is to blame. The steer fattens on the pastures and when he is some forty months of age he is a big fat sleek animal, the pride and joy of the farm. And some sweet day he goes to the scales and walks away with his new owner, looking as meek and lowly as a lamb, and yet that steer carries away with him, over the hills and far away, just one hundred pounds of lime from the acres that he was raised upon. It is true that the intentions of the farmer were none too good as to the ultimate destiny of the steer. From the moment of his birth he was doomed to violent death. But as he withdraws his valued carcass from the blue graas pastures he takes the hundred pounds of lime which he has assimilated and that lime can only be put back by direct action.

It is admitted that certain of the most desired grasses cannot be grown without lime in the soil, and that is particularly true of blue grass, the finest grass in the world.

Year after year the steers take the lime out of the soil until the blue grass begins to fail and then it is up to the land owner to give back to the land that mysterious chemical that we know as lime. It is hard to tell just what the crops do with the lime, but it is no doubt that it is an alkali, and that it neutralizes and sweetens land that is sour. Land that has too much acid. And beyond that they say that lime converts carbonate of potash in the soil into sulphate of potash, which change enables the plant life to feed upon what would otherwise be stubbornly retained by the soil.

There is no doubt the use of lime on land has the desired effect. Put it on grass land and the observer can see the difference in the color of the grass for a mile. There are two schools in regard to the application of lime. One holds to pulverized limestone which has an action of the soil mild and beneficent extending over many years and making permanent changes. The other is the air-slaked burned lime man who wants what he wants and when he wants it, and gets the full effect of the dose the first year. The two schools might be likened to the difference between the drinkers of the old days, when some toned down the dose with water and others insisetd on taking the whiskey straight.

Years ago in this county there was little lime burned. The Big Lime showed up the full length of the county some six hundred feet in thickness. Lime was needed occasionally make mortar to build chimneys and to plaster rooms. Then the accepted method of supplying a few bushels of lime was to cut logs yoke up the oxen, build a big log heap, putting on broken bits of limestone rock gathered up in the pasture and reduced with a sledge hammer. The log heap was set on fire and when it was ashes there was a heap of limestone apparently not very much the worse for its firery experience, But after a time in the air the rocks would crumble and the lime was there.

Then came the custom of making a heap in a more scientific way. A layer of wood, then a layer of coal, and a layer of limestone around a flue made of boards in the center, and the whole covered over with earth well rounded up and patted down. This was set on fire and allowed to burn itself out, a matter of some days. And then if the heap his been well constructed the farmer has all kinds of lime at a very reasonable outlay. The only money investment usually is the coal.

But a good many farmers do not have the faith that is necessay to burn such heaps. They are afraid that it will not turn out well.

But it is the prime duty of the agriculturists to drill the necessity of lime, and yet more lime, into the consciousness of the land owners. A man said that what Ohio most needed was a shower of lime that would cover the state to the depth of an inch or more.

Limestone is the favorite road building material in this section and where ever it is used and the road is on a hillside, the fields soon show the effects of wash from the road Many a poor field has been turned into a rich one by public improvements.

The freight rates of late years have been a very serious drawback to the commercial lime in this part of the country. So far they have proved to be practically prohibitive but some relief may be looked for soon

At this place there is a big tannery that uses a lot of lime to make a wash in which hides are placed so that the hair will come off and hasten the process of tanning. This lime when it is removed from the vat has about the consistency of mortar and it is piled into a big heap at the end of the main tannery building. The tanning company sell it at twenty-five cents a ton. It was early demonstrated by such farmers as Withrow McClintic and E. H. Williams that it would make land naturally hump itself. George Edgar took some of it as far as the Levels. It has in it blood, hair, manure, lime, and any other odds and ends that may be hanging to or around a hide Somebody said that in lime content it was about fifty per cent strength. There was a whaling big pile of it at the beginning of the fall season but it has all been hauled awy. Your Uncle Nat got one hundred and thirty-two wagon loads as a starter. They say if you turn it under in the wet state that it forms in balls that are indestructible. But if it is heaped up and allowed to stand for some months it gets rid of the water and pulverizes. When it is hauled to the field it looks like a bed of mortar. Great gobs of it fall in the road but in two days by the sun these dry and are reduced to powder.

Let there be lime.

THE TROUTLAND REFUGEE

By DOUGLAS McNEILL

Over winter a timber company had been busy erecting mills and tanneries in the wilderness, and with the going of the snows a deluge of sawdust and hemlock ooze swept down upon the finny folk of the lower river.

From his lurking place among the bowlders of a deep eddy, the Monarch of the Katakan watched the gradual transformation of his world.

When, on a morning, the first stray bits of sawdust started percolating through the dark crevices, the big brook trout sallied forth to the open pool and "nosed" inquisitively at the mysterious trespassers; but before the sun was high enough to warm the waters of the eddy, a myriad of the tiny invaders drove the Monarch into the deepest recesses of the rocks.

Gradually the clean white pebbles of the river-bed took on a tinge of black At noon when the sun shone brightest, the discolored waters of the eddy were somber as in a dim, unearthly twilight. Delicious minnows no longer flitted among the bowlders; quarrelsome crawfish were gone; even the green river moss took on that ominous shroud of purple.

By day and by night the tannic acid bit the sensitive tissues of his throat. Hunger gnawed desperately, but, if the big trout ventured from his shelter in quest of food, the harsh particles of sawdust tortured his tender gills.

A great fear crept upon the lonely dweller of the eddy, Longer by two inches and heavier by half a pound than any of his acquaintances, he feared no denizen of his world; but the blackened rocks, the unearthly sunshine, and the somber atmosphere of the polluted waters were beyond his ken. He felt himself in the clutch of the Unknown, and was terribly afraid.

One day as he lay peering fearfully forth from his accustomed cranny, something touched the Monarch's side. Like a flash he veered into the open water, and whirled to face the invader.

But no enemy showed itself! Presently the big brook-trout swam back and peered dubiously into the crevice. Something moved in the dark shadows, and the bloated, distorted body of a dead brook-trout, large almost as the Monarch himself, floated out from the cranny!

For an instant he lay rigid and still, watching the gruesome thing that floated down upon him, then, with frenzied stroke of tail and fin, he fled from the eddy.

Despite the whirling drifts of sawdust the Monarch plunged straight into the current. And why upstream? The God of men and fishes taught him!

Once away from the sheltering bowlders, he saw desolation everywhere. In the murky riffles hundreds of his tortured fellows struggled impotently with the current. The shoals and weed-grown eddies were charnel-places where loathsome dogfish and consciousless mud-turtles wrangled with the dead.

On an evening, later by two days than the flight from the plague-stricken eddy, a giant brook-trout emerged from the polluted waters of the larger stream, and made his way slowly over a pebbly bar into the Little Katakan.

Now, this tributary of the Katakan was a large creek, which drained the the great wooded cove to the westward. Seventy yards away, at the further side of the narrow valley, the stream plunged down a granite ledge, and thence crept across the level bottom to the river. And, but for a little pool at the foot of the ledge, this seventy-yard stretch of flat water was extremely shallow—too shallow by far to serve as a domicile for a big brook-trout.

But the water was clear and pure; moreover it teamed with soft-bodied crawfish, so in the narrow pool the Refugee halted over night to feast and rest.

The ozone of the mountain torrent made the fatigued wanderer oversleep. The sun arose above the tallest pine trees, and still he did not reveal himself. The frost melted from the fallen leaves; the robins chirped in the beechwood; a school of minnows and fingerling played hide-and-seek in the deepest part of the shallow pool. The trance of Spring was on the wilderness.

Suddenly the tiny fishes fled in a perfect flutter of terror, for they beheld something, the like of which they had not seen before in their mortal lives. The monarch swam forth boldly from the shadow of the ledge, and, with sudden, majestic swoop, came down to the middle of the pool

And there was new magic in his movements, and new luster on those shimmering sides.

Ignoring the panicky fingerlings. he proceeded to acquaint himself with his environments. Keeping well out of the shallow water, he circled the pool many times. His movements were deliberate and inquisitive. Immediately above the pool was the twenty-foot ledge down which the mountaim stream rushed to the level, and this rapid received most careful scrutiny.

Time and again he turned his broad gray side against the riffle and lay motionless, as though to feel the volume of water and the weight of the swift current.

And the Monarch was learned in the accumulated lore of Troutland's generations. While he had never passed the ledge, he knew that beyond it an abundance of pure water danced along in the shadow of the pines. But what he did not know was that the small trout inhabiting the upper reaches of the Little Katakan were carried there in buckets by civilized men; for though many had tried, never in all the world had brook-trout reached the crest of that granite wall.

By times he rioted about the pool as though hilarous with the very joy of living; but always he returned to swim anxiously to and fro at the foot of the plunging rapids. And who knows but that in the folk-lore of Troutland, there be traditions, how in the long ago, other monarchs of that kingly line tried granite barriers, only to be thrown back, mangled, upon the jagged rocks.

Finally he drifted with the current away from the pool, over the pebbly bar and down to the very edge of the polluted river.

In the shallow pool by the ledge he would be exposed to certain attack from fishing-eagles and prowling otters. Almost he was inclined to venture a return to his old-time cranny in the eddy There was a curious movement among the blackened rocks, and the Monarch peered closer. A water-snake was devouring a distempered brook-trout, and the poor victim shuddered in its captor's jaws.

Then it was that the lithe gray body pulsed with motion. The Monarch raced back with great splashing over the pebbly bar. Without pause he swept through the pool, throwing the forgetful minnows into a panic as he passed.

This time he approached the rapid, not sidewise, but with "head on" to the current. At the very foot of the rock he lay an instant stock-still.

Then there was an almost imperceptible, but ever increasing flutter of that broad tail, and—miracle of motion—the shimmering body of gray and scarlet rose against the plunging current until the twenty vibrant inches of brook-trout seemed leaning against the ledge. Then the water boiled with the enrgy of driving fins. There was an arrowy glint of silver at the granite's very crest, a tiny spray sparkled in the sunlight and pattered down to the pool. The Troutland Refugee, exultant and full of joy, was racing westward in the shadow of the pines.

SITLINGTON

Spring weather prevails, and the mud is knee deep. Henry Ford is still chugging the mail back and forth between Sitlington and Dunmore, but it takes lots of his muscle and tries his shoal to crawl through the mud.

Ernest Campbell still does a little jitney business once in a while for a "Half Dollar" we were always under the impression that a Jitney was a Nickel, and a Nickel was five cents, but Ernest says a Jitney is a Ford and a Ford is a Half Dollar if you want to go to Dunmore with him.

Hunter Adams writes from Kansas City, Mo., where he is taking a course in automobile repairing with Sweeney Schools that he expects to complete his training and leave for home the latter part of this month.

Wirth Nottingham, his son Carl, and Robert Walker left for Kansas City, Mo., Monday to take Sweeneys Course in automobile fixing. The three automobiles in Sitlington should be well taken care of when these four men complete their training and return home.

Hunter Adams writes that what he don't know about a Ford hasn't been made yet.

William Jones is contemplating the addition of a ten acre tract to his Rabbit Farm, he has about one hundred bunnies and needs more room for them

Forrest Ware, the Agent's son, fell off the Baggage truck Thursday and painfully bruised his nose and mouth.

Charley Adams and Charley Ware installed a new pump in the town well Friday, this is a much needed improvement and assures the City of an adequate water supply.

David Weatherholt is doing a thriving business with his team plowing and hauling wood.

Our old friend, Bill Bailey from Stony Bottom, was up to see us Tuesday. We enjoyed reviewing the days of "Wilsony" with him, and congratulated him on living in a city of such prominence as Stony Bottom, it having been recently well advertised throughout the land for its industry and morality. We tried to learn who wrote the pitiless publicity but he refused to state.

W. R. Moore of the Buena Vista Hardwood Co. and the W. R. Moore Supply Co., is sojourning in Florida. to escape the fine Spring weather we are having.

C. P. Brown, traveling salesman for the New River Grocery Co. of Hinton who has headquarters at Hillsboro, just over the hill from Seebert, unloaded from the up train Friday with his sample case and usual smile.

The following prescription was handed us recently by a friend? for making home brew:

"Follow a Hop Toad 13 miles and gather the "hops" catch a Rattlesnake extract the "Pizen" from his fangs, add two gallons Laurel Leaves, three cans Red Devil Lye, one gallon Chloroform, and boil in Ice Water ten days, drink and await results." We were going to try it, but got a notice that our insurance Premium was due and realized we couldn't pay it, as Mr. Harding said we didn't need any Insurance anyway, that we were all going to "Normalcy" and when we got there no one would have any Insurance, not even of getting anything to eat and as it seems we are pretty near there, we will let the home brew alone until we get back somewhere near "Wilsony" and can get some more Insurance.
